

Why the populous election came into being

The populous electoral system came into being in attempt to avoid the tyranny of dictatorial rulers of all kinds.

Dictatorial rulers hold permanent authority.

The electoral system takes away permanence of authority. It is the theory that by vote The People can sustain the kind of government they want.

But this isn't what happens because the electoral system is inherently corrupt.

Two aspects of it make it so. One causes constant societal instability and the other leads to hidden tyranny.

In order to be elected and individual has to create a reason why those holding government authority are functioning incorrectly.

Then when the new individual is elected he must create different kinds of legislation. The result is that The People's lives are continually destabilized by political changes of authority. Therefore in the hope of avoiding dictatorship rule by elected government the stability of The People's lives becomes vulnerable to constant changes in government policy.

The hidden tyranny which the electoral process creates is that when individuals run for government they need money for promotion. Not only that but they need tax money to make themselves look good while in office. This leads them into the hands of big money suppliers who demand favors in return. Thus the money controllers become the hidden tyrant dictators of the electoral process.

They induce the enslavement of the people by complex laws, by controlling all the resources, by corrupting the government processes of justice so that they can make more money and by creating powerful arrest agencies which keep The People in a state of fear and subjugation.

There is only one way out of the hands of tyranny. That is for The People to create the National Vision

The National Constitution

Government and The People's lives then achieve permanent stability and security under laws and guidelines that assure justice and correct government activity.

The government officials do not create law. They carry out
The Laws and Procedures Created by The People
