Farmers' Market makes return to Central Square

The Cambridge Farmers' Market makes its return on Friday, May 10, at noon until 6 pm at lot 5 on Bishop Allen Drive in Central Square.

The Market's usual day is Monday. The opening of May 10 is to accommodate Mother's Day, which falls on Sunday, May 12. The farmers will bring plenty of potted flowers and herbs.

The next Market will be Monday, May 20, then skipping Memorial Day, the Market will reconvene Monday, June 3, and continue Mondays through Thanksgiving week. If the reconstruction of lot 6 is completed by June, the Market will move back to its regular place.

Two new farms will be coming to the market, Enterprise Farm, an organic grower from the Connecticut River Valley, and Revival Herbs from the same location. They will bring medicinal and regular herbs in addition to potted plants.

Early farmers are Watras Produce, Dick's Market Garden from Lunenburg (the earliest greenhouse tomatoes), Coolidge Farm from Bolton (honey and maple syrup besides geraniums, etc.), and Smith's Country Cheese (Winchendon — cheeses, eggs and organic beef).

Not returning is Verrill Farm's asparagus and asparagus soup. June will bring the other farms as their produce comes in. Scheduled are Kimball Fruit Farm from Pepperell (strawberries), Wally's Vegetables from Haverhill (corn), Good Earth Organic Farm from Putnam, Conn., Farmer Al's Place (Lancaster — Kallaloo) and Paradise Flowers (Ipswich).

As in past years, coupons redeemable only at farmers markets will be issued to WIC mothers, to low income elders and to low income families. Some $40,000 in coupons will be issued in July and August to people in Cambridge, Somerville, Arlington and Medford.

Somerville's market is located in Davis Square and will open Wednesday, June 12. Farmers also donate produce at the end of the markets to Food For Free and Project Soup for distribution to Cambridge and Somerville meal programs and food pantries.

COMMUNITY NOTES

'E-Call' puts Cambridge recycling at your fingertips

Cambridge residents can now dial one number, R-E-C-Y-C-L-E, for answers to all their recycling questions 24 hours a day.

Dialing RECYCLE, (732-9253), connects callers to a statewide recycling hotline dubbed "E-Call." After calling, touch-tone in your zip code and hear a voice mail message packed with the latest details on recycling in Cambridge.

The hotline provides fast answers to common questions. Callers can learn when the Hampshire Street recycling center is open or when the next household hazardous waste collection day is.

when businesses which are interested in promoting recycling join forces with the environmental groups and government to solve our most pressing environmental problems," said Trudy Cox, Massachusetts secretary of environmental affairs.

Matthew Costello, E-Call's executive director, said civic organizations and "good corporate citizens" interested in becoming an E-Call sponsor can call him at 742-8090 for more information.

Learn parenting from the pros

Families First in Central Square has provided support for parents and families through professional parent-season for all kinds of parents," said Linda Braun, executive director. "We have a number of programs at the public schools and in shelters here and have worked on a young parent program with the city human service department."

Parents can join groups on single parenting, on raising gay and lesbian teens, and on problem-solving in the family.

"We were built on the belief that all parents need information and guidance and that this is not an indication of dysfunction," Braun said. "We try to prevent future problems."

Families First scholarships and programs in homeless shelters have been funded by grants, some from local corporations such as the Polaroid Foundation and Stride Rite.

Citizens sought for library committee

City Manager Robert Healy is seeking members for the Citizens' Citywide Advisory Committee for the main library renovation and expansion project. Representation is needed from all parts of the city.

The committee will review the proposed program and design to assure that it includes what is needed for a modern library to serve the citizens of Cambridge into the 21st century, while making sure that the existing open space is protected as much as possible, that plans for traffic and parking are satisfactory, and that, where appropriate, program elements be assigned to branch li-

FARMERS' MARKETS
Cambridge at Central Square
Somerville at Davis Square
Oakes Plimpton, Market Master

Memorandum to the Mayor's Office, City Council, DPW, Parking & Traffic, Dep'ts of Health & Planning of the City of Cambridge -- March 18, 1996

The Cambridge Farmers' Market plans to open Friday, May 10th at 12 Noon (until 6 PM) at the Norfolk Street parking lot, Central Square, and then Monday, May 20th and the following Mondays through Thanksgiving week, save for Memorial Day Monday. This is the same schedule we followed last year, the Friday opening to bring plants to accomodate Mother's Day shoppers. The farmers will use the same section of the parking lot as it has the last 10 years (the bay next to Norfolk Street). The reconstruction leaves the Market with a little less room, but we will be able to make do.

I enclose a list of the farmers and other Market contacts. As last year, there will be Market Coupons issued to WIC mothers, low income elderly and homeless people to give them access to the fresh produce of the Market. Also the farmers donate produce at the end of the Market to Food For Free for distribution to food pantries and shelters. Liability insurance is being contracted for -- the same as last year's policy, which I enclose. I also enclose the Market flyer. Thank you for your consideration.

Cooperatively,

Oakes Plimpton
