RE: Free Jelly Beans!

Dearest City Councilors,

Suppose you were running a candy shop and learned that your longtime store manager had been giving away cartons of jelly beans to his friends behind your back.

Even if the store was turning a profit and still had a huge inventory of candy in the warehouse--and even if the manager always took pains to keep your personal jar of jelly beans stocked to overflowing with your favorite flavors--wouldn't you at least ask him to explain why the heck he was giving away the company's merchandise without permission?

And before rehiring him, wouldn't you at least ask him to consult with you before deciding on his own initiative to give away the candy store?

In the lingering spirit of Valentine's Day, won't you please, please, please ask your beloved city manager to justify the no-bid "sweetheart" lease of city rental property he arranged for Century Bank--a bank that finances the hidden real estate ventures he conducts with the city solicitor, who is not only Mr. Healy's employee and investment partner but also a director and investor in the bank?
