Dr. Louis Zetzel, 84; for 36 years on Harvard Medical School faculty

A funeral will be held today for Dr. Louis Zetzel of Cambridge, an internist in private practice and longtime faculty member at Harvard Medical School, who died Monday in the Newton and Wellesley Alzheimer Center of complications from Parkinson's disease. He was 84.

Dr. Zetzel was born in Chelsea. He graduated from Chelsea High School.

At the age of 16, he received a scholarship to Harvard College, where he was graduated Phi Beta Kappa in 1929. He graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1934.

After completing his medical training with fellowships in New York and Philadelphia, he joined the staff at Beth Israel Hospital, where he was chief of gastroenterology from 1956 to 1968.

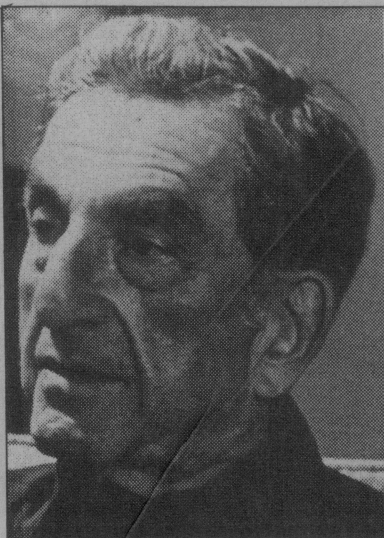

During World War II he served in the Army Medical Corps.

Dr. Zetzel was an expert of diseases of the digestive tract. From 1939 to 1975, he was a member of the Harvard Medical School faculty, where he sat for many years on the admissions committee. He became clinical professor of medicine at the school in 1967.

On his 75th birthday, a visiting professorship in gastroenterology was established in his name at Harvard Medical School.

After ending his teaching career, Dr. Zetzel continued in private practice and was so committed to his patients that he continued to make house calls until his retirement in 1986 at age 77.

He was married to the late Muriel Bashlow and the late Elizabeth

DR. LOUIS ZETZEL

Rosenberg Guttman.

According to one of his two daughters, Judith Z. Nathanson of Philadelphia, Dr. Zetzel "was a man of great energy and feeling. He could be passionately outraged by a colleague's callousness toward a patient. He could be overjoyed about Ted Williams home run, angered by a tennis partner's lapse on the court and made wonderfully happy by a day's fly fishing in the Adirondacks.

He also leaves his wife, Geraldine (Kohlenberg); another daughter, Ellen Z. Lambert of New York; a son, James E.G. Zetzel of New York; two stepchildren, Teresa Kohlenberg of Watertown and Andrew Max Kohlenberg of Providence; three grandchildren and two stepgrandchildren.

The service will be at 1:30 p.m. in Levine Chapel, in Brookline. Burial will be in Chevra Mishna Cemetery in Lynn.
