Resolution of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in honor of

VAUGHN A. CRAYTON

on the occasion of the presentation of the

MIT PRESIDENT'S AWARD FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE

In November 1994, MIT established the annual Cambridge Community Service Day to recognize the significant efforts of citizens, elected officials, community organizations, businesses, and academic institutions that have made community service a priority.

Today, November 21, 1995, we are again celebrating the strong spirit of volunteerism and community service that exists in Cambridge by honoring individuals from the MIT and Cambridge communities who have devoted their time, energy, and talents to enhancing the quality of life in this city.

Vaughn Crayton has been a loyal employee of the MIT Physical Plant Department since 1987. On and off the job, he has served us a model of good citizenship and dedication to his community.

For the past sixteen years, Vaughn has been reaching out to more than 900 Cambridge youths as both a coach and referee in the Cambridge Youth Soccer League, and most recently, as a coach in the Cambridge Pop Warner Football League. During each autumn and spring season, Vaughn has devoted countless hours of his time and energy to providing healthy recreational opportunities for neighborhood children in Cambridge. At the end of each season, Vaughn has continued working with the boys and girls to teach them techniques in athletic training and physical fitness.

Cambridge is a better place for our children because of Vaughn Crayton. He is an outstanding role model for our youth, who need strong teachers, counselors, and coaches to look up to in today's society now more than ever. He stands as a marvelous example of a citizen who gives back to his local community. The lessons he teaches the children of Cambridge will serve them well as they become adults. The parks, playing fields, and gymnasiums of Cambridge are filled with great potential because of Vaughn's quiet devotion to the parents and children who use them.

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED:

That as an expression of our gratitude, Vaughn Crayton be recognized and honored for his commitment to the Cambridge community and be presented with the MIT President's Award for Community Service
