Crime watch

Serious crime drops in first quarter of '86

By Anthony Paolillo
Chief of Police

Crime trend statistics released by our Crime Analysis Unit covered January through March 1986 indicated that serious crime dropped 7 percent when compared with the first quarter of 1985.

A further analysis reveals that violent crime decreased 9 percent while property crime fell 7 percent when compared with the 1985 figures. Major reductions were recorded in the following crime categories: Assault (-14 percent); Auto Theft (-14 percent); Robbery (-11 percent); and Larceny (-8 percent). After two of the lowest Crime Indexes ever recorded in Cambridge in 1984 and 1985, the downward spiral of crime continues. A complete crime breakdown can be found below.

January to March 1985	CRIME	TOTAL
	RAPE	7
	ROBBERY	98
	ASSAULT	76
	BURGLARY	319
	LARCENY	701
	AUTO THEFT	305
	INDEX TOTAL	1506

January to March 1986	Crime	Total	% Change
	MURDER	1
	ROBBERY	87	-11%
	ASSAULT	65	-14%
	BURGLARY	334	+4%
	LARCENY	641	-8%
	AUTO THEFT	260	-14%
	INDEX TOTAL	1398	-7%

The first murder recorded in Cambridge in over twenty months occurred in March. Four subjects have been arrested and charged with murder in this case. Dating back to 1978 only three murders remain unsolved in Cambridge.

Rape continues the steady decline that this crime has been experiencing over the past two years. The trend of the majority of the victims having a prior acquaintance with the rapist has also continued.

Robbery fell 11 percent during the first three months of 1986. This decline can be traced to a drop in Commercial robberies from eight to four per month. Major pattern of the year so far was in Mid-Cambridge during early January. This problem was eradicated with the arrest of three juveniles who were operating in this area.

The total of 1410 burglaries reported in Cambridge in 1985 was the lowest total recorded in Cambridge since 1970, so the slight increase of 15 breaks over the first 3 months of 1986 is not alarming. Major housebreak pattern of year is a weekend nighttime pattern in Neighborhood No. 9. Neighborhood No. 6 continues to experience a sharp decline in housebreaks.

The trend of declining assaults continues. However, domestic, traffic, and alcohol related assaults are on the rise.

While larcenies from motor vehicles continue to fall, the theft of personal items and office equipment from buildings around the city during working hours has risen over the past two years. Major pattern involved pick pockets working restaurants in Harvard Square on Saturday afternoons between 12 and 7PM.

The total of 1257 auto thefts reported in Cambridge in 1985 was the lowest total in this city since 1970. This declining trend has continued with a 14 percent reduction registered for the first three months of 1986. The implementation of the department's auto theft unit, the governor's auto theft strike force, and increased citizen's awareness and prevention, are all responsible for the decline in this crime.

For further information on this topic contact Lt. George A. Donovan of the Community Services Bureau at 498-9318.

Hospital pathology dept. named for Hori

Cambridge Hospital's Department of Pathology and Laboratories was recently dedicated to Dr. George C. Hori, former chief of the department who retired in 1985.

By order of the Cambridge City Council, Hori was honored for "15 years of exemplary service as Chief of Pathology."

Said Dr. John Bruschi, Department of Medicine, at the dedication ceremony, "It is far harder to gain perspective of the accomplishments of a person with whom we work daily. Familiarity is a great impediment to objectivity. Dr. Hori, in his self-effacing manner is a prime example of this phenomenon."

Born in Japan, Hori was educated in Canada and graduated from the University of Chicago School of Medicine. He achieved board certification in surgery in Canada. In 1953, Hori founded and directed Jean Talon Hospital in Montreal, while conducting a busy surgical practice. Hori moved to Cambridge in 1963 to study at Harvard Medical School before achieving board certification in anatomic, clinical and forensic pathology, as well as a diploma from the National Board of Medical Examiners. While he was assistant professor of pathology at Harvard Medical School, Hori became the chief of pathology at The Cambridge Hospital and at Youville Hospital in 1970. In 1978, while directing the Laboratories of Cambridge and Youville, he assumed the position of Chief of Pathology and Director of Laboratory Services at Harvard University Health Services.

At The Cambridge Hospital, Hori established strict standards for quality, upgraded diagnostic equipment, and installed the first computer system to store and disseminate results to the clinician.

Scouts set merit badge seminar

The Boy Scouts of the Cambridge Council, Boy Scouts of America, will have a unique opportunity to participate in a merit badge seminar as part of the Inner-city Spring Scout Camp to be operated at St. Mary's High School beginning on Sunday, April 20.

The purpose of the seminar will be the presentation of those merit badges required for advancement to Eagle Scout rank. All the merit badges involved are the ones not normally earned at summer camp. Making the badges available during the spring period will enable the Scouts to concentrate on the outdoor related badges during the summer camp season.

Merit badges offered during the seminar will include; first aid, emergency preparedness, citizenship in the community, citizenship in the nation, citizenship in the world, communications, safety, and personal management. The scouts will work with approved merit badge counselors every evening beginning on April 20 and ending on April 27. Intensive instruction will be offered during the seminar with the Scouts expected to complete additional work on the badges during the April school vacation.

The merit badge seminar will be under the direction of Paul Langley, executive vice-president of the Cambridge Council, Boy Scouts of America. Other adult scouters involved in the seminar are; Ted Coffman, Paul Brochu, David Cann, and Paul Doherty. The adult scouters will serve as merit badge counselors and prime instructors for the badges.

Assisting the adults counselors will be instructors; John DesJardin, Steve Langley, Kevin Mitrano, and Tim O'Connor. Nancy Coffman and Marcella Fitzpatrick will serve as coordinators for the many Scouts expected to attend the seminar. Security for the event will be handled by the Explorers of Law Enforcement Post 2100 sponsored by the Cambridge Police Department. Advisor Frank Burns will be in charge of the Explorers during the seminar.

Boy Scouts moving along the advancement trail with the aim of becoming Eagle Scouts are required to earn 24 merit badges. Experience has shown that the camping related badges can be earned during the period that a Scout is in attendance at Camp Quinapoxet. Many Scouts encounter problems when they are faced with the possibility of earning merit badges back in "the city." Making the badges available during the seminar will solve the problem and also create the atmosphere for the Scouts who expect to reach Eagle to advance.

Cable corner

How cable TV works

Cable television is the distribution of radio-frequency television signals to subscriber's tv sets via a coaxial cable as opposed to broadcasting over the air. The local cable operator uses various antennas and microwave dishes to receive the tv signals from nearby and distant signals.

At the "head-end" sophisticated electronic equipment processes the signals for distribution to subscriber homes. The signals are distributed via a network of coaxial cable either attached to telephone poles or placed in underground conduit. Because cable television signals lose amplification as they travel through the cable, a series of amplifiers are placed at strategic locations along the cable network from the "head-end" to the customer's residence. These amplifiers power the signals down all the streets and roads throughout the town.

The cable is brought into the house and attached to the back of the television set. In most instances, this means "dropping a line" from the utility pole to the customer's private residence. In an apartment building a cable is run from a building distribution system to an individual apartment.

The final piece of equipment is the converter box which allows greater channel capacity and authorizes each subscribers level of service.

Construction Update
Aerial construction will continue during the next two weeks on the following streets: Albany St., Ames St., Amherst St., Athenaeum St., Bedford St., Bent St., Berkshire Pl., Binney St., Bristol St., Broadway St., Cambridge St., Charlton St., Charles

Food for Free adds new site

Starting Monday, April 21, Norfolk Street Congregate Housing will be a new Food For Free Committee, Inc. food delivery site.

Food For Free is a Cambridge-based hunger relief agency currently delivering supplemental food to numerous Cambridge housing developments including Jefferson Park, Newtowne Court, Manning Apartments, Roosevelt Towers and Millers River Apartments. Food For Free also delivers food to community feeding programs throughout the city and offers its trucking services to the Cambridge Food Pantry Network.

Norfolk Street Congregate Housing (a low-income housing complex for the elderly) was formally approved by Food For Free as a program site at the April board of directors meeting.

Suzanne Motheral, a Food For Free staffer responsible for deliveries to housing sites, commented, "It is clear that the need for food aid is growing. Requests for our services have greatly increased this past year. Food For Free responds by recycling store foods that would otherwise be wasted and buys bulk food at wholesale prices for delivery to needy Cambridge residents and to agencies serving the poor and homeless. Our distribution capabilities are in large part dependent upon the generosity of local food merchants, whose donations of perishable foods we collect seven days a week."

For more information about Food For Free programs, Food For Free can be reached through the Cambridge Economic Opportunity Committee, 11 Inman St., Cambridge, 02139 or by phone at 868-2900.

Don't expect paints to conceal all the flaws in a surface...before you paint, fill holes and cracks with spackle, patching plaster or plastic wood, depending on the material...sand down rough spots and remove any loose paint...if the old paint is in very poor condition, remove it before applying fresh paint...also, paint won't hold if applied over a dirty surface...a vacuum cleaner is fine for removing loose dirt and dust, but you'll have to wash a surface to get rid of grime and grease...a household detergent or wall and woodwork cleaner is good for this job...

Arts council director

of visual arts and exhibitions for the New Orleans World's Fair and then as director of the Louisiana Children's Museum) New England, and the north in general, are not alien territory to Hebert, who studied painting and poetry at New York's New School for Social Research in the late 1960s and served as director of the Provincetown Art Association from 1978 to 1982. She has also taught, both in New Orleans and Provincetown, and held a number of positions through the late 70s at the New Orleans Museum of Art. Her poems have appeared in a number of publications and have earned her prizes in 1970 and 1973 from the American Academy of Poets. Her seven-page curriculum vitae reveals a woman who has not stood idle for too long.

Hebert comes to Cambridge at a significant point in the arts council's evolution. Now in its 11th year and enjoying a deserved reputation as arguably the best arts council in the state, the agency has gone through the usual turmoil which tends to befall any organization during its early years.

Born during the times when public support of the arts was still considered somewhat of a radical notion, the council, and its founders, had to chart their own course in the early years. Today, the Cambridge Arts Council sets such high standards of professionalism and success that it is studied as a model by other arts councils, not only in Massachusetts, but throughout the nation.

The council achieved increasing effectiveness through the years and hit its stride during the five-year tenure of Chris Connaire as executive director. While one might assume it's more difficult to take the helm of an organization that is in trouble, it's probably just as tough to assume command of a successful organization because one is inevitably compared to one's predecessor.

For her part, Hebert readily acknowledges the council's many achievements under Connaire. But, as a good administrator, she also knows that her own success will depend in large part on making her own mark, assembling her own staff and setting out her own priorities. It is not coincidental, she says without needing to elaborate, that "bridges" has been chosen as the theme of this year's Cambridge River Festival. It is not just the bridge between administrations that Hebert is talking about, but, more to the point, the bridges between necessary evolutionary stages in the council's development.

To the question, "do you enjoy the job," Hebert answers directly, "My answer, now, is 'yes.'"

As one would expect, the last four months have been busy ones for Hebert; so busy in fact, that Hebert has yet to unpack since her move from New Orleans and confesses that she is still relying primarily on three color-coded outfits.

Hebert has spent much of the last few months doing what she obviously considers the key to success in any endeavor — learning.

"I am the kind of person who wants to learn everything overnight," she says. "I am a perfectionist. I like to do my homework. I want all the information yesterday."

Given that stated dedication to learning, it is not surprising that Hebert spent much time and energy learning about Cambridge even before she was tapped for the arts council job. And even though she knew the city "as a writer and an artist," she found there was even more to learn when looking at the city as its prospective arts administrator.

"I found there were two million layers to Cambridge," she says. "I learned the wide range of things that are Cambridge and that all of those things nourish the neighborhoods."

"Listening" peppers Hebert's conversation almost as much as the word "learning," because, she says, you can't accomplish the second without the process of the first. Accordingly, Annabelle Hebert has done a great deal of listening — to the community, the city's political leaders, to artists, and to members of the council staff. It is the council's primary function, she says, to be "responsive to and sensitive to the community."

"Much of my background has been in community programs," she says. "The arts council has a glorious privilege...to amplify and fulfill its role of being a community agency."

By learning about how the council has fulfilled its obligations to the community in the past, Hebert hopes not only to make sure the council continues to fulfill that role, but to expand it as well.

"Listening and innovation are not mutually exclusive," she says, adding that the challenge is to decide "what we are moving toward, how we are going to get there, while at the same time dealing with your history. To know where you're going, you have to know where you've been."

Among those who know where the council has been are staff veterans like Pallas Lombardi, who has headed the Arts on the Line program for six of its eight years and is also the director of public art.

Both Lombardi and Roy-Alan Hansen, deputy executive director, describe the transition between the Connaire and Hebert administrations as "long," but both also say they expected that. What's more important, they both share enthusiastic support for Hebert.

Citing Hebert's community-based experience, Lombardi says she is "very excited by where (Hebert) wants to take the organization, with an even greater emphasis on public art."

While both Lombardi and Hansen praise Connaire's administration, they also understand that an organization like the arts council is bound to reflect the personality of its administrator.

"Chris and Annabelle have different styles, but it has not been unpleasant working for either one of them," says Hansen, adding that staff members had "more specific functions" under Connaire, but that there is now a shift in emphasis to what he describes as "a more rounded perception" of staff responsibilities.

"This is an exciting period for the council," he says.

It's obviously an exciting time for the council's new executive director as well.

"In many ways," she says, "the council and Cambridge have given much more to me than I could ever give back."

Maybe, but if experience, talent and enthusiasm are any indication, you can bet Annabelle Hebert will, as usual, give her very best shot.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

ROBERT W. HEALY

April 14, 1986

RICHARD C. ROSSI

Deputy City Manager

To the Honorable, The City Council:

Attached is an order requesting the appropriation of $2,400,000 to the Schools Public Investment Fund account to provide funds for renovations to various elementary and high school buildings and the authorization to borrow to fund this appropriation.

In the Public Investment Section of the FY87 Budget, $2,910,000 has been allocated for school projects. Of this amount, $510,000 in General Fund Revenues will be used to replace the Morse School Roof and to purchase seven school buses. The remainder of this allocation, $2,400,00 in bond proceeds, will be used to finance the following projects:

- . Phases II and III of the Harrington School Renovation Project.
- . King School Roof Replacement and Engineering Study.
- . Phase II of the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School Air Quality Improvement Project.
- . Replacement of Haggerty School Roof.
- . Renovations to War Memorial Physical Education Facility.
- . Phase I of Restroom Renovation Project.

It was my original intent to submit the appropriation and authorization to borrow for the school projects with the other projects which comprise the $9,250,000 bond issue included in the Public Investment Fund. However, the following two factors make it advisable to authorize the school projects as soon as possible.

The School Department has been informed that projects approved by the School Building Assistance Board and the State Board of Education will qualify for 90% reimbursement on both principal and interest costs. However, in order for these projects to be considered under current law, the request must be submitted to the School Building Assistance Board by April 30, 1986 to be included on the agenda of the State Board of Education's June meeting. In order for this timetable to be met, the first vote on this authorization must be taken on April 14 with the final vote on April 28. It is important to note that pending legislation, which would apply to projects considered after June 30, 1986, may reduce the level of funding for school construction reimbursement and revise the allocation formulas.

In addition, it is necessary for Phases II and III of the Harrington School renovation project to begin as soon as possible to insure that the work be substantially completed over the summer to avoid displacement of students in the school. In order for a contract to be signed to begin this work, an appropriation order must be approved by the City Council.

Although I would prefer to have the school projects considered as part of the entire Capital Projects Plan, I realize that the factors described above make a compelling case to expedite this matter.

Very truly yours,
