Attorney explains bankruptcy as way to 'discharge' debts

BY PATRICIA A. LEVESH

Bankruptcy is a legal proceeding in which a person who is unable to pay his or her bills can get a fresh financial start. At the end of the process, some or all of your debts will be "discharged," meaning that you are no longer legally responsible for paying them.

Of the four types of bankruptcy cases provided under the law, Chapter 7 and Chapter 13 are the most common for individuals. Under Chapter 7, known as "straight" bankruptcy or "liquidation," you are asking the court to eliminate (discharge) all of your debts. You will be required to turn over certain assets to the bankruptcy trustee, who will sell them and distribute the proceeds to your creditors.

Many of your personal assets, such as household goods, furnishings and your car, may not be counted as assets in bankruptcy. In most cases, you will be able to keep all of your property. However, Chapter 7 bankruptcy will not relieve you of your obligations to pay a mortgage or car loan.

Chapter 13, called "debt adjustment," allows you to pay off some of your past-due and current debts over three to five years, according to a plan you submit to the bankruptcy court. Basically, you make one payment per month to the bankruptcy trustee and at the end of the three- or five-year plan, the trustee distributes the money to your creditors. Whatever debt remains at the end of your plan is discharged.

The advantage of Chapter 13 bankruptcy is that you can keep valuable property — especially your home and car — if you can make the payments to your plan. In most cases, these payments will be at least as much as your regular monthly payments on your mortgage or car loan, with some extra payment to get caught up on the amount you have fallen behind.

You should consider filing a Chapter 13 plan if you: own your own home and are in danger of losing it because of money problems; are behind on debt payments, but can catch up if given some time; have valuable property which is not exempt, but you can afford to pay creditors from your income over time.

You will need to have enough income in Chapter 13 to pay for your necessities and to keep up with the required payments as they come due.

In addition to discharging your debts, filing for bankruptcy may make it possible for you to: stop foreclosure on your house or mobile home and allow you an opportunity to catch up on missed payments (bankruptcy does not, however, automatically eliminate mortgages and other liens on your property without payment); prevent repossession of a car or other property; force a creditor to return property even after it has been repossessed; stop your wages from being garnished, a creditor from harassing you and other debt collection actions; restore or prevent shut off of utility service; allow you to challenge the claims of creditors who have committed fraud or who are otherwise trying to collect more than you really owe.

The process is started by filling out a bankruptcy petition and filing it in bankruptcy court. Your creditors must then immediately stop trying to collect debts from you, at least until your debts are sorted out according to the law. You do not need to continue making payments to creditors listed in your bankruptcy petition for past-due bills. You do need to continue making payments on your current bills for utilities, mortgages, car loans, etc.

Generally, after you file the petition, the court calls a "meeting of the creditors," during which the bankruptcy trustee will question you about the information you give in your petition. The trustee then will approve your plan (under Chapter 13) or allow the discharge (Chapter 7). The court sends you a notice of discharge, your financial slate is wiped clean, and you can start fresh with little or no outstanding debt.

Although many bankruptcies can be simple, it does involve a lot of paperwork to get the process started and to keep it going. It is best to get the assistance of an attorney familiar with the process to assist you.

The Senior Citizens' Law Project does not generally offer representation in bankruptcy cases but will accept cases in very limited circumstances. For more information, call the Senior Citizens' Law Project of Cambridge and Somerville Legal Services at 494-1800.

ELDER NOTES

Homework center volunteers needed

Cambridge School Volunteers needs people of all ages and backgrounds to help in elementary school classrooms, libraries, homework centers, and to tutor high school students, particularly in the subjects of mathematics, science and English as a second language.

Help is especially needed with the teacher-supervised homework centers in each neighborhood elementary school, Monday through Thursday from 2-4 pm. To volunteer or for more information, call 349-6794.

Reading intervention volunteers sought

Volunteers are needed for the Intergenerational Literacy Project, a program linking older volunteers with second-graders for early reading intervention, at the Haggerty and Fitzgerald elementary schools. All reading partners will be supervised by the program coordinator with frequent in-class visits and phone contact.

Responsibilities include tutoring, individually, one second-grader in reading skills two to three times a week for approximately 45 minutes per meeting during the school year and attending biweekly meetings with the program coordinator for reporting, feedback, information sharing and support.

To inquire or apply, call Lisa Van Vleck, Cambridge School Volunteers, at 349-6794.

Source Book of senior programs available

Too many senior citizens and their families live in despair for lack of services that do exist, but whose availability they may know nothing about. The Massachusetts Senior Action Council has taken steps to attack this problem head-on by writing a book.

"Senior retirees who have had little contact with government and government programs, and therefore have little knowledge of what may be available to them, will find this book invaluable," said Manny Weiner, MSAC legislative director and editor of the Source Book. "It will help them get on programs they badly need, but might not otherwise know about."

Al Norman, executive director of Mass. Home Care, agrees: "What older people and their families want most is access to good information, and the Source Book for Seniors is a good place to start."

Franklin Ollivierre, secretary of the state Office of Elder Affairs, added, "Thanks to the publication of this book, elders and providers now have a well-organized, easy-to-use guide to the many services available to elders and their families throughout the commonwealth. Helping the public find and access services is a job well worth doing. My congratulations to the Massachusetts Senior Action Council."

The Source Book for Seniors provides concise descriptions of health care, housing, legal, nutrition, home care and other services. It includes current eligibility guidelines and directions on how to apply to get more information about programs.

For more information, call MSAC's main office at 776-3100.

Ben Henry of Cambridge runs with the ball during a game Sunday in Bolton.

Pop Warner's Henry runs 'strong, fast and quick'

BY JONATHAN R. SEGAL
Chronicle Staff

Much like one of his favorite professional football players, Barry Sanders, 13-year-old Ben Henry runs over, through and around opposing defenses, thoroughly befuddling would-be tacklers.

Unlike Sanders, whose Detroit Lions team is struggling with a mediocre 5-5 record, Henry is the principal cog in the Cambridge Pop Warner B-team machine that heads to the New England Championships this week with an 11-0 record.

A quiet kid by nature, Henry takes it all in stride. Ask the team running back how he has managed to torch opponents for 37 touchdowns this season and he modestly says, "I just try to run by them."

But ask Henry's head coach, Dennis Dottin, and the truth comes out. "Ben is really unbelievable," said Dottin. "He hits a hole and he is gone. He is strong, fast, quick and confident."

Talk about dominance. Of the 296 points the B team has scored this season, Henry has accounted for 202. And from his middle linebacker position on defense, Henry is considered an equally explosive tackler.

"What a lot of people don't realize about Ben is that he's a very good defensive player too," Dottin said. "He is our anchor."

Henry started playing football three years ago with the resurrection of Cambridge Pop Warner. After two stints on the Warriors C team, he was elevated to the B team this season. The rest is history.

After a stellar regular season, in which Henry amassed over 2,000 yards rushing, the eighth grader has been virtually unstoppable in the post-season.

In the EMass semifinals against Merrimack, Henry rushed for more than 200 yards and scored five TD's. In the EMass title game with Waltham, Henry hit paydirt three more times, on runs of 55, 60, and 56 yards. And in the first round of the New England Championships, Henry added three more scores.

The statistics beg the question: Can anybody stop Henry?

At the Pop Warner level, where Henry has developed a reputation for dragging linebackers and safeties into the end zone, the 5-foot-4-inch 127-pound rusher seems invincible.

As for next year, when Henry will be playing against high school level competition for Cambridge Rindge & Latin, he will need to bulk up. Part of that strengthening process is left to nature. The rest is up to him.

Talk about dominance.Of the 296 points the B team has scored this season, Henry has accounted for 202.

Those who have gotten to know Henry are confident he'll put in the requisite time in the weight room. "He is really dedicated so I don't think that will be a problem," said Dottin. "I see him as a 190-pounder by his senior year."

Henry at 190 pounds? The Greater Boston League must already be shuddering at the thought. "He is going to be devastating," Dottin said.

What might be Henry's most impressive quality, though, is he hasn't let success go to his head. This was never more evident than in the aftermath of last Thursday's thrilling 25-22 victory over Waltham. As most of the Cambridge entourage of players, coaches and parents celebrated boisterously, Henry, who was chiefly responsible for the victory, walked off the field quietly.

"He is one of those quiet team leaders," said Dottin. "One of those players any coach would love to have."

Sounds a lot like a player named Sanders. No, not Deion. Barry Sanders: the antithesis of Neon but Prime Time just the same, a fitting model for Henry.

To The Honorable, The City Council:

As the City Council is aware, the City's FY94 Capital Budget included an appropriation of $5,000,000 to be used for the purpose of providing Community Development Block Grant Section 108 loans to selected biotechnology and related industry firms. The purpose of the program is to provide loan or guarantee assistance to firms seeking to locate or expand within Cambridge. The Section 108 funds are to be used as gap financing to complement private sources of funds for the build out of specialized laboratory space. All applicants must provide additional funds to leverage any section 108 funding.

As the City Council was advised at the time of the original appropriation, Section 108 Loans will be repaid by the loan recipient and the City's interest will be protected by a form of collateral on the project. Since the original $5,000,000 Section 108 appropriation, the City has been informed by its bond counsel that 108 funds are technically a loan from the Federal Government to the City. Therefore, the City Council must authorize the borrowing pursuant to Chapter 44, as the Council does on all borrowings. Attached please find a copy of the loan authorization.

Passage of this request is strongly recommended.

Very truly yours,

Robert W. Healy
City Manager
