FAYERWEATHER—Ruth Sellina Fayerweather of Hartford, Vermont, died March 24, in Norwood, Massachusetts, after a sudden illness. Both her sides were Charles, John, and her sons, Charles of Sharon, Massachusetts, and James of Simsbury, Connecticut. She is also survived by three grandchildren, Lily, Andy and Sarah, and by two brothers, George U. Selina, Jr. and Donald P. Selina, both of Bristol, Connecticut. She was the daughter of the late George U. Selina, Sr. and Lillian Lounsbury. Born in Bellows Falls, Vermont in 1919, Mrs. Fayerweather had a lifelong love affair with her native state and, after leaving Vermont to attend college in the north, returned to live in the woods, appreciating, studying, and later, teaching about nature. She grew up in Bristol, Connecticut, where she attended school, graduating from Bristol High School in 1937 and the nearby Teachers College of Connecticut. She fondly remembered summers during this period spent on her uncle's farm in Vermont. She taught for a while at Bristol High School and then at the Packard School, a junior college in New York City. After marrying John Fayerweather while she lived in the Boston area for many years, while her husband taught at New York University's Business School, she lived in Hastings-on-Hudson, New York, where, with her husband, she wrote and edited "The International Executive," a digest of articles of interest to the academic international business community. As a mother during those years, she was a volunteer nature teacher in the local schools and took an active part in fighting to preserve natural areas in the community. In 1982 she realized a lifelong dream which she and her husband retired and moved to a deep setting surrounded by woods and mountains in the Hartford, Vermont. She, her husband and views in her sons designed and built their home with their own hands; one of her proudest achievements. Mrs. Fayerweather was an active member of the Christian Science Church and contributed articles to the Christian Science Monitor. In recent years, she spent the winter months in Norwood and Middlebury, Massachusetts. Mourning will be observed at the home of Charles and Carol Fayerweather through Tuesday, 7-9 p.m. A private memorial service will be held at a later date. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to The Vermont Community Foundation, 3 Court Street, Middlebury, VT 05753, or The Nature Conservancy, 27 State Street, Montpelier, VT 05602.
