This year, awards have gone to students Janel Aubry, Julia Auger, Lee Chapman, Alex Lowe, Cheryl Rivera, Jesse Vindinha and Joseph Williams.

Students honored for their art

Nine Cambridge high school students and one elementary school student are among the 1,400 young people whose artwork was honored by the Boston Globe. Four of the high school students — Alexander Lukas, Anna Pelrine, Schuyler Pishn and Michelle Toppi — will have their work on display through March 1 at the State Transportation Building. Other winners of honorable mentions were Michael De Guglielmo, Yeo Rim Han, Nicholas Sherwood, Sasha Warner Berry and Adam Weinstock, all high school students, and Sonja Totten Harris, who goes to the King School.

The exhibit of artwork from 46th annual Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards competition will be open to the public 9 am to 5 pm weekdays at the second-floor gallery of 10 Park Plaza. Students

Clerk of Courts will be on duty on Feb. 22. He may stick around for the big day, but on the other hand he may head south to be in warmer climes, said Michael.

Also on the list of those VIPs with birthdays this month is Jonesy, aka Bill Jones of Norfolk Street. Although the council order, which has Sullivan's name on it but was not, Sullivan says, put in by him, says Jonesy is turning 90. Jonesy himself claimed it was something closer to the 70s. And the street list notes the city hall regular was in fact 67 this month.

Moving on to anniversaries, East Cambridge couple Alfred and Gloria Rastellini certainly deserve some mention. They made it though 50 years of marriage this week.

Road Gripe of the Week

The folks in North Cambridge don't know what point the signal bridge at Walden Street serves, since it is no longer used by the MBTA. Suggesting that the bridge is now becoming a hazard for children who climb on it, residents would like to see if it can be removed, according to City Councilor Katherine Triantafillou, who asked that the council please take a look at this
