Programs & Services

Walnut Street Center provides a comprehensive array of programs and services for persons with developmental disabilities. These services include:

Social Services. These include coordination of agency services; consultation with individuals, families, and other community agencies; crisis intervention and short-term counseling; advocacy and liaison with private and public institutions.

Work/Work Support Services. These include training, employment placement, and on-the-job support for individuals working in private industry; employment in the Center's own light industry facility; and transition to independent work.

Residential Services. The residential services provide a variety of residential environments, from highly staffed living situations with intensive training to independent-living apartments with minimal support services as needed.

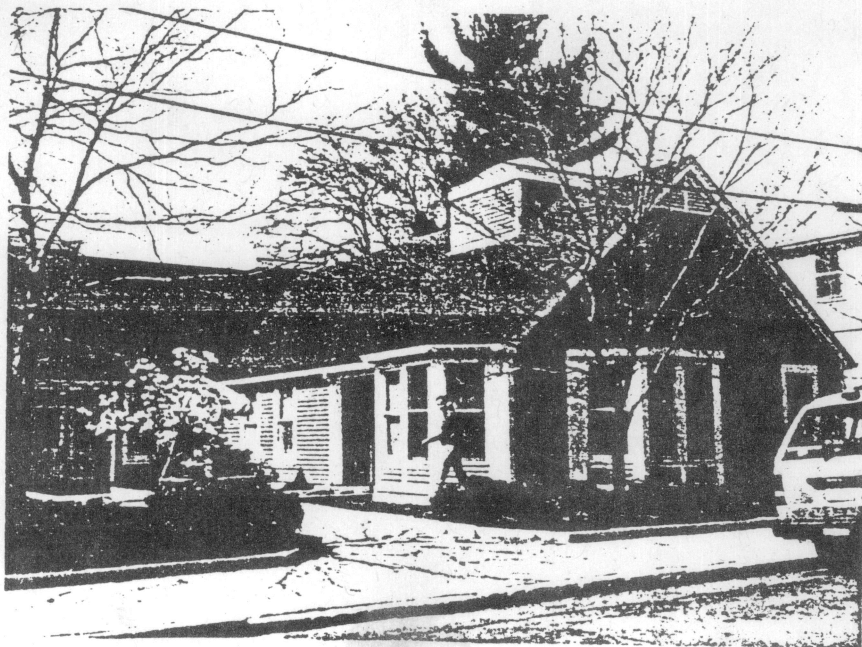

Respite Services. This consists of in-home respite and short-term, overnight care, on a regular and emergency basis, at Walnut Street's respite facility.

Recreational Programs. Leisure-time activities are offered for adolescents, adults, and elders. Included are arts, crafts, exercise and sports, and special events such as dining, theatre, bowling, concerts, and Special Olympics.

Consultation and Training Services. These include behavioral consultation to agencies and families for individual treatment programs, and qualified training in non-violent techniques for staff in human services.

The programs and services provided by the Walnut Street Center are funded by the individuals and families who make use of them; the Massachusetts Department of Mental Retardation; donations from private citizens and businesses; contract work for industry; and in-kind contributions from the communities we serve.

Walnut Street Center is a non-profit agency whose governing board includes area business and professional people, parents of persons with developmental disabilities, and other interested citizens.
