PLANTING TIME—A number of officials were on hand last week to plant some of the 200,000 tulip and daffodil bulbs from the Netherlands which were given to the city by the state Dept. of Agriculture. Somerville artist Virginia Gunter will oversee the plantings as part of a Cambridge Arts Council public art project. On hand at Spaulding and Sly's Cambridgepark Drive development for the planting were, from the left, John Rousseau and Sam Altreliter of Spaulding and Slye, Agriculture Dept. Commissioner August Schumacher, Arts Council Chair Michael Padnose, Daniel Morley of the Cambridge Arts Council and Richard Daley of the Mass. Horticultural Society. (Staff photo by Carolyn Hine)

READING CORNER—Mayor Francis H. Duehay held a reception last week for Dr. Jeanne Chall, director of the Reading Clinic at Harvard University's School of Education, in honor of her achievements in reading research and thanking her for her work with Cambridge schoolchildren. Pond welcomes holiday season visitors

By Margaret W. Sisson
Special to the Chronicle

People have been drawn to Fresh Pond since the days when MIT was known as "Oyster Flats" and Indians stopped here to make their fall fishing camps before moving inland for winter.

In the 17th century, colonists claimed its shores for farmsteads and began to shape the pond to their needs. Its swamps were drained to create more dry land, it received the wastes from slaughterhouses, its ice was carted away to be sold in foreign ports, its shores were mined for clay and its waters were drawn off to serve the growing urban population.

At the turn of the century, naturalist William Brewster documented the exceptional bird life at the pond but bitterly lamented the destruction of the natural shoreline of marshy coves that accompanied Fresh Pond's transformation into a reservoir. Today the pond is only a suggestion of its former beauty and richness but its clear waters are still a magnet for people and wildlife.

In the spring and summer the thickets along the shore are alive with songbirds but as the leaves turn and fall, birds depart leaving the resident crows, starlings, and gulls to inhabit the grey landscape. By November, the pond's leafy shield is down and the roar of Fresh Pond parkway carries across the water. It is at this subdued time of year that a group of visitors from the northern hinterlands slip discretely into Boston: the bay ducks appear.

This year, they arrived the first week of November; a group of nearly 200 ducks, mostly Canvasbacks with a few dozen Scaup, Ring-necked Ducks and Coots. Most of the dabbling ducks, like the Mallard, that feed at the surface of small ponds have flown south. They leave when their shallow waters ice over on cold nights. But these bay ducks are divers and they can still find food on the silty bottom of the open pond.

The Canvasback and Lesser Scaup have spent the spring and summer raising their young in the lakes and ponds of the prairie lands of the Dakotas, north through Manitoba, Saskachewan and Alberta. The Ring-necked Duck breeds all across central Canada from the western provinces to Quebec. The Greater Scaup summer in Alaska and northwestern Canada. As their summer waters freeze over, these ducks head for the open waters along the Pacific coast or the Atlantic seaboard down through the Gulf states.

These travelers came from a vast continent to the north laced with rivers and lakes. They have flown thousands of miles to reach this spot where they now take their rest. Some will linger here until ice sets in, others will push on in a few weeks. In the meantime, we are hosts to these delegates from the northern wilds. What can they make of the din of traffic and the stream of people running around the shore? They seem oblivious to it all. To all, that is, except this person loitering at the water's edge with binoculars...I am watching a cluster of twenty Canvasbacks sleeping, folded into themselves, with their heads tucked around on their backs. When I look more closely I see that each has one red eye trained on me and the whole group is gliding away fixed in sleeping posture.

These Canvasbacks are elegant birds with their long straight bills, russet heads, bright white sides and black tails. When they are not resting, they are diving for submerged plants or scratching and preening. Like a dog going after fleas, they twist their heads to get a good scratch from their webbed foot. Then they dunk under water and rear up flapping their wings, coming down with a shake of the head and a shake of the tail. Their diving is a small miracle: they simply disappear, slipping into the water leaving nothing but a ring of water. Unseen, they swim 20 or 30 feet to the pond bottom, reappearing minutes later bobbing like rubber ducks in a tub. The dive that looks so easy is actually quite an effort. These animals are equipped for flight and floatation with hollow bones and airsacks, it is as if they were diving with life jackets on. But they have mastered the maneuver and are well designed for the challenge. The legs of diving ducks are attached far back on their bodies, making them powerful swimmers but even less equipped than the waddling dabblers to walk on land.

Canvasbacks are one of duck hunters' favorites being an especially tasty bird. The mainstay of their diet, wild celery and other aquatic plants, gives their flesh a fine flavor. Before these birds return to their breeding grounds next summer, 20 percent of them will have been killed by hunters and another 40 percent will have died from other causes including the great stress of migration.

Other ducks congregating in shallow parts of the pond are the Ring-necked Duck, Greater and Lesser Scaup and Ruddy Ducks. The eastern bay next to the parkway rotary is their favorite area. A small slate-black bird with a white bill, the Coot, swims along the periphery of the flock, pumping its head back and forth as it paddles about restlessly looking for scraps of food the ducks have dislodged below and diving for water weeds itself.

Other dignitaries visit on occasion. A pair of Hooded Mergansers are gliding along in deeper water amidst the whining gulls. These dapper little birds sporting showy crests travel alone or in small groups and summer in sheltered backwaters of the Mid-West and Great Lakes region. Like other mergansers, they are talented fish-catchers, but they also eat quantities of crustaceans and insects.

A few sea ducks also pause at Fresh Pond: the Common Goldeneye, the Bufflehead and the Oldsquaw. The sea ducks are a tough lot that nest in the boreal forests of northern Canada. The Oldsquaw summers in the Arctic and winters off the North Atlantic coast. It is the finest diver of all the ducks, capable of plunging 150 feet below the surface.

To the naked eye, ducks are just specks on the water. But take a look through binoculars and these dark figures come to life in dramatic colors. Through glasses, grey waters turn bottle green and ripples glint appealingly in the light.

Looking at these birds draws you into another world, to unknown lakes in the north woods, to remote times before people were here to notice them. There is a piece of wilderness here in the middle of the city, at Fresh Pond in November, flown in by these visitors from the North.

'Keep rent control'

When eight candidates for the city council in the recent election report at most only one or two contributions of $500 or more to their campaign funds, and another candidate reports among his contributions 17 of $1000 each, and when that candidate is strongly opposed to rent control in Cambridge, and mopst of his big contributors live outside Cambridge, it seems pretty plain that there are people interested in breaking rent control here in order to buy large Cambridge residents to make large profits.

Rent control certainly has its defects, but it is the only system I have heard of that can help people of moderate and alow incomes hold on to their homes. Cambridge has a very unusual housing problem because of the pressure of many thousands of young people who attend Harvard, Radcliffe, MIT, Tufts, Lesley, BU, Boston College, Northeastern, and many of these students like Cambridge so well that they want to stay on for another two, three or four years while they undertake professional training to become lawyers, doctors, teachers, etc., etc. If we lose rent control, houses will be bought, torn down, replaced by tall buildings, condominiums, row houses. That will mean that hundreds of our citizens will be turned out of their long-term homes, to go...where?

Besides the personal tragedies, that would involve losing that diversification of our people which is one of the delights of Cambridge.

Look out, Cambridge! Keep rent control.

Extra kindness

On November 25, a little boy was found, without shoes or a jacket, crossing Massachusetts Ave. just beyond Porter Square. The two policemen on duty, Officers Fusco and Gibson, brought the child to the Cambridge-Ellis School hoping he belonged there. He did not. The two officers were outstanding! What was potentially a very frightening situation for the little boy, became a very positive experience. Both officers were constantly in radio contact with the precinct while awaiting a missing persons report, they were also reassuring the child. We were tremendously impressed with the extra kindness, sensitivity and professional approach both men took in this situation.

Thanks to the Cambridge Police Department, and Officers Fusco and Gibson in particular for their caring response.

Ellen Kelley
Director, Cambridge-Ellis School

Thanks

To Chief Anthony Paolillo,

I wish to commend the action of three members of the Cambridge Police Department who answered my call for emergency assistance. On Wednesday evening, November 6, these officers, at my request, removed various protestors who were seeking to disrupt a public gathering of Cambridge Forum on the causes of criminal behavior. The three members of the Cambridge police force who came promptly and who acted with wisdom, decisiveness and restraint are Sergeant Mitchell Barbados and officers William Barnes and Louis Cherubino, Jr.

Creating a highly charged and potentially violent situation, a group which called itself the International Committee Against Racism tried to prevent our invited speakers from being heard. Even before the forum was to begin, they took over the public address system, harangued the audience by shouting and chanting slogans, refusing to stop when requested. Our city's police officers demonstrated both unmistakable firmness and due restraint as they removed one after another of the people who refused to stop disrupting the meeting and refused to leave of their free will.

Citizens of Cambridge deserve to know how wonderfully their police department acted to preserve free speech. They calmly entered a volatile situation and courageously but patiently did what needed to be done. This splendid performance of duty was long and enthusiastically applauded by our standing room only audience. We were able not ony to proceed with the program but to record the event for our weekly local and continental Cambridge Forum radio broadcast.

A vital part of my ministry of social responsibility at the First Parish in Cambridge (for 18 years) is serving as moderator of public forums on issues of the public interest. Never before have I had to ask our police to intervene in order to assure free speech at our church (which celebrates its 350th anniversary in just a few months). When I did have to call upon you for help, you made me newly proud that I live and work in the City of Cambridge.

Rev. Herbert F. Vetter
The First Church

Thanks

Through your columns, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all those who made possible the opportunity to serve on the Cambridge School Committee. I am deeply honored to be able to represent and serve the people of this city.

The beginning of this term will be marked with sorrow for the loss of Mr. Joe Maynard, with whom I looked forward serving on this body. I can only hope that I will be able to keep his memory as a reminder to be always compassionate and just.

School Committee member-elect

Thanks

Thanks to the MBTA Red Line whose workmen, there are no finer;
I am getting a bit tired, though, of a city dug halfway to China.

Thanks to Arthur D. Little whose smokestacks used to billow;
"Nothing dangerous going on here," says a former person, now an armadillo.

Thanks to Big Bill Walton, now a Cantabrigian;
He increases our World Champion hopes by more than just a smidgeon.

Thanks to Lavall Wilson, Boston's superintendent for future days;
His first administrative task was to give himself a hefty raise.

Thanks to the New England Patriots for emerging from their football stupor;
Last year was B.C. and Cotton, maybe this year is Pats and Super.

Thanks for the summit conference seeking peace among the races;
Let's hope the only arms allowed are squirt guns at twenty paces.

Thanks to the Latin football team, each player did his part;
They lacked the winning touch this year, but didn't lack in heart.

Thanks to Bill Cosby and Mary Lou Retton, there's nothing they won't sell;
I hear they've made a bid to advertise the first Dairy Queen in hell.

Thanks to Hurrican Gloria for giving us all that we could handle;
She brought romance back to people's lives by giving them dinner by light of candle.

Thanks to Mr. Ewing -- the Big Apple called and Patrick said, "I hear ya,"
But if the Knicks don't start to win some games, he'll be doing his slam dunking in Siberia.

Thanks to the Royal Couple whose visit was long overdue;
Besides playing polo and looking cute, what exactly do they do?

Thanks to Lenny Russell whose accomplishments are a mile-long list;
A gentleman whose presence will most assuredly be missed.

Joe believed in the beautiful boys and girls

It is a great honor to speak here today as representative of the school Joe Maynard loved and cared for so deeply.

Doris Partan

Achievement School is Joe Maynard's school. He believed in it and in the children it serves — kids from the projects, kids from the courts, runaway kids, delinquent kids, or just kids for whom school success is not easy, kids who want another chance, a chance to change the pattern of their lives. Joe Maynard gave them that chance. He made it his Number 1 priority to attend to the needs of these kids and their families. Joe Maynard made sure these kids had a school, a program that would succeed for them.

Poor children and poor families often have no power; they are voiceless. But with Joe Maynard as their champion, the Achievement School children had a strong voice, and he saw to it they got what they needed. "Listen, Super," he would say at the School Committee. "I don't talk in all that fancy language." Then he would go on and make his point very clearly, and finish with, "Super, you take care of those boys and girls in the Achievement School." Joe Maynard made his point. No false promises for him. Simple, direct, and immediate.

Joe Maynard spoke at every Achievement School graduation. Three years ago he was ill and needed assistance in getting up to the podium. But get there he did. This past June, he requested a lamp on the stage because his eyesight was poor and he wanted to read his speech. He might ask for suggestions about what to say. "No, Mr. Maynard," I'd tell him. "You don't need a speech. Just say what is in your heart," First would come the speech, carefully prepared and carefully read. Then he'd put down his speech and speak to the children — "the beautiful boys and girls," he called them. He would tell them how proud he was of them, how far they had come, and how very important it was to continue their education. And then he would end with, "God Bless You All."

Some of our Achievement School students and graduates are here with me today to honor Joe. I know he would be proud to see them here. Achievement School is Joe's school. I think of the students - all of them, as his children, and we, the teachers, as caretakers for him. His love, his faith, will continue to help us to help them.

Joseph E. Maynard died as he lived — taking care of Cambridge's needy children. A student at the Achievement School needed glasses but they were too expensive. He couldn't see the board or read his books. Joe's response was simple and direct. "Get that boy those glasses, Doris, and take it out of my personal account." The glasses came and I was just mailing off a letter of thanks this week. Joe will never get that letter. So, I am grateful to be here, and, on the behalf of countless children, to say once again, "Thank you, Joe."

Doris Partan, Teacher-in-Charge of the Achievement School at CRLS, delivered the above eulogy at the funeral of School Committee Member Joseph E. Maynard on Saturday.

Rev. Brown to leave Union Baptist for DC

THE REV. MELVIN BROWN will step down after ten years at the pulpit of the Union Baptist Church, the city's oldest black church, to serve in Washington, DC.

When Rev. Melvin G. Brown steps down from the pulpit of the historic Union Baptist Church in Cambridge on Sunday, December 15, he will have ended ten eventful years of fellowship, leadership, and service in the community, and will soon enter his new sphere of service in Washington, D.C.

Brown's pastorate of the oldest black church in Cambridge has been characterized by growth and change in the church and a deep investment in the community. He has served, at one time or another over the past few years, on the board of directors of the Cambridge Community Center, and the Cambridge Civic Unity Committee, and on the appeals board of the Cambridge Public Schools. His deep involvement in community affairs in Cambridge was perhaps best demonstrated by his work as chaplain for several years of the Cambridge Afro-American Police Officers Association.

Reuben Dottin, a former member of that organization, has ringing praise for Rev. Brown's contribution to the welfare of himself and his fellow officers:

"As black police officers in Cambridge, we had serious problems. Rev. Brown became involved in all issues relating to black police officers. He gave us the support we needed and was available any time - day or night. His moral support and prayers were really good for us."

Brown first served the church as minister of youth, a position from which he was called to serve as interim pastor from 1975 to 1978. He was formally installed as pastor in 1976. On the occasion of the celebration of his fifth anniversary as Union's pastor, a commentary in the Church Bulletin read in part: "We are proud to honor the young man whose five-year ministry to our congregation is defined by themes of wisdom, comfort, and joy. We, at Union, have learned to anticipate a ministry of wisdom through an erudite, scholarly, and always prayerful reflection on the eternal Word of God. In times of mourning, Rev. Brown's ministry of comfort always reaches through our tears and our personal griefs to provide a vision of the eternal promise of God through Jesus Christ. At worship, Rev. Brown's ministry of joy has enabled us, individually and as a body of believers, to experience the presence of the Holy Spirit. We thank God for our Pastor and look forward to continuing our prayerful support of him."

Under Brown's leadership, the church has increased its membership by over 20 percent and developed a widely-acclaimed music ministry. Singing groups such as the Faith Ensemble, and choirs like the Gospel Chorus, are in great demand throughout Massachusetts and the New England area. His religious leadership has also been evident in his service as vice president and later president of the United Baptist Convention of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire.

Associate Minister Cheryl Townsend Gilkes, reflects on the importance of Rev. Brown's support for women in the ministry. She said, "I can understand why God is calling him to Washington. While he was at Union two women were ordained — the first in the Church's history and a very special event in Baptist circles." One of these women, Rev. Kathleen M. Gatson currently serves as assistant pastor of Pilgrim Baptist Church in Minneapolis, Minnesota. The other, Rev. Gina Tillman-Young, is engaged in a ministry combining pastoral counseling and legal services in the Washington, D.C. area. Gilkes commented, "I will miss him. He opened many doors for me and coached me through them."

Union Baptist Church bids its formal farewell to its pastor and his family at a banquet to be held at the Hyatt-Regency Hotel in Cambridge, on Tuesday, December 10, at 6:30 pm. Brown preaches his farewell sermon at Union on Sunday, December 15.

Cub leaders end training

The newest leaders in the Cambridge Council Cub Scout program have completed their training program conducted at the Anna L. Lyons Scouting Serivce Center, One Scouting way.

The basic training course is designed to prepare a den leader to serve as a leader for a weekly meeting of Cub Scouts assigned to a Den by the Cub Scout organization. The Den consists of six young, eager, and energetic Cub Scouts who have entered the first phase of the Scouting program.

The course was conducted by Charles Kalina, a veteran Cub Scouting leader, with extensive experience at the Cub Scout program operating at Saint Peter's Church on Concord avenue. Kalina presented the basic information concerning the aims and methods of the Cub Scout program and discussed with the new den leaders the proper way to conduct a den meeting.

Den Leaders completing the training include Cheryl Lowe, Dora Harris, Jeanette Remeika, Helen Brown, John Case, Gail Percoco, and Faye LeCompte. Assisting with the ing course was Jackie Coffman, Cub Scout Roundtable commissioner for the Cambridge Council, Boy Scouts of Amercia.

The Cambridge Cub Scout program serves approximately 250 Cub Scouts in all areas of the city. Across the United States the Cub Scout program is one of the largest youth programs with approximately 1.6 million boys between 8 and 10 enrolled.

JEST-US plans Xmas festival

The Junior Enrichment Services for Teens (JEST-US) will sponsor a Christmas festival on Saturday, Dec. 14, at the Cambridge Family YMCA, 820 Mass. Ave., from 4 to 9 pm.

The festival is expected to be large. Catherine Queen, JEST-US director and coordinator for the Cambridge River Festival's Gospel Tent, has invited eight choirs and two soloists to present what she terms a "mini-Gospel Tent."

In addition, Santiago Maia and Alvin Daniels will read poetry.

Vendors will be there for Christmas shopping and a variety of food items will also be sold. Love the Clown will be on hand to present a spiritual performance.

Admission for the festival is $2 for adults and $1 for children. Proceeds will benefit the JEST-US modeling classes at the Cambridge Family Y, which are held on Fridays from 6:30 to 8:30 pm.

Queen says she decided to produce the festival to "bring back the true Christmas spirit."

"In addition to raising funds, our purpose is to put Christ back into Christmas."

For more information on the modeling classes or the festival, call 497-5056. Vendors are welcome at the festival.

Talk set on architecture of Harvard

"Harvard Architecture: Considering its Importance," is the subject of the lecture this Sunday at 3 pm at the Phillips Brooks House, Harvard University.

Sponsored by the Cambridge Historical Society, the lecture is to be given by Professor Margaret Henderson Floyd of Tufts University, who edited and completed "Harvard: An Architectural History," recently published by Harvard University Press.

Floyd finished the work begun by Bainbridge Bunting, who died in 1981. To Professor Bunting's chapters on Harvard architecture, Floyd added her own on Gropius, Radcliffe, the athletic facilities, and captions for such buildings as Graham Gund's guard house and James Stirling's Arthur M. Sackler Museum.

Floyd graduated from Wellesley College in 1953 and received her M.A. in 1956 from the University of New Mexico, where Bunting was on the faculty.

Robert Neiley, Cambridge architect and long a friend of both authors, will introduce Floyd. The lecture is free to the public.

CRLS to stage 'Lysistrata'

"Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." These words of Santayana reflect the underlying message behind the upcoming production of LYSISTRATA at Cambridge Rindge and Latin School.

Written in 412 B.C. by Aristophanes, the first and possibly greatest of comic writers, "Lysistrata" is a cautionary tale concerning a woman's strike for peace. This most perfectly constructed and continuously popular of comedies is true to Aristophanic form in its biting commentary on the society and politics of the playwright's times and, most importantly, the Peloponnesian War.

The plot centers around Lysistrata, the determined Athenian, who organizes and unites the women of the warring city-states of Greece to wage a strike against their bellicose men until all arms are laid aside. The playwright attempts to satirize his society's foolish bent toward annihilation by empowering his female characters to take matters into their own hands. Aristophanes' women employ strategies that are unorthodox but highly effective. Through uproarious farce and fantastic exaggerations, he dramatizes the absurdity of their real life parallels. Beneath the comic surface, however, lies a serious sociopolitical message embodied in the playwright's dream of salvation for his ravaged city and his confidence in the ultimate sanity of humankind.

While true to Aristophanes' words and intent, in the CRLS production, director Gerry Speca deftly mixes styles and periods to contemporize the message and highlight the similarities between ancient Greece and the modern world. Song, dance and rap are skillfully assimilated throughout the fast-paced production as the actors make their way around Richard J. Geffen's multi-leveled unit set. Choreography is by Barbara Ehrlich, lighting by Lucas Sussman, and costumes by Don Swanson.

The cast of "Lysistrata" is composed of a large number of multi-talented CRLS students. Carin Anderson plays Lysistrata, the determined woman who bravely opposes her male-dominated world and convinces the women of Athens and Sparta to join in her cause. Jessica Lynch plays Lampito, Heather Thompson plays Myrrhine, and Amatul Hannan plays Kalonike. Chris Albergo plays Kinesias, Myrrhine's husband, while Kevin Farrell and Derrick Bridgeman play public commissioners who attempt to squelch the rebellion. Other members of the ensemble who play a variety of roles include Jesse Flack, Sarah Maher, Jeff O'Bryant, Jenny Raskin, Michelle Holdt, Jonathan Burns, Rachell Sanel, Heloise Cabot, Matt Damon, Tori Hunt, Isabel Rodriques, Karla Greenleaf-MacEwan, Corina Hall, Jack Joseph, Matt Goldberg, Katherine Kirsch, Katy LaBrie, Margarite Mancini, Melissa Marotto, Adam Gulinello, Kurt Stubbins, Dorise Chase, Reyna Castillo, Anna Villarama, Chad Leith and Alex Gurevich.

"Lysistrata" opens in the CRLS Arts Center Theatre, 459 Broadway, on Friday, December 6 with additional performances on December 7, 12, 13 and 14. Curtain time is 7:30 pm. "Lysistrata" is a comedy without peer in the history of theatre and one of the most innovative productions to be staged at Cambridge Rindge and Latin School. For information and reservations call 498-9202.

Peterkin seeks pay hikes for assistants

By Vicki White
Staff writer

The two assistant superintendents of Cambridge schools will receive five percent pay increases, retroactive to July 1, if the school committee accepts Superintendent Robert Peterkin's recommendation.

The committee will consider the pay hikes on December 12 in a continuation of Tuesday's meeting which was recessed until that date.

The proposed increases come 11 months after the committee granted Assistant Superintendents Oliver Brown, Joseph Sateriale and Richard Woodward 18 percent raises — an additional $9,062 annually — retroactive to July 1, 1984. Woodward recently retired from the school department.

The superintendent's salary is also up for consideration by the committee. However, the committee has not released any specifically proposed percentage increases in Peterkin's salary. Currently, Peterkin earns $65,000 a year in his role as superintendent.

"I don't want to appear to be gouging the system to increase my assistants' salaries," Peterkin said this week. He said that the 18 percent pay hikes in January were because "they had not received raises for two years or better. At that point there were others (in the school department) who made more money than them."

If the committee accepts the five percent increases for the assistant superintendents, their salaries will go up $2,900. Currently, the assistant superintendents earn $58,500 a year — 90 percent of Peterkin's salary.

Peterkin described the five percent increases currently up for consideration by the committee as "more normal, smaller increases" when compared with the considerably larger pay hikes granted in January.

The raises will be retroactive to July 1, Peterkin said, because the salaries should have been renegotiated before the start of fiscal year 1986 in July.

Before the committee went into executive session to discuss the raises Tuesday, Cambridge Teachers Association (CTA) President Susan Noonan-Forster noted that if the assistant superintendents' salaries are hiked by five percent, they will have received nearly $12,000 in raises in two years.

Noonan-Forster warned the committee what giving raises to the assistant superintendents would mean to future contract negotiations with Cambridge teachers. "I hope you understand that that five percent is going to be translated into a much higher percentage relative to what we will be expecting for the teachers who do the work of teaching the children," she said.

The last salary package for the CTA was approved in January, granting teachers a three percent raise retroactive to September 1, 1984, a two percent raise effective January 1, 1985 and a five percent increase September 1, 1985.

In an interview, Peterkin said Noonan-Forster was accurate in her figures, but said her comments "do not speak to the history" of the assistant superintendent salaries. Peterkin said his salary recommendations for his assistants are "consistent with the raise given to the teachers."

The school committee took no formal action on the assistant superintendents' salaries in its meeting Tuesday, but did discuss the pay hikes behind closed doors in executive session.

Coming out of executive session, School Committee Vice Chair Glenn Koocher — chairing the committee in Mayor Francis Duehay's absence — called upon Peterkin to provide the committee with his evaluations of his assistants so that pay hikes may be tied to job performances.

School Committee Member Fred Fantini requested that Peterkin report to the committee salaries of superintendents and assistant superintendents in other communities.

The committee delayed further discussion of the salary matter until December 12.

City nurses stage informational picket

By Tom Ehrenfeld
Staff writer

An informational picket line staged by members of the Massachusetts Nursing Association who work at Cambridge Hospital on Monday emblemized the differences still standing between the nurses and the city of Cambridge.

With over five months having elapsed since the end of the last contract, the city and the nurses are now bringing in an independent "fact-finder" to attempt to resolve the differences which have kept them from signing a new contract.

Representatives from the MNA have said that the city's latest proposal would result in a nine percent salary cut, which is unacceptable due to other city employees receiving a five percent salary raise.

"The issue is that management wants us to take a pay cut and has been insistent upon that since the beginning of negotiations," said Associate Director Patricia Flynn of the MNA. "Every other union in the city got five percent — and every other employee in the hospital got five percent for 1985-1986."

A handout from one of the approximately 75 picketers on Tuesday read: "the city of Cambridge should not attempt to avoid possible financial loss by reducing the pay of working women who are supporting their families."

Yet labor attorney Philip Collins of the firm of Holland, Crowe, and Drachman, who is negotiating for the city of Cambridge, said in an interview this week, "It is not fair to say we have offered a pay cut in absolute salary. Their salaries will be higher — but their work week will be higher as well."

"The issue in how many days a week will they work. Will they work five days a week as the rest of the nurses in Massachusetts and other employees of Cambridge?" asked Collins, who also said, "We're going for that real radical proposition called the five-day work week."

Currently the nurses are on a 36-hour work week. According to a fact sheet from the city, nurses with four to five years experience earn $29,565 annually, not including cash differentials.

Ryan stated the current starting salary for nurses is $11.49 per hour minimum and $15.74 maximum, rates which would go down hourly to $10.59 and $14.41 under the city proposals. The weekly salary would however increase.

Conran's moves to city

The lease has yet to be signed, but it appears that Conran's, a store that, "appeals largely but not restrictively to young professionals," will replace the Massachusetts avenue Sears, a store that some would say does not appeal to young professionals.

Sears will close its doors to customers December 31, according to Mary Strahlendorf, Sears' spokesperson for the Eastern region, and will vacate the premises sometime in January. Employees of the Cambridge store, however, have said the store will close December 21.

According to Strahlendorf, Sears "couldn't make appropriate arrangements with the landlord" to renew the lease and remain in the Mass. ave. building. Strahlendorf said finances — including the rent figure — were a factor in Sears vacating the building.

No date has been set for Conran's to move in as no lease has been signed, according to Conran's spokesperson Pat Grabel.

Conrans's is "a complete home-furnishing store," that sells such items as kitchenware, office supplies, toys, gifts and children's furnishing, according to Grabel.

Conran's was attracted to the Cambridge because it is an area "where we have an audience," said Grabel. She said the store appeals to young professionals "but we don't like to categorize our customers."

One area resident lamented the passing of Sears, citing the impending arrival of Conran's as further evidence that Cambridge is turning upscale. Residents have, in the past, expressed concern that increased property values and the accompanying increased taxes, will drive long-term residents from the area.

Kennedy enters race

former State Rep. Melvin King, Boston; Cambridge attorney and legal counsel to the Democratic State Committee James Roosevelt; Boston attorney Vincent McCarthy; and antinuclear activist Carla Johnston of Cambridge. Johnston is the only announced candidate to date, other than Kennedy.

"I think it's going to change the dynamic of the election quite a bit," said Vallely of Kennedy. "I think he's going to be the frontrunner.... I think he's going to winnow the field out."

"We already had one of the most interesting congressional elections in the country...now we'll have the most interesting," said Vallely.

Gallagher said that Kennedy's candidacy, "presents a formidable challenge to all of us." Yet he also emphasized his own plans to run, and said that he currently has 1300 volunteers working on his campaign.

"The frontrunners are dubbed by the media — and he has been so dubbed," said Gallagher.

Johnston said, "I think the terms 'frontrunner' 9 or 10 months before the election are meaningless.... I'd rather be the frontrunner on Labor Day 1986 than now."

Johnston also said that Kennedy's run may alter the media coverage of the race, a fact borne out by the attention his announcement drew to the race.

"I hope it is a campaign of substance," said Johnston. "I would be interested in the candidate being based on substance and not on labels and names, and not the candidates being sold like soap."

Echoing the concern that the campaign focus on issues was Boston attorney Vincent McCarthy, who said, "The issue of Joe's candidacy will not boil down to his being a carpetbagger or not. The issue will come down to which of the candidates is really going to pay atention to the interests of the people of the eighth congressional district."

The "carpetbagger" question has already arisen because while Kennedy and his wife own a house in Brighton, they reside in Marshfield. Under state law, however, a congressional candidate does not have to live in the district. However, in his successful bid to unseat Republican US Rep. Margaret Heckler three years ago, Barney Frank, who had represented Back Bay and Beacon Hill in the State House, moved to Newton.

The question of finances has been raised by many of the candidates who say they are in the race. Galvin held a press conference on Tuesday to propose that all candidates maintain a personal expenditure limit on their finances of $500,000.

Galvin said this could keep the election "PAC-free (Political Action Committee-free), as well as focus the campaign more on issues than on personality.

He added, "I don't have access to $2 or $3 million."

Vallely said of Galvin's proposal, "that's a strategy for failure. A 'give-up' strategy.

Bachrach, who has been campaigning for the seat for months and was, up until Wednesday, generally considered the frontrunner, said, "We are not terribly effected. The people that are less established will have more difficulty."

He admitted, however, that with Kennedy in the race, "it's going to be tough. Nobody ever thought we'd be in a race with millionaires."

"My sense is that everybody is going to talk bravely for the next few days. The real question is whether people think we are sufficiently viable to come and work with us and give us money," he said.

Also claiming that Kennedy will not alter his popularity is attorney James Roosevelt, who, as the grandson of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, knows something about "dynasty politics".

"I certainly won't be effected," he said. "I intend to make it a campaign of issues — not personalities. This opens up the possibility for some really important discussion of the future of the democratic party and the issues that are important to the people of the district."

Mel King, who ran unsuccessfully against Ray Flynn for mayor of Boston after serving in the State House, reiterated his intention to run for the seat. He said Kennedy's announcement "will make it an even broader campaign across the country," and that, "frankly I'm glad that he's on it."

Somerville's Mackey, a first-term legislator, said the announcement by Kennedy has caused him to "take a look" at the race. "Certainly the equation for the election has changed. We're going to have to take some polls and make a decision," he said.

While much attention will be focused on the Democratic fray between now and the September 1986 primary, there are also two unannounced Republican candidates who are also mulling the impact of Kennedy's announcement. They are Clark C. Abt, president of the Cambridge consulting firm of Abt Associates, and Dr. Mildred Jefferson, an outspoken abortion foe who ran unsuccessfully in the past for governor.

When asked about campaigning as a Republican in a traditionally Democratic district, Abt replied, "I think the main issues in the election are economic prosperity and quality of life and safety from war and crime. I think those issues are more important than party differences."

Non-candidates were also considering the impact of Kennedy's decision to run.

Cambridge City Councilor David Sullivan, who is a member of the Democratic State Committee and not a candidate in the race, said of Kennedy, "Obviously he's a serious contender and moves straight to the top of the line. Some may be concerned that he hasn't lived in the district and has no particular connection to issues in the district, but that shouldn't be a factor in a congressional race."

Sullivan, who represents the Suffolk and Middlesex District along with Johnston on the state committee, says he has not made a commitment to any candidate so far and doesn't plan to do so in the near future.

Kennedy has worked for the last seven years as president of the Citizen's Energy Corporation, a non-profit group which assists low and moderate income persons in heating their homes in the winter.

His decision to join comes several months after his 24-year-old cousin, Theodore — son of the Massachusetts senator and a recent Somerville resident — considered running for the seat yet decided against it.

Attention has been focused on the race not merely for the diversity of the candidates involved, but because the seat is rich with historical significance. John F. Kennedy held the seat directly before O'Neill; he was preceded by James Michael Curley.

The Eighth District includes Cambridge, Somerville, Watertown, Belmont, Waltham, Arlington, the Back Bay, Beacon Hill, the South End, East Boston, Charlestown, Allston and Brighton.

The election will be held next November, but given the traditional Democratic registration in the district and the fact that it has been held for most of this century by Democrats, many members of the state's majority party believe the election will, in fact, be decided by the outcome of the September primary.

("Somerville Journal" reporter George Donnelly contributed to this article.)

8th CD candidates to discuss defense issue

"Defense: Which Future for America?" is the focus of an upcoming candidates luncheon co-sponsored by Cambridge Forum and the League of Women Voters of Cambridge.

At least seven of the candidates seeking to represent the Eighth Congressional District will share the podium on December 12 at the Harvard Club on One Federal Street in downtown Boston.

This forum seeks to clarify the views of the various candidates, both Democratic and Republican, in the areas of national defense and security. Thus far two Republicans and eight Democrats have officially filed election papers in the campaign to succeed House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill in the much-coveted Eighth Congressional District.

On the Republican side are Clark C. Abt, head of the Cambridge-based consulting firm Abt Associates, and Dr. Mildred Jefferson, an anti-abortion activist.

Democrats who have entered the contest include State Sen. George Bachrach (D-Watertown), and State Reps. Thomas Gallagher (D-Allston), William Galvin (D-Boston), Joseph Mackey (D-Somerville), and Thomas J. Vallely (D-Beacon Hill). Also running are Democratic State Committeewoman Carla Johnston, and Boston Attorneys Vincent P. McCarthy and Cambridge Attorney James Roosevelt, grandson of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The program also continues the League of Women Voters' tradition of sponsoring unbiased, educational voters' events.

Reservations for this noon luncheon can be made by calling Cambridge Forum at 867-9644. The luncheon is open to members of Cambridge Forum ($16) as well as to the public ($21). Checks must be received by noon on December 10 to confirm a reservation.

CITY OF CAMBRIDGE
In the Year One Thousand, Nine Hundred Eighty-Five
AN ORDINANCE

In amendment to an ordinance entitled "The Zoning Ordinances of the City of Cambridge".

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Cambridge as follows:

The Zoning Map accompanying ordinance passed to be ordained September 26, 1977 entitled "The Zoning Ordinances of the City of Cambridge" is hereby amended on a petition by the Northern Massachusetts Avenue Urban Design Advisory Committee to amend the text of the Zoning Ordinances of the City of Cambridge by creating a new subsection 3.13 - Temporary Height Limitation - Northern Massachusetts Avenue which would establish a height limitation of 50' in those business and residential districts abutting Massachusetts Avenue which were previously subject to the LaRose Rezoning Petition. The limitation, which would be in effect until May 1, 1986, would affect the area along Massachusetts Avenue from the Cambridge Common north to just beyond Richard Avenue near the Arlington town line. Most of the Business C district in Porter Square would be unaffected.

Passed to a second reading at the City Council meeting held on November 25, 1985 and on or after December 16, 1985 the question comes on passing to be ordained.

ATTEST:-
Paul E. Healy, City Clerk

NOTE: Pursuant to the provisions of General Laws, Chapter 40, Section 32A, Tercentenary Edition, the ordinance as aforesaid which exceeds in length eight octavo pages of ordinary book print may be summarized for publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the city with the further provision that said Zoning Ordinance may be examined and obtained at the City Clerk's Office during office hours and that any objection to its invalidity by reason of any defect in the procedure of adoption may only be made within ninety days after the posting or the second publication.

Booters earn berth in state tourney

Three wins in their last four games gave Cambridge Rindge and Latin's Boys Soccer Team an 11-5 regular season record and cemented their third place finish in the Suburban League.

After romping over the entire high school population of Quincy (Quincy High, 7-0, and North Quincy, 5-0), the CRLS Booters entered the last week of the season with third place guaranteed and with an outside chance at second or even first.

They were not anticipating great problems with Brockton, though, and this was a mistake. Brockton had lost to CRLS, 5-1, the first time around, and they came to town on October 29 determined to even the score and to thereby qualify for the State Tournament. After the scoreless first half, Cambridge couldn't clear the ball out from in front of their goal, and Brockton went ahead, 1-0.

After sagging considerably, CRLS finally came to life and started to put on some offensive pressure. Right winger Keith Mascoll passed across in front of the goalmouth to left winger Oscar Fernandez. Fernandez's first shot was blocked by the Brockton goalie, but he pushed in his rebound to tie the score. Moments later, though, the Cambridge defense was caught backing up again, and they gave up their second goal. Nemesio Braz tied it once more, this time on a penalty kick. Then, Brockton scored two unanswered goals, before a late CRLS score by Mascoll made the final 4-3.

Fourth-place Brockton, it turned out, was on a week-long rampage. They later upset Brookline and knocked them out of the co-championship with Newton, which bumped CRLS down to third place.

Two days later, Cambridge hosted Waltham to end the regular season, and they showed they had learned their lesson. They dominated play from the opening kickoff, and after thirty minutes, the score was CRLS 3, Waltham 0.

Nemesio Braz demonstrated why he is Cambridge's all-time leading scorer by scoring all three goals, on two nifty assists from Rene Novoa and one from Oscar Fernandez.

In the second half, the seniors took over. Playing for the last time at Donnelly Field, goalie Cedric Lawson, defenders Roy Charles and John Serrano, midfielders Will Holshouser and Kenroy Laidlaw, and attackers Keith Mascoll and Fernando Costa, together with Braz, toyed with Waltham and brought the regular season to a satisfying close. They were greatly aided, of course, by underclassmen Joseph Entin, Mark Entin, Mark Nichols, Josh Barholomew, Rene Novoa, Salazar Silva, Eddy Ramos, Mark McGovern, and Oscar Fernandez, all of whom will be back next year with plans to improve on this year's record.

At week's end, CRLS found themselves in the State Tournament for the fourth straight year. Seeded 16th, they played Lincoln-Sudbury in the first round on Tuesday. The winner of that game will play at Andover High School this afternoon.

Girls' track team zips past Newton

With the winds and temperatures causing havoc, it was a determined Cambridge Rindge and Latin girls' track team that easily disposed of a highly touted Newton North Squad last week at Fresh Pond.

The crowd arrived expecting a squeaker, only to see the Warriors win, 19-41, placing six runners in the top seven.

The most outstanding performance of the day was turned in by Frances Jarvis (17:46), as she lowered her own course record by 34 seconds to defeat an excellent runner in Magda Komitzes. Both runners had run side by side for the first mile and a half, but Jarvis turned on the burners at mid-course, losing Komitzes in the process.

Erin Murphy (19:20) and Kristin Smaby (19:20) had intelligent races as they ran stride for stride, giving Cambridge third and fourth places.

Personal bests were turned in by June Parks (20:13) and Gretchen Herold (20:20) as they dusted the competition right from the gun, earning them fifth and sixth places.

Also achieving a personal best was Kristin Stockard with an impressive seventh place finish (21:00).

Rounding out the Cambridge scoring with fine performances were Audrey Dobson (11th place, 22:28), Jennifer Entine (14th, 24:29), Kelly Trainor (16th, 24:57) and Kristin Hagen (17th, 27:30).

First annual softball dinner set

The Cambridge Softball Association will hold its first awards and social event on Friday, December 6, at the Mt. Auburn VFW, Huron avenue.

All players, coaches, sponsors, umpires and fans can obtain tickets for a hot or cold buffet, entertainment, dancing and prizes for $10.

Tickets may be picked up at 51 Inman St., Recreation Office. For further information call 498-9028.

"That's a matter for the city council — not the ABCC," he said in an interview this week. "My job is not to invalidate city council orders."

McDavitt also said that the cap in effect for Harvard Square — which was voted in the same night as the Ruggles denial and the Wursthaus approval — did not apply for Wursthaus because it is an outdoor establishment.

"This is an outdoor serving of alcoholic beverages — and we find a need for an outdoor serving of alcoholic beverages in Harvard Square," he said, adding: "our cap doesn't apply to outdoor serving of alcoholic beverages."

"I guess anyone who could come in and show that there is an extraordinary public need being fulfilled — than they could apply and have a better chance," he said. "It's public need that's the key. If you can show you offer something that's not there than you're in the ball park."

McDavitt added, "People who don't like the tables will seize any argument and grasp any argument. To say we're being inconsistent with the cap is being devious. That doesn't justify distorting what is otherwise a perfectly consistent policy."

Ruggles owner Jeffrey Starfield also said that the license commission was inconsistent in granting the Wursthaus an alcoholic beverages license while denying Ruggles a wine and malts license.

In its efforts to secure a license, Ruggles has appeared repeatedly before the commission, and even in court, previously bypassing the route of the ABCC. "This time around," says Starfield, "we're going through the correct route."

Starfield said that the commission has been capricious in enforcing the cap, as it has granted a license to the Charles Square Hotel — and now to the Wursthaus — since the cap went into effect.

"Every time they come up with something else, they find a strange new way to justify it," said Starfield.

In granting the license to the Wursthaus, both Paolillo and Scott said the outdoor tables may alleviate problems caused by "undesirables" who congregate on the MBTA plaza.

In an interview this week, Paolillo said that while there has been no recent crime increase in the Harvard Square area, "there's been an influx of people in two areas." He referred to the corner of Mass. avenue and Church street, and the MBTA subway entrance as the two spots of concern.

"Some nights you have 100 people with their heads shaved every which way — and you have people who are scared to go through," he said. "These guys were starting to flex their muscles — these punk rockers. They were getting physical."

Paolillo said he has deployed extra tactical officers to discourage rowdyism in the area. He also says the Wursthaus tables help keep up the area.

"You get responsible people there," he said, "and it keeps an element that's been hanging out there away from there."

reversed by the agreements.

The three clubs were the target this past summer of neighborhood complaints of excessive traffic and noise in the area. In addition, all three were subject to disciplinary action by the commission for a variety of misrepresentations to the commission and illegal extensions of licenses from one spot to another.

McDavitt said the agreements with T.T. the Bear's and Latin-O came about from negotiations entered into in the time since the decisions against the clubs were made in October. McDavitt said the other two members of the license commission — Police Chief Anthony Paolillo and Fire Chief Thomas Scott — authorized him to receive "offers of settlement" from the clubs.

McDavitt characterized the renegotiating of the commission's actions as "reasonable" for a commission "willing to compromise."

He said it was important in licensing issues to come to a consensus decision between the commission and the licensee, so that decisions are not imposed from an outside court.

T.T. the Bear's will be allowed to re-apply for a 2 am closing, McDavitt explained, because its closing time was changed as a result of a misrepresentation it made to the commission. He said the closing time of T.T. the Bear's appeared to be unrelated to neighborhood complaints of noise.

McDavitt said it was "possible, but not probable" for Man Ray to approach the commission to negotiate the decision shutting the place down. McDavitt said there was not much he would consider negotiable with Man Ray. He explained that because of Man Ray's close proximity to its neighbors, it was responsible for a lot of the complaints about noise in the area.

It seems probable that Man Ray will appeal the license commission action to Middlesex Superior Court and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

State okays alternative to rent board appeals

Come November 14, anyone grieved by a decision of the Cambridge Rent Control Board will have one less court through which to travel if attempting to overturn the board's decision via the judicial system.

On November 14, legislation approved by the city council, the state legislature and Governor Michael Dukakis will go into effect, stipulating that Cambridge rent control cases go to either Middlesex District Court or Middlesex Superior, but not both. If an appeal of that decision is desired, it will go to the appeals court.

According to Roger Mervis, executive director of the rent control board, the legislation change will mean that a new hearing of the evidence will not be conducted at the court level. The court will accept the record of evidence created in the rent control board hearing and the rent control board hearing examiner's findings of fact.

Mervis said the change in procedure will "streamline the judicial review process." He also pointed out that the procedure change will bring the rent control board into line with most city and state agencies which operate under this procedure.

Because the court will not create a new record of evidence, Mervis predicted that parties in rent control matters would be inclined to take the hearing at the rent control board level more seriously. Currently, a new record is created at each court level.

School kids help dedicate park

The new President John F. Kennedy Memorial Park may have national appeal, but its dedication on Monday, November 4, had local flavor.

Sixth grade students from the Robert F. Kennedy Elementary School in Cambridge played a featured part in the dedication and drew the praise of the former President's wife Jacqueline, and his children John and Caroline for their rendition of the song "Danny Boy."

Under the glare of national and local media, student Roberto Silva explained that he and his classmates had chosen "Danny Boy" as their musical selection because in their studies of President Kennedy they learned that this was one of his favorite songs. "When President Kennedy visited Ireland he joined with the people of Dublin to sing Danny Boy," Roberto noted.

Following the song, which the students practiced during the past week under the direction of music teacher Thomas Jenei, pupils Andrea DeCouto, Sabino Flores, Joge Goncalves, Craig Pederson, Tammy Suttle and Judith Ramkisson, assisted by Senator Ted Kennedy, Governor and Mrs. Michael Dukakis and the Kennedy family, turned the first earth to begin the foundations of the new park.

Teacher Kathleen Barker said that Kennedy Elementary School was invited to participate in the dedication by the Kennedy family because the school was named in honor of the President's brother, the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy. She said that the children were delighted and excited about their involvement and the opportunity to participate in this historic occasion.

"The class practiced throughout the week to learn the lyrics and perfect the song. It was a momentous experience in their lives and an event that they will remember whenever they pass the memorial park," she said. To help the students recall the dedication they were presented the memorial shovels they used to break the ground.

Andrea DeCouto clutched the chrome plated spade as she climbed aboard the school bus to return to class and noted that she would save it to show her mother and grandmother and maybe her own grandchildren. "It's like being a part of history," she said.

Hearing set on more handicapped parking

On Monday, November 18, at 6:30 pm, a public hearing on handicapped parking will be held in the City Council chambers. The purpose of the public hearing is to review the parking proposals presented to the City Council by the Commission on Handicapped Persons, in conjunction with reports prepared by the Traffic, Police and Community Development Departments in response to the commission's recommendations.

The commission's report, which was presented to the City Council early in September, is based on a five-year study of handicapped parking in Cambridge and elsewhere in the state. The report proposes a series of initiatives which, if implemented, would improve both the availability and the enforcement of handicapped parking, according to Gail Enman of the commission. Among the initiatives proposed by the commission are: 1) establishing more than 100 on-street parking spaces at specific locations near accessible shopping, recreation, education, housing and transportation opportunities; 2) designating handicapped parking in all municipal and private off-street parking lots; 3) authorizing the Police Department to ticket and tow in off-street parking lots; 4) enabling cars with handicapped or veteran's license plates to park in residential parking areas; 5) increasing the fine for parking violations that obstruct the use of curb ramps; and 6) establishing a temporary permit program that would allow qualified persons (such as handicapped persons who do not drive, persons with temporary disabling handicaps, and persons who have applied for but not yet received handicapped license plates) to park in designated handicapped parking spaces.

The Police Department has endorsed the enforcement component of the commission's proposal, which will require a City Council ordinance in order to be implemented. The Traffic Department has agreed that a need for more handicapped parking exists in the city and intends to establish handicapped parking in municipal lots in accordance with the guidelines developed by the state legislature.

Several areas of difference between the commission's proposal and the Traffic Department's response exist, however. Specifically, the Traffic Department has agreed to designate fewer handicapped parking spaces than the number proposed by the commission; does not recognize a need to designate curb ramps as a distinct parking violation subject to a $25 fine (the fine for parking in a designated handicapped space); has questioned the legality of instituting a temporary permit program based on the model that is currently in existence in Boston; and has not responded one way or another to the Commission's proposal that vehicles bearing handicapped or veteran's plates should be allowed to park without violation in residential areas, according to Enman.

Alleviating the problems associated with handicapped parking is the Commission's top priority this fall, and is a major initiative in the commission's ongoing effort to improve access in Cambridge so that disabled persons can share equally with their non-disabled peers in the City's vast and diverse resources.

Forum on city housing is planned

The Cambridge Civic Unity Committee will sponsor da forum on housing, with specific focus on development issues, rent control and subsidized housing, on Tuesday, Nov. 12, at 6 pm at City Hall Annex, 57 Inman St.

Speakers will include Gerald Clark of the Cambridge Housing Authority, City Councilors David Sullivan and Saundra Graham and Michael Rosenberg of the city's Community Development Department.

Refreshments will be served.

Ounce of Invention

Clean cut, well-dressed rock musician Frank Zappa was in town the other night to discuss the recent if nonetheless historically repetitive outcry against the filthiness of rock music.

His visit to Cambridge came just as the polls were closing on Tuesday's Cambridge election. The ballot, for those who didn't wade through the streets of Cambridge to a polling place, asked voters if they would approve an anti-pornography ordinance that would "hold pornographers accountable for the harm they cause."

There was no mention of the anti-porn ordinance at Tuesday's Harvard-sponsored panel discussion of so-called "porn rock", but like supporters of the ordinance, the Parents Music Resource Center considers sexually explicit words a potential danger. The PMRC, as represented by Sally Nevius, co-founder of the group, says it is primarily concerned with the welfare of children.

The PMRC has created something of a brouhaha over rock lyrics that are sexually explicit, violent or advocate drug usage. The forum, then, was about the brouhaha, about whether Sally Nevius and others of her ilk are indeed leading the way down a slippery slope towards censorship.

The audience, largely made up of students, clearly came out on the rainy evening to support Zappa, if not just to look at him.

The cards were stacked against Nevius. Even if Dr. Thomas Radecki, chairman of the National Coalition on Television Violence, had been there as scheduled, Nevius would have only had him on her side, with the other two members of the panel and the audience against her.

Nevius took it all with good humor. She kept a smile on her face, and wasn't riled by the hissing in the crowd or by some of Zappa's less-than-kind, borderline rude statements.

Nevius made her points. She said her concern about rock music "is limited to young children." She acknowledged the importance of rock music — and rock musicians — in the lives of children and teenagers. She said children take their leads from role models. And these role models are often rock musicians who have been known at times to spout off favorably about drugs and violence. And they sing explicitly about sex. It used to be subtle, she said, and now it's explicit.

A method of confronting what she and PMRC consider a problem is to urge record companies to put labels on album covers warning potential buyers if the album contains explicit lyrics. She said she is opposed to legislation mandating record companies stick on such stickers.

Zappa, whose new album, aptly titled "Frank Zappa Meets the Mothers of Prevention", is due out in a week, spent quite a bit of his panel time questioning the motives of PMRC. Reading from what he labelled the PMRC's "manifesto," Zappa hinted that the group was most worried about rebellion rather than anything that might be in and of itself violent or dangerous.

Zappa went on to cite examples of how others are interpreting the PMRC movement. Examples more extreme than the PMRC's request of a voluntary system of warning labels on album covers.

The audience was given a chance to question the panelists. This being Cambridge, the questions reflected at least some degree of intelligence and forethought, with the possible exception, of course, of those who can't quite recognize the difference between interrogative and declaratory statements. But that aside, the questions revealed that members of the audience had thought about "the issue." Like Zappa, they had thought ahead to how stickers on album covers can by some be used as a method of censorship, or could lead to censorship.

Having thought this far ahead, members of the audience began to equate Nevius with censorship. Instead of focusing on why Nevius believes "rock porn" is important to consider, the tone instead was "how dare you."

Nevius spoke to the audience of a change in rock lyrics from subtle sexuality in days of old to explicit sexuality today. But subtlety isn't at a premium just in the lyric world. There seems also to be a lack of subtlety to how the well-developed mind works, at least on anything resembling political issues. The audience displayed a lack of subtlety, and so, too, did Nevius and Zappa.

The evening began with a presentation of opposing views. Interpretations were made quickly, jumping from point A to point G to point Z until point A no longer existed. Nevius speaking out against what she considers potentially damaging was interpreted not as voicing legitimate concern, but as promoting censorship.

In Cambridge, opposing an anti-pornography ordinance because of first amendment concerns becomes, instead of a legitimate point of view, "pimping for pornographers" instead. On the ordinance, the knife cuts both ways. Opponents of the ordinance quickly attack those in favor of the measure as running roughshod over civil liberties, missing at times, the legitimate concern that prompted them to support the ordinance.

In this super-educated community, the problem becomes worse instead of better. Knowing how ideas can be twisted and subverted, the jumping off point for an idea — no matter how well-intentioned or legitimate — becomes just as evil as all the evil that may come out of the idea itself.

That's not to say that Nevius or anti-pornography feminists or anti-ordinance feminists have only the best of intentions.

Who is to say?

State Sen. George Bachrach hold his every-other-year birthday "bash" on Dec. 2. Now, that doesn't mean George only counts every other year when computing his age; it means that the birthday bash is George's way of kicking off his next campaign. Now, this time, you can pretty much expect the Watertown solon to announce his plans to seek the Eighth Congressional seat now held by US House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr..

Those interested in helping to plan the party are asked to show up on Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 pm at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 10 Harvey St., North Cambridge. For more info, call Carolyn Mieth at 924-1500.

In official news from Bachrach's office, the solon was on hand when Gov. Michael S. Dukakis proclaimed next week as Massachusetts Hospice Week. Also on hand was Kristina Snyder of the Hospice of Cambridge.

"Hospice care is a humane and compassionate way to care for the physical and emotional needs of the terminally ill and dying," Bachrach said. "It provides competent and now licensed care in an environment as similar to a home situation as possible in which people can die with dignity."

Sheriff John P. McGonigle of Middlesex County was honored recently by Local 254, Service Employees International Union, the collective bargaining unit for state probation officers. McGonigle, who was appointed to his current post by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis following the death of Sheriff Edward Henneberry, served in the Cambridge juvenile and adult probation department for more than 17 years.

On hand at the affair were Edward T. Sullivan, business manager for the union, the union's legal counsels, Christopher Muse and Michael Muse, and Richard Murphy, director of governmental affairs for the union. The bash was held at the Mt. Auburn Post, VFW.

DEDICATION—Sheila Russell, wife of the late Mayor Leonard Russell, was on hand for the recent dedication of the rebuilt Huron avenue bridge, named in memory of her husband. Letters to the editor

Addendum

On the obituary (Cambridge Chronicle, Oct. 31, 1985), I wish to add concerning Owen F. McCall, he was also an Emeritus Member, the Cambridge Board of Health and Hospitals. When I served on the Board 1970-76, in the early 1970's when Mr. McCall submitted his retirement papers as City Budget Director, he was given that recognition.

I recall Mr. McCall for his collecting of the records of the Health and Hospitals Board and for having had them bound into volumes. Those bound records were handed over to his successor as secretary of the Health and Hospitals Board, Alfred P. Vellucci, an administrator in the fiscal management division of the hospital.

Mr. McCall was exceedingly loyal to city manager form of city government. And, once when the city manager wished the entire membership present at a city council meeting, he had the Cambridge Police deliver summonses to it.

Awake

I wish to disagree with Mr. Buckley who, in a missive to the "Chronicle" of Oct. 31, castigated the city council for dealing with other than local issues. Mr. Buckley must be informed that there are no local issues which may be divorced from international affairs. Until recently, nerve gas was tested and produced here and due to our institutes of learning and various high technology industries, Cambridge is a targeted nuclear objective. Somewhere under the Siberian tundra sleeps a warhead holding the lives of 100,000 Cantabrigians. If it wakes, we die. It is not only the right but the duty of the council to denounce the international irresponsibility which threatens our world with biocide. The municipal government is to be vastly congratulated for its efforts on behalf of world peace, especially the Cambridge-Soviet Sister City project. I sincerely urge our citizens to encourage continuing efforts of the council and city peace commission in their work for world salvation.

'Boot Hill' redux

The Gun Owner's Action League (GOAL) prevailed. The majority membership of the House of Representatives knuckled under and passed a bill that has a far greater propensity to promote crime than to deter it. Political analysts and confidants rationalize the House action by saying it is a ploy to embarrass Governor Dukakis. He would have to veto it were the Massachusetts Senate to follow suit and demonstrate the same callousness and irresponsibility. It is indeed unfortunate that people elected to public office, sworn to protect the public's interest would be contemptuous enough of the electorate to take this action.

The number of firearms licenses issued per capita in the Town of Westford is, I believe, representative of the percentage issued eleswhere in Massachusetts. Of more than fifteen thousand residents here, approximately five hundred are issued permits authorizing their carrying firearms.

Ironically, the Greater Nashoba Valley Chiefs of Police Association in this legislative session filed a bill that would have given chiefs of police authority to exercise the same degree of discretion in issuing firearms identification (FID) cards as is presently vested in us in issuing permits to carry handguns.

Presently the law regulating the issuance of FID's provides that any applicant for a firearm identification card shall be entitled to one unless, (a) he has within the last five years been convicted of a felony or, (b) had been confined to any hospital or institution for mental illness or, (c) had within the last five years been convicted of any violation of any state or federal narcotics or harmful drug law. The law further states that the licensing authority "may not prescribe any other condition" for the issuance of a card. The Nashoba Chiefs sought to delete that sentence by amending the FID law. It would have allowed for rejection of an applicant on the basis of suitability. But the House obviously never considered that and the bill died. Rather, in their 'infinite wisdom' they substituted the present statute that governs licensing of persons to carry guns with one proposed by GOAL. Presently a chief may deny a person the privilege to carry a gun whom he believes to be unsuitable. Under the new House passed bill anyone who committed incest, rape, robbery, assault, mayhem, was a wife-beater or child abuser, or committed any other violent crime but was not convicted would have an absolute right to carry a handgun on his/her person whenever and wherever he/she travels in the state.

Since Congressional enactment in 1968 of the Omnibus Crime Bill, the Safe Streets Act so-called, we were to have declared 'War on Crime.' The Massachusetts House, however, has not so much as put up a respectable skirmish. Now they pour salt on the wound and insult us all by rolling over and playing dead for the National Rifle Association (NRA) and its local affiliate GOAL.

Concerned citizens

Requested for SDI (star war hardware) is $3.7 billion for FY '86. This nearly triples last year's amount. If you are concerned, contact your U.S. representative or senator to speak against the Defense Authorization Bill for SDI before the next vote in May or early June of 1986.

Another dramatic weapon request is funding of $30-50 billion from FY '86 for 48 MX missiles to replace older ones. The MX has a 7000 nautical mile range.

President Reagan may have damaged himself by gaining the recent vote for 21 MX's from FY '85. Bill Gray (D. Pa.) voiced, "I think winning here will hurt him (the President)." The Washington Post wrote, "It was akin to a Normandy invasion." There was excessive "political" capital used to gain the 21 MX's and more Republicans than ever voted against it.

Questions about the above defense measures will likely appear on the '86 Congressional ballot. Learn about these weapons keeping in mind the importance of our earthly survival and peace. "The heaven is the Lord's, but He entrusted the earth to its peoples." Psalm 115: v. 16.

Bottom line

I listened carefully at the Tuesday (Oct. 29) night housing debate between City Councillor David Sullivan and candidate William Walsh. Yes, it's all true: the Rent Control Board (like most public bureaucracies) is usually slow and sometimes unpredictable. Rent control sometimes benefits the well-off, and sometimes causes financial hardship for landlords who are not at all wealthy. And rent control sometimes discourages landlords from reinvestment in maintenance, which leads to housing deterioration. Yes, all true.

But here's the bottom line: rent control, imperfect though it may be, is the only mechanism helping to stabilize Cambridge as a well-integrated city with a mixed-income population. Councillor David Sullivan, and the other CCA candidates, know this. If they are re-elected, I hope they will work even harder to redress rent control inequities, and to complement rent control with other programs designed to preserve housing opportunities for residents of limited means.

As for Candidate Walsh: He's a smart man, and its hard to believe that he doesn't understand the real consequences of this proposed "means test" and "homeownership" emphasis. Whatever their benefits, Mr. Walsh's proposals would also eliminate rent control for most apartments, turn hundreds or thousands of limited-income residents out on the street, and leave them, as they search for new housing, to run for their lives. Is this what Cambridge wants as its housing policy?

Fa-la-la-phooey

"Deck the halls with boughs of holly, fa-la-la-la-la, la-la-la-la; 'Tis the season to be jolly, fa-la-la-la-la, la-la-la-la;"

Hey, you're not singing. What're you, some kind of Scrooge or something? I hope you're not going to try to tell me that it's too early for Rudolph, Bing, or Nat King. If you were, take a stroll through Ann and Hope. They've got enough Christmas wrapping paper on display to envelop the entire Arsenal (I still like to call it the Arsenal).

Call me a cynic but I sometimes think that the owners of these stores are pushing Christmas farther back every year just so they can put more of the Christmas green in their already plentiful pockets. Sounds silly I know but, as I say, I'm a cynic.

I sometimes wonder, however, just how far back these owners will go with their Christmas advertising retreat in future years. (If this were a movie, the screen would go out of focus now and then...)

October, 1988 — Kris Columbus, resplendent in red suit and beard is seen on the bow of a ship bellowing, "On Nina, on Pinta, on Santa Maria. On to the Night Light Sale at Zayre."

September, 1992 — Santa's elves, on the first day back from settling a labor dispute about overtime hours during the busy season, busily sew "Made in USA" labels in Parisian dresses while merrily humming "Look for the Union Label."

July, 1996 — Santa, shouting "O-O-Overture" soars his sleigh, filled to the brim with illegal fireworks, high above the Hatch Shell dragging a "Reduced for Christmas" sign behind it.

February, 2000 - Santa and George Washington are shaking hands and holding up an "8.6 Financing" sign as Ernie Boch hands them the reins to a brand new BMW sleigh.

Remember the good old days when you started to celebrate the Christmas season after the taste of the Thanksgiving turkey was out of your mouth. We've come a long way, baby.

Too bad, huh?

sion and co-founder to the Cambridge Gay and Lesbian Alliance.

Sumner Nystedt, editor of The Mirror, a regional gay newspaper, accused critics of the clubs of "prejudice and homophobia," and described them as "reminiscent of the vigilantes of the Old Wild West."

Speaking in support of the Latin Quarter, a Hispanic music club on Brookline street, were the Rev. Wendell Verrill, liaison to the Hispanic Community for the Archdiocese of Boston; several members of the local Hispanic community and a sound expert who designed an acoustical system to keep noise from escaping from the club into the surrounding residential neighborhood.

Father Verrill testified that the owners of the club, Peter Cuenca and his wife, have donated thousands of dollars to civic and charitable causes in recent years and have used their place of business for charitable functions.

The president of the Hispanic Festival of Cambridge argued that the Latin Quarter was the only place in Cambridge specifically catering to Latin American residents.

The owners of the Latin Quarter have requested a permanent entertainment and dancing license in addition to a liquor license. Those requests have been opposed by some local residents.

At the start of the meeting, a request by the owners of T.T. the Bear's for a separate hearing on September 10 was granted. The owners have said that the club is currently under the control of the bankruptcy court, and requested the postponement to avoid additional litigation.

Owners and supporters of the clubs in question, all of which are clustered along Brookline and Green streets, argue that the resurgence of nightlife in Central Square has transformed the area from a dangerous and deserted zone to a safe and lively social gathering place.

"This area is far more alive and safe than it was several years ago," said James McNearney, manager of the Paradise Cafe on Mass. avenue, "and the credit for that goes to these clubs."

The hearing, which adjourned at 11:30 pm, will be continued on August 12.

Court okays rent cuts

He also wrote that "the effective date of Regulation Series No. 100 for all tenants in the city of Cambridge shall be August 1, 1985, so that tenants whose rents have been reduced will be placed in no better position than those whose rents have increased." The date for the increases to take effect is today.

"We're very pleased with the ruling," said attorney Bruce Eisenhut of the rent control board. "I'm confident that if they do appeal it in the future it will be sustained. The most difficult proceeding was before Judge Sherman."

The plaintiffs have made no indication whether they will contest the ruling or not. According to their attorney, James Murphy, "I think what we're going to do is wait for Judge Sherman's decision (a full memorandum of decision which came out after "Chronicle" press time this week) and then decide."

Doug Thayer of Southview Cooperative Housing Corporation, one of the plaintiffs, said of the case: "I knew from the start we had an uphill battle. All I needed was a one month delay. That paid for legal fees. If it brought it to the attention of the courts then it was worth it."

Sherman's ruling also says that "the Plaintiffs are not barred from filing individual petitions for rent adjustments if they claim receipt of less than a fair net operating income." These individual adjustments are filed by individual landlords for their properties, as opposed to the general adjustments, which used an elaborate formula to calculate new rents for each unit in the city.

In an interview this week, Thayer criticized the individual adjustment process, saying that his last application (at 3-5-7 Arlington St.) took 22 hearings over 9 months, after which he took the matter to court.

Thayer also said landlords must put up a $5000 fee for the adjustment process, which he says is prohibitive for owners of small buildings.

Eisenhut responded to this by saying the fees are $45 per unit (which in a larger building could equal $5000), and that "the tenants really pay the fee — which is calculated into their rents over three years."

Eisenhut said that last year, of the approximately 3,000 buildings with rent control units in them, there were 428 applications for individual adjustments.

Today's new rents represent the last step in a long process. According to Eisenhut, the first public hearing on the general adjustments took place January 23, 1984. The board finalized their decision in February of this year, and sent out letters in June, informing landlords of the new rents.

The last adjustment by the board before that took place in July of 1982, when they processed a heating adjustment for buildings whose heat is paid for by landlords.

Eisenhut also said that as a result of this process, the board now has expense and capital figures in its computers which will make future general adjustments easier.

"I think a likely upshot of this is that in the future, general adjustments will be on a more regular basis. This is the goal," he said.

Mid-city neighborhood commission taps officers

At the first meeting of the Mid Cambridge Neighborhood Conservation Commission recently Constance Hsia of Dana street was elected chair and Ed Feinman of Inman street was elected vice chairman. Other Commission members are Michael Van Valkenburg, Joseph Sakey of the Cambridge Historical Commission and Paul Andrew. Andrew Oldman, Frankie Lieberman and Janice Campbell serve as alternates.

The commission will review all building permits in order to prevent changes which are not in keepng with the character of the neighborhood Projects involving demolition of over 33 percent of the existing floor space, new construction or additions of more than 750 square feet, new construction covering more than 33 percent of an open lot, enlargement of the floor area of an existing building by more than 33 percent and alterations to buildings on the National Register of Historic Places will be reviewed by the full board at a regular public meeting. The district, which went into effect July 1, includes Neighborhood Six from Prescott to Prospect streets and from Massachusetts avenue to Kirkland street. The City Council has appropriated $10,000 for this year and $5,000 for each following year as an educational and incentive fund to support the programs of the Commission.

Outdoor tables

Sheldon Cohen, owner of Out-of-Town News and informally known as the Mayor of Harvard Square, added his support for Cardullo's request.

Members of the Harvard Square Defense Fund, a group claiming 600 members in the Harvard Square area, and others opposed the tables on several grounds.

Defense Fund President J.D. Pollack, co-owner of the Brattle and Janus Theaters, argued that the tables reduce "open space" in the square, are inappropriate in "the most heavily trafficked, most heavily congested area in Harvard Square," may create a public safety problem if alcohol is served there, and serve no public good.

In addition, Pollack accused Cardullo of attempting to circumvent the authority of the license commission by going directly to his friends on the city council to get a permit. In May of last year, City Councilor Walter Sullivan introduced a council resolution asking Public Works Commissioner Everett Kennedy to grant Cardullo a permit for the tables. The resolution passed after a perfunctory voice vote of the council.

License Commission Chair James McDavitt said the temporary permit for the tables will be extended until September 10.

FEDEDAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION
Notice of Application Filed with the Commission
(July 24, 1985)

Take notice that the following hydroelectric application has been filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and is available for public inspection:

a. Type of Application: Preliminary Permit
b. Project No.: P-9288-000
c. Date Filed: June 11, 1985
d. Applicant: Burlington Energy Development Associates
e. Name of Project: Saxonville Dam
f. Location: On the Sudbury River in Middlesex County, Massachusetts
g. Filed Pursuant to: Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. §§ 791(a) - 825(r)
h. Contact Person: Mr. John R. Anderson, Burlington Energy Development Associates, 64 Blanchard Road, Burlington, MA 01803
i. Comment Date: Sept. 23, 1985
j. Description of Project: The proposed project would consist of: 1.) a 29-foot-high and 450-foot-wide existing concrete gravity dam including spillway at elevation 115 feet USGS datum; 2.) a 30-acre reservoir with an existing storage capacity of 150 acre-feet at a normal maximum elevation of 135 feet USGS datum; 3.) a proposed powerhouse 20 feet long and 15 feet wide containing one proposed turbine/generator with a rated capacity of 150 kW with flows discharging back into the Sudbury River; 4.) a proposed 480-volt transmission line 200 feet long; and 5.) appurtenant facilities. The estimated average annual energy produced by the project would be 650,000 kWh operating under a net hydraulic head of 20 feet. Project power would be sold to the Boston Edison Company. The dam is owned by Mr. John H. Finley.
k. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: A5, A7, A9, B, C, D2.

l. Proposed Scope of Studies under Permit: A preliminary permit, if issued, does not authorize construction. The term of the proposed preliminary permit is 18 months. The work proposed under the preliminary permit would include economic analysis, preparation of preliminary engineering plans, and a study of environmental impacts. Based on results of these studies Applicant would decide whether to proceed with more detailed studies, and the preparation of an application for license to construct and operate the project. Applicant estimates that the cost of the work to be performed under the preliminary permit would be $1,100.

A5. Preliminary Permit: Anyone desiring to file a competing application for preliminary permit for a proposed project must submit the competing application itself, or a notice of intent to file such an application, to the Commission on or before the specified comment date for the particular application (see 18 CRF 4.36 (1985)). Submission of a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing preliminary permit application no later than 30 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A competing preliminary permit application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30(b) (1) and (9) and 4.36.

A7. Preliminary Permit: Any qualified development applicant desiring to file a competing development application must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, either a competing development application or a notice of intent to file such an application. Submission of a timely notice of intent to file a development application allows an interested person to file the competing application no later than 120 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A competing license application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30(b) (1) and (9) and 4.36.

A9. Notice of intent: A notice of intent must specify the exact name, business address, and telephone number of the prospective applicant, include an unequivocal statement of intent to submit, if such an application may be filed, either (1) a preliminary permit application or (2) a development application (specify which type of application), and be served on the applicant(s) named in this public notice.

B. Comments, Protests, or Motions to Intervene — Anyone may submit comments, a protest, or a motion to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 18 C.F.R §§ 385.210, .211, .214. In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a motion to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or motions to intervene must be received on or before the specified comment date for the particular application.

C. Filing and Service of Responsive Documents: Any filings must bear in all capital letters the title "COMMENTS", "NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE COMPETING APPLICATION", "COMPETING APPLICATION", "PROTEST" or "MOTION TO INTERVENE", as applicable, and the Project Number of the particular application to which the filing is in response. Any of the above named documents must be filed by providing the original and the number of copies required by the Commission's regulations to: Kenneth F. Plumb, Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, N.E. Washington, D.C. 20426. An additional copy must be sent to: Mr. Fred E. Springer, Director, Division of Project Management, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 203-RB, at the above address. A copy of any notice of intent, competing application or motion to intervene must also be served upon each representative of the Applicant specified in the particular application.

D2. Agency Comments — Federal, State, and local agencies are invited to file comments on the described application. (A copy of the application may be obtained by agencies directly from the Applicant.) If an agency does not file comments within the time specified for filing comments, it will be presumed to have no comments. One copy of an agency's comments must also be sent to the Applicant's representatives.

Kenneth F. Plumb
Secretary

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
FEDEDAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION
Notice of Application Filed with the Commission
(July 24, 1985)

Take notice that the following hydroelectric application has been filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and is available for public inspection:

a. Type of Application: Preliminary Permit
b. Project No.: P-9287-000
c. Date Filed: June 13, 1985
d. Applicant: Burlington Energy Development Associates
e. Name of Project: Stearns Reservoir
f. Location: On the Sudbury River in Middlesex County, Massachusetts
g. Filed Pursuant to: Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. §§ 791(a) - 825(r)
h. Contact Person: Mr. John R. Anderson, Burlington Energy Development Associates, 64 Blanchard Road, Burlington, MA 01803
i. Comment Date: Sept. 23, 1985
j. Description of Project: The proposed project would consist of: 1.) a 22-foot-high and 650-foot-wide existing earth dam including spillway at elevation 150 feet USGS datum; 2.) a 100-acre reservoir with an existing storage capacity of 300 acre-feet at a normal maximum elevation of 161 feet USGS datum; 3.) an existing powerhouse 65 feet long and 40 feet wide containing one turbine/generator with a rated capacity of 60 kW with flows discharging back into the Sudbury River; 4.) a proposed 480-volt transmission line 100 feet long; and 5.) appurtenant facilities. The estimated average annual energy produced by the project would be 260,000 kWh operating under a net hydraulic head of 12 feet. Project power would be sold to the Boston Edison Company. The dam is owned by the Metropolitan District Commission.
k. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: A5, A7, A9, B, C, D2.

l. Proposed Scope of Studies under Permit: A preliminary permit, if issued, does not authorize construction. The term of the proposed preliminary permit is 18 months. The work proposed under the preliminary permit would include economic analysis, preparation of preliminary engineering plans, and a study of environmental impacts. Based on results of these studies Applicant would decide whether to proceed with more detailed studies, and the preparation of an application for license to construct and operate the project. Applicant estimates that the cost of the work to be performed under the preliminary permit would be $5,000.

A5. Preliminary Permit: Anyone desiring to file a competing application for preliminary permit for a proposed project must submit the competing application itself, or a notice of intent to file such an application, to the Commission on or before the specified comment date for the particular application (see 18 CRF 4.36 (1985)). Submission of a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing preliminary permit application no later than 30 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A competing preliminary permit application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30(b) (1) and (9) and 4.36.

A7. Preliminary Permit: Any qualified development applicant desiring to file a competing development application must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, either a competing development application or a notice of intent to file such an application. Submission of a timely notice of intent to file a development application allows an interested person to file the competing application no later than 120 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A competing license application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30(b) (1) and (9) and 4.36.

A9. Notice of intent: A notice of intent must specify the exact name, business address, and telephone number of the prospective applicant, include an unequivocal statement of intent to submit, if such an application may be filed, either (1) a preliminary permit application or (2) a development application (specify which type of application), and be served on the applicant(s) named in this public notice.

B. Comments, Protests, or Motions to Intervene — Anyone may submit comments, a protest, or a motion to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 18 C.F.R. §§ 385.210, .211, .214. In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a motion to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or motions to intervene must be received on or before the specified comment date for the particular application.

C. Filing and Service of Responsive Documents: Any filings must bear in all capital letters the title "COMMENTS", "NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE COMPETING APPLICATION", "COMPETING APPLICATION", "PROTEST" or "MOTION TO INTERVENE", as applicable, and the Project Number of the particular application to which the filing is in response. Any of the above named documents must be filed by providing the original and the number of copies required by the Commission's regulations to: Kenneth F. Plumb, Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, N.E. Washington, D.C. 20426. An additional copy must be sent to: Mr. Fred E. Springer, Director, Division of Project Management, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 203-RB, at the above address. A copy of any notice of intent, competing application or motion to intervene must also be served upon each representative of the Applicant specified in the particular application.

D2. Agency Comments — Federal, State, and local agencies are invited to file comments on the described application. (A copy of the application may be obtained by agencies directly from the Applicant.) If an agency does not file comments within the time specified for filing comments, it will be presumed to have no comments. One copy of an agency's comments must also be sent to the Applicant's representatives.

Linskey scholarships awarded

Northeastern University has awarded eight scholarships for the coming academic year in the name of the late William F. "Doc" Linskey, well-known athletic trainer for the Cambridge Schools.

The awards are made from the Doc Linskey Scholarship fund. For scholarships are awarded to athletic training majors and four to June graduates of Cambridge Rindge and Latin School who will enter Northeastern in September.

The athletic training majors are Paul Lessard, a senior at NU who has been selected to attend the Atlanta Falcons NFL pre-season summer camp; Helen Lopes, a senior, who has worked at Harvard and on the medical staff for the Boston Marathon; George Finn, a junior, whose work experience includes MIT and Bowdoin College; and Nairi Melkonian, a sophomore, whose work experience includes Northeastern and Skidmore College.

Incoming freshman from Cambridge who have received scholarships are Joseph G. Grassi, Rudy G. Nazaire, Liliete F. Reis and Ruth M. Shaw.

City offers ADL-sponsored fellowship

For the fourth consecutive year, City Manager Robert W. Healy, has announced an opportunity for an individual who is either in the employ of the city government, a related city agency, or a public service organization in the community.

In the interest of enhancing the quality of public service in the Cambridge community the Arthur D. Little Foundation has established a fellowship program to enable outstanding City officials to further their professional education at Harvard University.

The foundation will provide for this purpose a fellowship in the amount of $7,500 that will be applied toward the cost of tuition for one individual to the mid-career Master in Public Administration degree program at the John F. Kennedy School of Government. This opportunity represents an intensive one-year MPA program designed for public officials with a minimum of five years experience in government.

Candidates will submit application for admission to the MPA program directly to the John F. Kennedy School of Government. The MPA program has a rolling admissions process. Applications, which may be obtained at the Personnel Department, Room 309, Cambridge City Hall, 795 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, may be submitted through August 1, 1985. The School will notify the City Manager as applications from Cambridge officials are received. Any questions concerning the content of the application package should be directed to Velvet Miller at 495-1353 or Margaret Pax 495-1154.

Healy will appoint a selection panel including representatives from Arthur D. Little Foundation and Harvard University. The selection panel will evaluate candidates, conduct interviews, if appropriate, and reach a consensus on three finalists. The finalists will be ranked in order of preference for the fellowship award and their names will be forwarded to the Director of the MPA Program at the John F. Kennedy School of Government.

All interested candidates should understand clearly that the program begins in September and that the university's admissions process must be met before the names can be submitted to the selection panel. The announcement of the award will be coordinated by Harvard University, the Mayor's Office, and the Arthur D. Little Foundation late this summer.

Applicants from city government will be asked to commit to continuing to work for the city for at least two years after completing the program. Given the course work requirements, applicants should not expect to be able to work more than a few hours per week, if that, during the academic year.

Friends gather used clothing to aid needy

Since 1945, people in the greater Cambridge area have been leaving off bundles of unneeded clothing at 5 Longfellow Park. Clothing is brought there from many parts of New England as well.

In the basement of the Friends Meeting House is the clothing room of the American Friends Service Committee, staffed every Tuesday and Thursday by a director, a supervisor of sewing and 7 to 15 volunteers. Also working in the Friends Center across the driveway is Louisa Alger, director until this year and well known to many local people who have worked with her or donated to the cause.

Last November 840 pounds of clothing went to the Choctaw Indians in Alabama. On Valentine's Day 5,000 pounds traveled by recycled school bus to the Lacota branch of the Sioux tribe in Rosebud, South Dakota, followed by 3,500 pounds on May 9 and 4,000 on July 1.

Much of the clothing and footwear collected by the Cambridge AFSC Clothing Center goes to organizations in the Cambridge/Boston area which have asked for it. Among recent recipients are: the University Lutheran Church in Harvard Square for its shelter program, the Cambridge Children's Guidance Center, Cambridge Visiting Nurses, the Salvation Army Drop-in Center in Central Square, Cambridge, Cambridge, Shelter, Inc., the Castle School serving Cambridge and Somerville, St. Monica's Nursing Home in Roxbury, the San Patricio Church, Roxbury, Morgan Memorial/Goodwill Industries, Catholic Charities, Our Savior Lutheran Church in Dorchester, the Pine Street Inn, Rosie's Place, and the Boston Detoxification Unit.

An even greater volume goes by truck to the American Friends Service Committee national headquarters in Philadelphia. Last January 19,000 pounds went from Cambridge to Philadelphia for distribution in Nicaragua. Clothing gathered in Philadelphia from clothing centers around the country has been shipped all around the world and is currently going primarily to Africa, Central America and Poland.

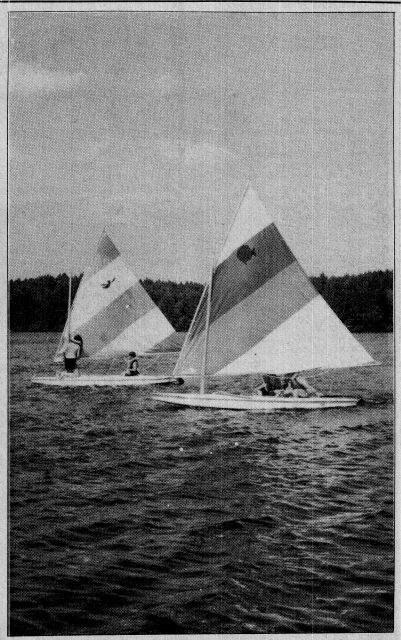
Edith Freeman of Bay street, current director of the clothing room, says, "We have a particular need for children's clothing, toys and school supplies, blankets and bedding, medical supplies, sports equipment, practical women's shoes and men's shoes. We are also in need of donations to help with expenses, despite the fact that all but two of our workers are volunteers. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, we are glad to welcome people interested in contributing who would like to see the clothing room in operation."

Family Y to host blood drive

The warmth and joys of summer are upon us, but this is a time of concern for the American Red Cross Blood Services - Northeast Region.

Richard Foot, Executive Director of the Cambridge Family Y, has generously sponsored a blood drive, to take place on Thursday, July 25, from 9:30 am to 2:30 pm, at the YMCA at 820 Massachusetts Ave.

Anyone who is in general good health, 18 years or older (17 years old with a signed American Red Cross parental/guardian consent form), weights at least 110 pounds, and has never had hepatitis, may be eligible to donate blood. For more information, or to make a blood donation appointment, call Doreen Bonvie at the YMCA at 876-3860, or Marie Cloutier Diflo at the Red Cross at 449-6840.



SAILING AWAY—More than 180 Cambridge Boy Scouts are enjoying the summer at Camp Quinapoxet in Rindge, NH, where more than 500 merit badges, including the popular sailing merit badge, were earned in the first session. Camp Director Paul Langley says one of the highlights of the season is the annual Kahagon Lodge, Order of the Arrow, tap-out ceremony led by Chief Robert Brennan of Immaculate Conception Church's Troop 45. More than 40 scouts were selected to join the national honor campers' society.
