WHEREAS: This year on Veterans' Day, we celebrate the 85th anniversary of the armistice that finally silenced the guns of World War I. Millions of brave Americans marched into Europe and into the brutality of trench warfare to fight that war. Although President Woodrow Wilson recognized that "it is a fearful thing to lead these great peaceful people into war," he also recognized that it was important to do so "for the things which we always carried nearest our hearts - for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own Governments"; and

WHEREAS: Today, there are more than 26 million living veterans who served our Nation in times of peace and war. Many of them willingly entered harm's way to fight for our freedoms. These veterans have diverse religious beliefs and come from varying backgrounds and ethnicities. By their service, they kept America strong, and they have protected our way of life from tyranny's grip for over two centuries. At this moment, men and women of the armed services and reserve components, are serving around the world and also here at home. They represent our resolute dedication to achieving a lasting peace out of the new challenges and threats of the 21st century; and

WHEREAS: On Veterans' Day, let us pause to reflect on the sacrifices of all of those who have put on the uniform to serve in the United States military. Let us honor our veterans, who proved their heroism and love of country, time and time again. We shall always be grateful for the noble sacrifices made by these veterans. We can never adequately repay them. But we can honor and respect them for their service. As we consider the sacrifices and efforts of our veterans, we must never forget that freedom comes at a cost and we will never forget the men and women of past wars for whom there is still no accounting; now therefore be it
