CAMBRIDGE CHRONICLE

Phillip Areeda Harvard Law professor

Phillip Areeda, 65, the country's foremost expert on antitrust law, died of leukemia on Dec. 24, 1995, at Harvard University's Stillman Infirmary. He was a resident of Cambridge.

Professor Areeda dedicated his legal career to the field of antitrust and acquired such expertise in the subject that he was often referred to as an "antitrust guru." Areeda devoted nearly two decades to writing his 10-volume treatise, "Antitrust Law."

Areeda served as an Assistant Special Counsel to President Eisenhower. When Eisenhower left the White House, Areeda joined the Harvard Law School faculty. He was revered by generations of Harvard Law students who knew him as a master of the Socratic method of teaching, which seeks to engage students in a critical dialogue to help them learn to formulate and analyze legal arguments. He was awarded the Albert M. Sacks-Paul A. Freund Award for Teaching Excellence.

This year the US Department of Justice gave Areeda the John Sherman Award in recognition of his contribution to the field of antitrust law.

Along with his passion for antitrust doctrine, Areeda was well known for his love of fine food, wine, and opera, and for his joy in sharing them with his many friends.

He leaves a sister-in-law, Anna of Birmingham, Michigan; and nieces and a nephew, Michelle of Beverly Hills, Mich.; Marianne Taylor of Williamsburg, Vir.; and Joseph of Los Angeles.

A memorial service was to be scheduled at a later date.
