Security plan at CRLS readied for fall opening

but not with enthusiasm.

"We can't afford it," said Berman.

Mayor Francis Duehay, chairman of the committee, said, "I believe there has been a tendency for teacher aides to replace school teachers in cafeterias, class corridors, and so on. Rather than supplement what teachers do, they take over certain duties. The artificial separation of duties is very unwise professionally," he said. "Teachers and educators are trained to deal with youth. I believe that what teachers do in informal settings is just as important as what goes on in the classroom."

The rest of the security plan is a mix of prevention and crisis management. It includes ten hand-held radios, four metal detectors, monthly locker inspections (for weapons or drugs), a new internal communication system, hall passes for students, visitors and substitutes, and a special switchboard hook-up to handle incoming calls in an emergency.

The blueprint also provides for planning food and music programs with an eye out for the possible negative behavioral impact of sugar and stimulants, and hard rock, respectively.

Guards will be hired to protect the building at night and on weekends, according to the plan. And about 10 hall monitors, hired several years ago to keep corridors orderly, will be retained next year.

Committeewomen Alice Wolf and Henrietta Attles both voiced concern over the handling of potential troublemakers in the system. Attles said the plan should have spelled out a suspension policy.

"When you just put students out on the street, they pose a problem for security," she said, adding that she favors an "in-house suspension" which keeps students in school in an isolated classroom, and allows them to continue studying.

Wolf said the school should "deal with those kids who just aren't making it" by evaluating the pupil and deciding "on a very individual basis" what approach to take.

Noting close ties between many black and East Cambridge students to their churches, Fantini said "one thing Henrietta Attles and I talked about was an ecumenical service prior to school opening." (Colosimo, an East Cambridge youth, was killed in a scuffle between blacks and whites.) "I think it might work," Fantini said, adding, "There isn't much we haven't tried."

Problems of high school security date back to the late sixties, when racial tension became a prominent issue. Over the years, a number of educational programs, like the Student Service Center, have been launched to try to decrease student alienation from the schools, and a few internal security measures, such as the hall monitors, have been instigated as well.

The Colosimo death was the first killing the Cambridge high school, however, and this year's security plan is the first full-scale, detailed blueprint to directly address the issue of safety.

Fire Alarm

A fire in a vacant first floor apartment at 24 Roosevelt Towers destroyed the kitchen cabinets and sink on July 20. The alarm was called in at 10:34 p.m. and fire was coming from the apartment when firefighters arrived. The blaze was quickly extinguished and other apartments received minor smoke damage. The all out for this one alarm fire was transmitted at 10:58 p.m.

The Cambridge Fire Department assisted the Somerville Department battling a blaze at the Mahades Packing Company. Heavy smoke and fire was coming from this vacant three-story meat packing plant at South and Water Streets in Somerville on July 23. Cambridge Box 211 was pulled at 6:44 p.m. and the Cambridge companies were requested by Somerville to assist in controlling this fire. The all out was transmitted at 8:09 p.m.

Firefighters fought a smoky one alarm fire at 149 Richdale Avenue on July 25. Smoke was coming from the second floor and attic when the fire department arrived shortly after 1:14 p.m. when the fire was reported.

All occupants of the house escaped without injury although some firefighters received minor injuries. The fire was burning in a bathroom and kitchen ceiling on the first floor. It also spread to the second floor hallway. Hose lines were stretched to all floors of this 2½ story wood dwelling to extinguish and prevent any further extension of the fire. A normal one alarm assignment of six fire companies and one deputy fire chief responded to this alarm. The all out was transmitted at 3:25 p.m.

The Fire Department responded to 182 calls for the week of July 20 thru 26.

Cantabulations

Marine Pfc. Yves Regis, son of St. Louis Regis and Clermicie Constantin, both of 364 Rindge Ave., recently participated in Cuban refugee assistance operations. A 1979 graduate of Dorchester High School, he joined the Marine Corps in July 1979. He is a member of the 1st Battalion, 8th marines based at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

JEAN-PAUL DESPRES of 143 Harvey St., has been on scholarship at the Chapel-Hill Chauncy Hill Prep School in Waltham for the past four years. A recent graduate of the school, he was extremely active in sports and won varsity letters in tennis, basketball and lacrosse. He will attend Brandeis University in September.

Union revote tomorrow and make him more competitive with private mechanics or MBTA employees who make $11 an hour while he earns just $7. Because he isn't a longtime employee, the city's longevity pay increases weren't enough to make him change his mind.

Another worker said that the contract was as good as could be expected.

The package was fine for the city's library workers, who last week unanimously approved a contract similar to Local 195's. According to union president Bliss Madison, the library workers received the same pay increases, with the same longevity benefits. While Local 195 was offered $104 per employee for a fringe benefit fund, the library workers will get educational benefits of $100 per semester, $200 for the year.

"We were pleased," said Madison. "It's been a rough year for negotiating, and we figured it's the best we could get."

The police and firefighter negotiations are still being handled by the state Joint Labor Management Committee. According to committee spokesman Chris Kent, Peter Doeringer was named factfinder in the firefighters case July 17. He will gather information and present a report to the sides, Kent said.

The police and city are still talking with state mediator Peter Grotsky. Kent said that if Grotsky is unable to pull the sides together, a factfinder may be appointed before entering binding arbitration.

Southview Corp. sues city

According to corporation principal Robert Jones, Southview wants a ruling on the rent board's authority to regulate apartments occupied by tenants who have not bought into the coop. The board says these tenants are still under its purview, but Jones says they, like coop shareholders themselves, fall outside the city's rent control law.

"We have gone to counsel. They have told us we are obeying the law; the rent board says we are not," said Jones. "We are asking the court to tell us are we obeying the law or are we breaking the law."

In a cooperative buyers purchase shares of a building and then rent their units from the cooperative. Condominium owners, on the other hand, hold individual mortgages on their apartments.

According to rent board rulings, coop shareholders who live in their units, while technically tenants, are not covered by rent control. However, the board also says that tenants who do not own shares of the cooperative fall under its jurisdiction. It is this latter regulation that Southview is challenging.

Meanwhile, the City Council votes Monday night on an order to include cooperatives in the language of its removal permit ordinance, a move that sponsor David Sullivan has said is a formality. Coops already fall under the ordinance, Sullivan maintains. Commenting on the Southview suit, he said:

"I think it's important for the Rent Control Board to counterclaim against Southview for what they're doing. It's important for the Rent Control Board not just to sit and take a passive attitude in this."

Rent Control Director Peter Stanton could not be reached for comment.

Southview has notified Arlington Street tenants rents will increase in September, according to CSLS lawyer Curry, something they will be allowed to do without regulation if they win their court case.

No date has yet been set on the hearing on that complaint.

Since Arlington Street went cooperative a handful of other buildings, also stymied condo conversions, have attempted to go the coop route.

CHLS' 42 reunion planned

The Cambridge High and Latin School Class of 1942 will hold its 38th reunion Saturday, October 18 at the Howard Johnson's on Memorial Drive. Cocktails begin at 6:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 7:30.

Waste dumping ring broken; 6 held

By SUSAN V. HANDS
Staff Writer

Massachusetts and New Jersey police yesterday arrested six men, including a Halifax Board of Health member, on charges involving illegal dumping of hazardous waste in Plymouth and Halifax last February. Some of those arrested have links to organized crime, authorities said.

The six, and a seventh man still sought by police yesterday, were named in secret indictments returned last week by a Plymouth Country grand jury as part of a continuing investigation of alleged interstate criminal schemes that made Massachusetts a dumping ground for hazardous waste from New Jersey.

Among those arrested yesterday was Franklin Dias, 38, a truck driver and member of the Halifax Board of Health; Albert Giovanella, 44, owner of a Plymouth trucking company, and John Albert, 45, owner of Samson Tank Cleaning of Bayonne, N.J.

Richard French, 56, of Maine, president of Chem-Waste of Derry, N.H. still was sought yesterday.

Giovanella and Albert have been cited by law enforcement officials as having affiliations with known organized crime syndicates. Both are under investigation by the Plymouth grand jury on other criminal waste dumping incidents, including a dump in Kingston, Mass., where more than 1,000 barrels are thought to be buried.

French and Chem-Waste, which had its license revoked last April, are under investigation in Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire for several other incidents involving illegal interstate hauling, storage and disposal of hazardous waste.

The indictments announced yesterday are part of an investigation of an alleged criminal network that took thousands of dollars from New Jersey companies on the premise of legally disposing hazardous waste at a licensed landfill in Model Cities, N.Y., owned by SCA Chemical Services of Boston, according to Massachusetts Assistant Attorney General Richard Kelly.

However, Kelly said, the waste allegedly was illegally dumped in Massachusetts and paperwork falsified to indicate proper disposal.

According to the Plymouth indictments, Spencer Kellogg Co. of Newark, N.J. paid more than $7,000 to Samson Tank Cleaning to remove 90 barrels of flammable and toxic petroleum byproducts from its plant, and got receipts signed by French claiming the barrels had been legally landfilled.

In fact, the indictments allege, Samson Tank Cleaning delivered the barrels to Giovanella, president of the John Alden Transportation Co. of Plymouth, who in turn had the barrels dumped on Feb. 15, 1980, into a Cherry Street gravel pit owned by Steven Almeida of Plymouth.

Almeida, who isn't involved in the indictments, noticed the barrels and reported them to police.

It was then, the indictments claim, that Dias, a truck driver who has had business dealings with Giovanella, removed 10 of the barrels from the gravel pit and dumped them in a rural lot in Halifax on Feb. 24, 1980. He was spotted by police, Kelly said, before any more barrels could be removed from the Plymouth site.

"We hope the Plymouth Country Grand Jury investigation will give a clear message that Massachusetts will no longer be New Jersey's hazardous waste dumping ground," said Kelly. He indicated that the indictments announced yesterday probably will be the first of several after the grand jury resumes its investigation August 12.

Kelly said the barrels in Plymouth and Halifaz have been removed by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and pose no threat to public health.

In addition to Dias, Giovanella, Albert and French, the indictments also named three employees of Samson Tank Cleaning: Bernard Gordon, 32, and his brother, Arthur, 29, and Peter Harrison, 45, all of Jersey City, N.J.

The seven face maximum penalties of five years in prison and $25,000 fines under Massachusett's year-old hazardous waste criminal statutes.

Million for '78 storm repairs

More than $1 million in federal funds has been released to assist three towns — Hull, Revere and Mashpee — which were hit severely by the Blizzard of 1978.

The funds, from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, were received by the disaster recovery team of Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill's office yesterday.

Michael Saint, O'Neill's press secretary, said the bulk of the money, $928,000, will go to Hull to build storm drains on the street behind Nantasket Beach.

"The money was originally intended to rebuild the sand dunes on Nantasket Beach, but we convinced HUD that the need for the storm drains was stronger. The people of Hull didn't want to rebuild the dunes. They wanted the storm drains," Saint said.

In Revere, $184,000 will be used to purchase two new fire trucks. "Fire trucks were used in rescue efforts during the blizzard and salt water got into the vehicles. They've been having trouble with them ever since," Saint said.

"Town officials will use the money to pay the Woods Hole Ocenaographic Institute for the first phase of a study to determine what can be done to keep Mashpee from washing away."

4 arrested in destruction of 131 cemetery monuments

Two Jamaica Plain men and a pair of 15-year-old juveniles were arrested last night and charged with the destruction of 131 monuments in the Elliot Hill section of Forest Hills Cemetery.

District 13 Detective Albert La Fontaine and Officer William Cantin, who had been investigating the desecration of the memorials since Wednesday, made the arrests.

They said they learned that the vandalism followed an outdoor drinking party on a hilly area of the cemetery grounds. Beer bottles were found scattered among the gravestones.

Charged with injury to memorials were Peter Young, 18, of Weld Hill Street and Albert Yong, 21, of Wenham Street. They were held for appearance Monday in West Roxbury District Court. The juveniles were released in the custody of their parents.

Police said conviction could result in jail terms and heavy fines.

City services may add $12 to next year's tax

By JANICE ELLIOTT
Staff Writer

Municipal services are going to cost Cambridge tax payers about $4 million more in the next year, the city's collective bargaining agent said yesterday.

That would mean an approximate increase of $12 on the tax rate to pay the cost of education, fire fighters and police, trash collection, street and sewer repairs, municipal record keeping and other services.

The trend was set when Cambridge's largest municipal union, Local 195, accepted a $1.2 million contract that provided for a $1,000 pay increase this year and a wage re-opener clause next year.

"There are about 4,000 unionized city workers," says Raymond Clark, who has been one of the city representatives at contract negotiations.

"Although the actual language and money outlay differs from contract to contract, the total package still comes to about $1,000 a man — or $4 million," Clark said.

Members of the Cambridge Teachers Association negotiate directly with the School Committee. The Cambridge police and fire unions have chosen to go to binding arbitration.

"We still figure these at about $1,000 a man," Clark explained.

Interns and residents at the Cambridge Hospital have settled for an average 8.5 percent raise for the 50 members of the hospital's House Officers Association.

The 60 professional library employees have ratified the same basic contract as that offered to Local 195. However, instead of building up a fringe benefits pool by weekly contributions, the city acceded to the librarians' and doctors' wishes and paid them lump sums of cash.

The lump sum figures for the medical personnel are not available, but Clark said the librarians each received $104.

Only one of the major city unions, the Water Department Workers, have refused to ratify the contract offered by the city.

"To be honest, I don't quite know what their problem is," Clark said. "It may just be a matter of language."

But Clark said he felt "we are getting close" to settlements with other major unions. He said "one or two meetings" already have been held with the 65-member Police Superior Officers Association and that he hoped to set up another one late next week.

Mediators for the police patrolmen's and fire fighters' unions are to meet with city negotiators Tuesday. Negotiations with the 15-member housing code inspectors' union will be held Aug. 4. A meeting with the 180-member nurses' union will be held Monday, Clark said.

Also still to be settled is the contract between the city and the nine-member steam firemen's union.

Somerville aldermen grant $67,149 supplement to DPW budget

The Somerville Board of Aldermen, acting on a joint request by Mayor Eugene C. Brune and Public Works Commissioner David W. Reilly, appropriated $67,149.04 Thursday night to supplement the fiscal 1981 DPW budget.

In a letter to the board, Brune requested a total of $249,399.14 to cover several DPW accounts including labor, overtime and supplies costs.

"This money is not for new or expanded programs, in fact, reductions in service levels will have to occur for the DPW to make ends meet for fiscal 1981," Brune wrote.

"A budget that has an actual $1,553 decrease when a simple inflationary formula shows need for a $1 million increase just to maintain level funding cannot be considered adequate," Brune explained.

In an accompanying letter to the board, Reilly wrote that "insufficient funds have been appropriated to provide minimal funding for the DPW during the next 12 months."

"The budget, as it now stands, will cause service interruptions to the public and will only accelerate the deadline of municipal facilities," Reilly continued.

After debating the question for a few minutes, the board appropriated $32,653.20 for the DPW Sanitary Labor Account; a sum of $14,833.38 for the DPW Engineering- Parks Division Labor Account; $14,662.46 for the DPW Maintenance Municipal Buildings account and $5,000 for the DPW Special Items Parks and Playground supplies account.

According to Reilly, the funds for the Sanitary account are necessary to provide sufficient drivers to operate the city's rubbish trucks. The sum of $1,981.52 will be used to cover promotions of two existing laborers to Heavy Motor Equipment Operators. And $30,671.68 will be used to fill two similar vacancies caused by retirements-illness.

When asked if the new drivers would come from a list of 20 city workers who were laid off during the past month, Reilly answered, "Conceivably."

SMEA President Eugene Binari said that any of the Sanitary Division workers who were laid off and had a Class Two driver's license have a two-year recall right under terms of the contract.

"I wholeheartedly agree with the commissioner," Binari said. "You can't operate without a full complement of help. We need these people back to work."

"It has been almost four weeks since the mayor laid off 20 people in the city," Binari said. "I beleive that if he looked at the picture clearly, he must realize it was a very foolish move. He laid off people in the Sanitary and in doing so, he disrupted the daily pickup so badly that he had to give overtime every night last week and still there is rubbish in the street."

"He's also using the SMEA as a whipping boy on the health plan," Binari suggested. "I ask the mayor (Brune) if he belongs to the Harvard plan?"

"It's possible the fault lies with the mayor's mismanagement of city government," Binari accused. "He has hired sweepers, summer help and given political appointees a 5 percent raise. I cannot believe that a man who said he wanted to help the worker could possibly do as much against them in such a short time."

Harvard economics post to Jorgenson

Dale W. Jorgenson, recipient of a top award in economics, the John Bates Clark Medal, recently became Frederick Eaton Abbe Professor of Economics at Harvard.

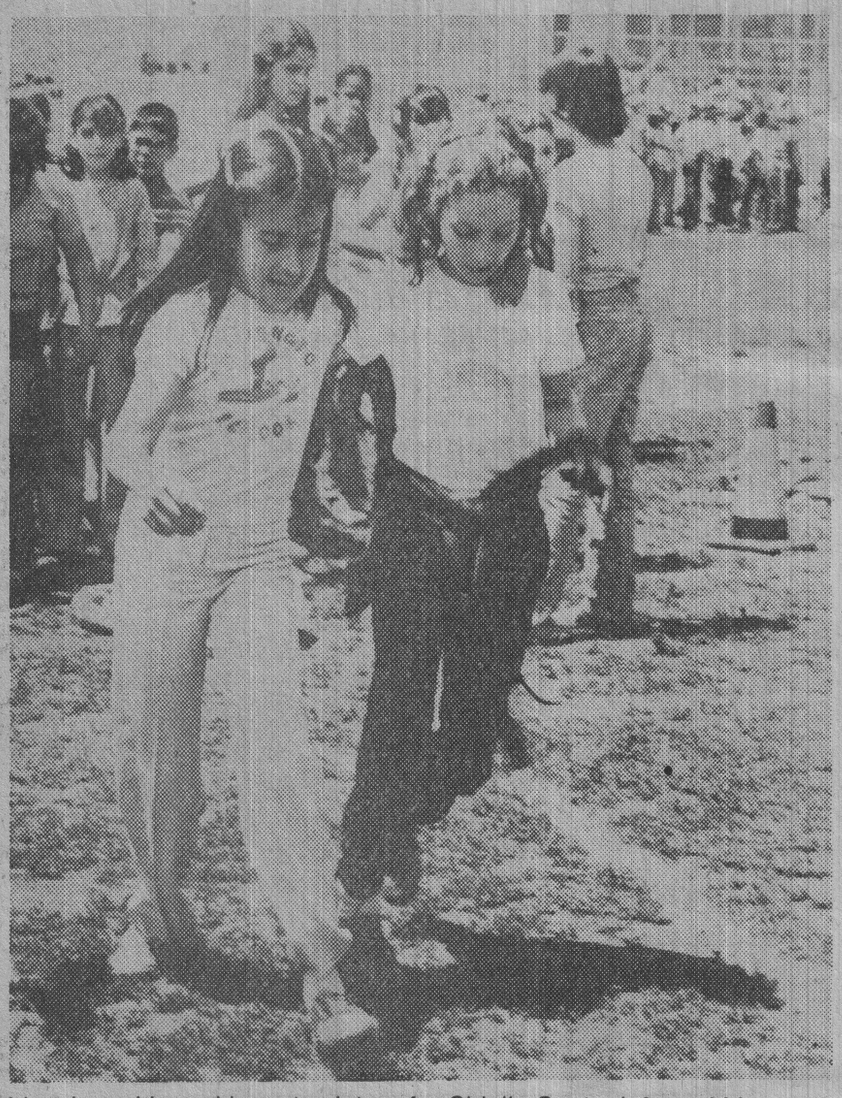

Jorgenson, who studies energy economics, econometrics, tax policy and investment behavior, currently is beginning research on the impact of energy prices on the U.S. and Japanese economies.

He and a colleague recently proposed a "first-year capital recovery system" aimed at increasing U.S. economic productivity by allowing businesses full depreciation deductions during the same year they buy new plants and equipment, rather than over 40 years or more as at present.

Jorgenson joined the Harvard faculty in 1969 as Professor of Economics. Previously, he taught at the University of California at Berkeley.

A member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1978, he received the prestigious John Bates Clark Medal of the American Economic Association in 1971. The Association cited him for "great distinction" in pure economic theory and in statistical method and called him "a master of the territory between economics and statistics, where both have to be applied in the study of concrete problems."

Jorgenson is a member of several other professional societies and has received numerous other honors and fellowships. He has testified before Congressional committees and is a consultant to Data Resources, Inc. consulting editor to North-Holland Publishing Company in Amsterdam, Managing Editor of Contributions Of Economic Analysis, Associate Editor of the Quarterly Journal of Economics and the Review of Economics and Statistics and author of dozens of articles in professional journals.

Small caliber slug MBTA murder clue

A pathologist has recovered a small caliber slug from the brain of a 37-year-old drifter shot by a would-be robber in the deserted MBTA waiting room at Lechmere station early Thursday.

"It's a small clue," said Cambridge Det. Sgt. Alan Hayes, who is investigating the death of Carl Johnson, a man with no permanent home.

Hayes said the slug, recovered during an autopsy performed by Dr. George Katsis, was sent to the state police laboratory for tests.

Johnson was shot through the left cheek around 3 a.m. by someone who thought his neat appearance meant he had money, Hayes said.

Neighbors to fight high-income condos

Neighbors who live in the area of 115 Highland Ave., Somerville, are expected to protest a proposed new housing development on that site today at 10 a.m.

Residents in the area, organized by Somerville United Neighborhoods (SUN), are fighting the development, charging it is designed for higher-income residents from outside the neighborhood and that it will only aggravate existing area problems such as parking.

The group is expected to announce its plans for legal action in an effort to block the construction of the proposed five-story, 20-unit condominium.

Houghton Pond closes

Houghton's Pond swimming area in Milton will be closed Monday for chemical treatment to control aquatic weeds, it was announced yesterday by the MDC.

SHAPP adds luster to neighborhoods

"By helping people refurbish their homes, we can actually aid residents in upgrading their neighborhood," explained Somerville Community Development Director Thomas Pelham of the city's Housing Assistance Painting Program (SHAPP).

Since beginning in 1978, SHAPP has helped freshen the exterior appearance of over 550 homes by providing rebates of up to $10 for each gallon of paint used.

In instances where the home owner is elderly or disabled, a five-man paint crew under the direction of George Goodwin paints the house.

Other SHAPP paint crew members include Francis Donaghue, Paul Mackey, Paul Blackner and Valentino Roberto.

So far this summer, 11 houses have been refurbished by this crew under the Free Paint Program, according to Pelham.

That program supplies free paint and labor to qualified participants. In most cases they are elderly or handicapped.

Approximately one house a week can be completed by the crew. Most of the houses are within target areas in East Somerville, Union Square and West Somerville.

On rainy days, the crew moves indoors. They recently spruced up the drab walls and offices of the Somerville Police station and corridors of City Hall.

Residents seeking additional information about the innovation program can contact the community development office at City Hall at 625-6600, extension 150.

Don't try playing Robin Hood in Santa Cruz

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Robin Hood lasted exactly one day in Santa Cruz.

David Chamberlain of Santa Cruz thought he had a new business. He dressed up as Robin Hood — complete with red-plumed leather hat — and billed himself as Robin Hood Rescue Service.

Then he roamed town, looking for over-parked cars. When he spotted a red flag, he'd drop a nickle in the meter and a note and envelope on the windshield.

"Greetings," said the note. "You have just been rescued from a five-dollar parking ticket fine by the Robin Hood Rescue Service."

The rescued motorist was asked to use the envelope to contribute one dollar or more so Robin Hood could continue his services.

During the one day he was in business, Chamberlain says he fed about 100 meters.

Unfortunately, one of the over-parked motorists was Santa Cruz Police Chief Geno Pini, and it turns out Santa Clara lawmakers already had thought of — and guarded against — Robin Hood's activities.

A police officer showed up at Chamberlain's house with a citation for making unauthorized deposits into a parking meter.

He pleaded guilty to the charge but was given a suspended $25 fine after promising Robin Hood would go out of business.

Chamberlain said 11 people of the 100 he may have saved from a ticket actually sent him a dollar.

Waste dumping ring broken; 6 held

By SUSAN V. HANDS
Staff Writer

Massachusetts and New Jersey police yesterday arrested six men, including a Halifax Board of Health member, on charges involving illegal dumping of hazardous waste in Plymouth and Halifax last February. Some of those arrested have links to organized crime, authorities said.

The six, and a seventh man still sought by police yesterday, were named in secret indictments returned last week by a Plymouth Country grand jury as part of a continuing investigation of alleged interstate criminal schemes that made Massachusetts a dumping ground for hazardous waste from New Jersey.

Among those arrested yesterday was Franklin Dias, 38, a truck driver and member of the Halifax Board of Health; Albert Giovanella, 44, owner of a Plymouth trucking company, and John Albert, 45, owner of Samson Tank Cleaning of Bayonne, N.J.

Richard French, 56, of Maine, president of Chem-Waste of Derry, N.H. still was sought yesterday.

Giovanella and Albert have been cited by law enforcement officials as having affiliations with known organized crime syndicates. Both are under investigation by the Plymouth grand jury on other criminal waste dumping incidents, including a dump in Kingston, Mass., where more than 1,000 barrels are thought to be buried.

French and Chem-Waste, which had its license revoked last April, are under investigation in Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire for several other incidents involving illegal interstate hauling, storage and disposal of hazardous waste.

The indictments announced yesterday are part of an investigation of an alleged criminal network that took thousands of dollars from New Jersey companies on the premise of legally disposing hazardous waste at a licensed landfill in Model Cities, N.Y., owned by SCA Chemical Services of Boston, according to Massachusetts Assistant Attorney General Richard Kelly.

However, Kelly said, the waste allegedly was illegally dumped in Massachusetts and paperwork falsified to indicate proper disposal.

According to the Plymouth indictments, Spencer Kellogg Co. of Newark, N.J. paid more than $7,000 to Samson Tank Cleaning to remove 90 barrels of flammable and toxic petroleum byproducts from its plant, and got receipts signed by French claiming the barrels had been legally landfilled.

In fact, the indictments allege, Samson Tank Cleaning delivered the barrels to Giovanella, president of the John Alden Transportation Co. of Plymouth, who in turn had the barrels dumped on Feb. 15, 1980, into a Cherry Street gravel pit owned by Steven Almeida of Plymouth.

Almeida, who isn't involved in the indictments, noticed the barrels and reported them to police.

It was then, the indictments claim, that Dias, a truck driver who has had business dealings with Giovanella, removed 10 of the barrels from the gravel pit and dumped them in a rural lot in Halifax on Feb. 24, 1980. He was spotted by police, Kelly said, before any more barrels could be removed from the Plymouth site.

"We hope the Plymouth Country Grand Jury investigation will give a clear message that Massachusetts will no longer be New Jersey's hazardous waste dumping ground," said Kelly. He indicated that the indictments announced yesterday probably will be the first of several after the grand jury resumes its investigation August 12.

Kelly said the barrels in Plymouth and Halifax have been removed by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and pose no threat to public health.

In addition to Dias, Giovanella, Albert and French, the indictments also named three employees of Samson Tank Cleaning: Bernard Gordon, 32, and his brother, Arthur, 29, and Peter Harrison, 45, all of Jersey City, N.J.

The seven face maximum penalties of five years in prison and $25,000 fines under Massachusett's year-old hazardous waste criminal statutes.

Million for '78 storm repairs

More than $1 million in federal funds has been released to assist three towns — Hull, Revere and Mashpee — which were hit severely by the Blizzard of 1978.

The funds, from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, were received by the disaster recovery team of Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill's office yesterday.

Michael Saint, O'Neill's press secretary, said the bulk of the money, $928,000, will go to Hull to build storm drains on the street behind Nantasket Beach.

"The money was originally intended to rebuild the sand dunes on Nantasket Beach, but we convinced HUD that the need for the storm drains was stronger. The people of Hull didn't want to rebuild the dunes. They wanted the storm drains," Saint said.

In Revere, $184,000 will be used to purchase two new fire trucks. "Fire trucks were used in rescue efforts during the blizzard and salt water got into the vehicles. They've been having trouble with them ever since," Saint said.

"Town officials will use the money to pay the Woods Hole Ocenaographic Institute for the first phase of a study to determine what can be done to keep Mashpee from washing away."

4 arrested in destruction of 131 cemetery monuments

Two Jamaica Plain men and a pair of 15-year-old juveniles were arrested last night and charged with the destruction of 131 monuments in the Elliot Hill section of Forest Hills Cemetery.

District 13 Detective Albert La Fontaine and Officer William Cantin, who had been investigating the desecration of the memorials since Wednesday, made the arrests.

They said they learned that the vandalism followed an outdoor drinking party on a hilly area of the cemetery grounds. Beer bottles were found scattered among the gravestones.

Charged with injury to memorials were Peter Young, 18, of Weld Hill Street and Albert Yong, 21, of Wenham Street. They were held for appearance Monday in West Roxbury District Court. The juveniles were released in the custody of their parents.

Police said conviction could result in jail terms and heavy fines.

City services may add $12 to next year's tax

By JANICE ELLIOTT
Staff Writer

Municipal services are going to cost Cambridge tax payers about $4 million more in the next year, the city's collective bargaining agent said yesterday.

That would mean an approximate increase of $12 on the tax rate to pay the cost of education, fire fighters and police, trash collection, street and sewer repairs, municipal record keeping and other services.

The trend was set when Cambridge's largest municipal union, Local 195, accepted a $1.2 million contract that provided for a $1,000 pay increase this year and a wage re-opener clause next year.

"There are about 4,000 unionized city workers," says Raymond Clark, who has been one of the city representatives at contract negotiations.

"Although the actual language and money outlay differs from contract to contract, the total package still comes to about $1,000 a man — or $4 million," Clark said.

Members of the Cambridge Teachers Association negotiate directly with the School Committee. The Cambridge police and fire unions have chosen to go to binding arbitration.

"We still figure these at about $1,000 a man," Clark explained.

Interns and residents at the Cambridge Hospital have settled for an average 8.5 percent raise for the 50 members of the hospital's House Officers Association.

The 60 professional library employees have ratified the same basic contract as that offered to Local 195. However, instead of building up a fringe benefits pool by weekly contributions, the city acceded to the librarians' and doctors' wishes and paid them lump sums of cash.

The lump sum figures for the medical personnel are not available, but Clark said the librarians each received $104.

Only one of the major city unions, the Water Department Workers, have refused to ratify the contract offered by the city.

"To be honest, I don't quite know what their problem is," Clark said. "It may just be a matter of language."

But Clark said he felt "we are getting close" to settlements with other major unions. He said "one or two meetings" already have been held with the 65-member Police Superior Officers Association and that he hoped to set up another one late next week.

Mediators for the police patrolmen's and fire fighters' unions are to meet with city negotiators Tuesday. Negotiations with the 15-member housing code inspectors' union will be held Aug. 4. A meeting with the 180-member nurses' union will be held Monday, Clark said.

Also still to be settled is the contract between the city and the nine-member steam firemen's union.

Somerville aldermen grant $67,149 supplement to DPW budget

The Somerville Board of Aldermen, acting on a joint request by Mayor Eugene C. Brune and Public Works Commissioner David W. Reilly, appropriated $67,149.04 Thursday night to supplement the fiscal 1981 DPW budget.

In a letter to the board, Brune requested a total of $249,399.14 to cover several DPW accounts including labor, overtime and supplies costs.

"This money is not for new or expanded programs, in fact, reductions in service levels will have to occur for the DPW to make ends meet for fiscal 1981," Brune wrote.

"A budget that has an actual $1,553 decrease when a simple inflationary formula shows need for a $1 million increase just to maintain level funding cannot be considered adequate," Brune explained.

In an accompanying letter to the board, Reilly wrote that "insufficient funds have been appropriated to provide minimal funding for the DPW during the next 12 months."

"The budget, as it now stands, will cause service interruptions to the public and will only accelerate the deadline of municipal facilities," Reilly continued.

After debating the question for a few minutes, the board appropriated $32,653.20 for the DPW Sanitary Labor Account; a sum of $14,833.38 for the DPW Engineering- Parks Division Labor Account; $14,662.46 for the DPW Maintenance Municipal Buildings account and $5,000 for the DPW Special Items Parks and Playground supplies account.

According to Reilly, the funds for the Sanitary account are necessary to provide sufficient drivers to operate the city's rubbish trucks. The sum of $1,981.52 will be used to cover promotions of two existing laborers to Heavy Motor Equipment Operators. And $30,671.68 will be used to fill two similar vacancies caused by retirements-illness.

When asked if the new drivers would come from a list of 20 city workers who were laid off during the past month, Reilly answered, "Conceivably."

SMEA President Eugene Binari said that any of the Sanitary Division workers who were laid off and had a Class Two driver's license have a two-year recall right under terms of the contract.

"I wholeheartedly agree with the commissioner," Binari said. "You can't operate without a full complement of help. We need these people back to work."

"It has been almost four weeks since the mayor laid off 20 people in the city," Binari said. "I beleive that if he looked at the picture clearly, he must realize it was a very foolish move. He laid off people in the Sanitary and in doing so, he disrupted the daily pickup so badly that he had to give overtime every night last week and still there is rubbish in the street."

"He's also using the SMEA as a whipping boy on the health plan," Binari suggested. "I ask the mayor (Brune) if he belongs to the Harvard plan?"

"It's possible the fault lies with the mayor's mismanagement of city government," Binari accused. "He has hired sweepers, summer help and given political appointees a 5 percent raise. I cannot believe that a man who said he wanted to help the worker could possibly do as much against them in such a short time."

Harvard economics post to Jorgenson

Dale W. Jorgenson, recipient of a top award in economics, the John Bates Clark Medal, recently became Frederick Eaton Abbe Professor of Economics at Harvard.

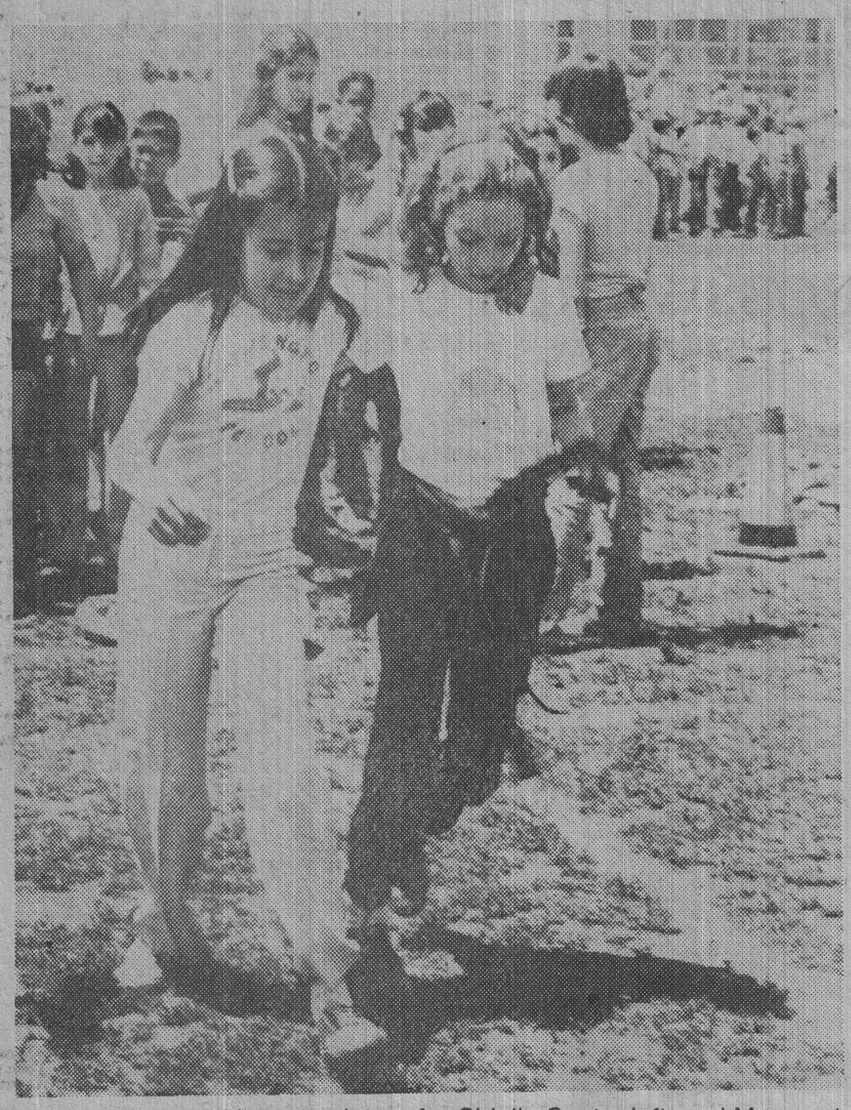

Jorgenson, who studies energy economics, econometrics, tax policy and investment behavior, currently is beginning research on the impact of energy prices on the U.S. and Japanese economies.

He and a colleague recently proposed a "first-year capital recovery system" aimed at increasing U.S. economic productivity by allowing businesses full depreciation deductions during the same year they buy new plants and equipment, rather than over 40 years or more as at present.

Jorgenson joined the Harvard faculty in 1969 as Professor of Economics. Previously, he taught at the University of California at Berkeley.

A member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1978, he received the prestigious John Bates Clark Medal of the American Economic Association in 1971. The Association cited him for "great distinction" in pure economic theory and in statistical method and called him "a master of the territory between economics and statistics, where both have to be applied in the study of concrete problems."

Jorgenson is a member of several other professional societies and has received numerous other honors and fellowships. He has testified before Congressional committees and is a consultant to Data Resources, Inc. consulting editor to North-Holland Publishing Company in Amsterdam, Managing Editor of Contributions Of Economic Analysis, Associate Editor of the Quarterly Journal of Economics and the Review of Economics and Statistics and author of dozens of articles in professional journals.

Small caliber slug MBTA murder clue

A pathologist has recovered a small caliber slug from the brain of a 37-year-old drifter shot by a would-be robber in the deserted MBTA waiting room at Lechmere station early Thursday.

"It's a small clue," said Cambridge Det. Sgt. Alan Hayes, who is investigating the death of Carl Johnson, a man with no permanent home.

Hayes said the slug, recovered during an autopsy performed by Dr. George Katsis, was sent to the state police laboratory for tests.

Johnson was shot through the left cheek around 3 a.m. by someone who thought his neat appearance meant he had money, Hayes said.

Neighbors to fight high-income condos

Neighbors who live in the area of 115 Highland Ave., Somerville, are expected to protest a proposed new housing development on that site today at 10 a.m.

Residents in the area, organized by Somerville United Neighborhoods (SUN), are fighting the development, charging it is designed for higher-income residents from outside the neighborhood and that it will only aggravate existing area problems such as parking.

The group is expected to announce its plans for legal action in an effort to block the construction of the proposed five-story, 20-unit condominium.

Houghton Pond closes

Houghton's Pond swimming area in Milton will be closed Monday for chemical treatment to control aquatic weeds, it was announced yesterday by the MDC.

SHAPP adds luster to neighborhoods

"By helping people refurbish their homes, we can actually aid residents in upgrading their neighborhood," explained Somerville Community Development Director Thomas Pelham of the city's Housing Assistance Painting Program (SHAPP).

Since beginning in 1978, SHAPP has helped freshen the exterior appearance of over 550 homes by providing rebates of up to $10 for each gallon of paint used.

In instances where the home owner is elderly or disabled, a five-man paint crew under the direction of George Goodwin paints the house.

Other SHAPP paint crew members include Francis Donaghue, Paul Mackey, Paul Blackner and Valentino Roberto.

So far this summer, 11 houses have been refurbished by this crew under the Free Paint Program, according to Pelham.

That program supplies free paint and labor to qualified participants. In most cases they are elderly or handicapped.

Approximately one house a week can be completed by the crew. Most of the houses are within target areas in East Somerville, Union Square and West Somerville.

On rainy days, the crew moves indoors. They recently spruced up the drab walls and offices of the Somerville Police station and corridors of City Hall.

Residents seeking additional information about the innovation program can contact the community development office at City Hall at 625-6600, extension 150.

Don't try playing Robin Hood in Santa Cruz

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Robin Hood lasted exactly one day in Santa Cruz.

David Chamberlain of Santa Cruz thought he had a new business. He dressed up as Robin Hood — complete with red-plumed leather hat — and billed himself as Robin Hood Rescue Service.

Then he roamed town, looking for over-parked cars. When he spotted a red flag, he'd drop a nickle in the meter and a note and envelope on the windshield.

"Greetings," said the note. "You have just been rescued from a five-dollar parking ticket fine by the Robin Hood Rescue Service."

The rescued motorist was asked to use the envelope to contribute one dollar or more so Robin Hood could continue his services.

During the one day he was in business, Chamberlain says he fed about 100 meters.

Unfortunately, one of the over-parked motorists was Santa Cruz Police Chief Geno Pini, and it turns out Santa Clara lawmakers already had thought of — and guarded against — Robin Hood's activities.

A police officer showed up at Chamberlain's house with a citation for making unauthorized deposits into a parking meter.

He pleaded guilty to the charge but was given a suspended $25 fine after promising Robin Hood would go out of business.

Chamberlain said 11 people of the 100 he may have saved from a ticket actually sent him a dollar.

July 11, 1980

To the Honorable, The City Council:

Subject: Closureof Rindge Avenue from its intersection with Rindge Avenue Extension to the Lexington Branch Railroad Right-of-way and the subsequent transfer of the property to the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority

The Planning Board has received and considered the proposal to close Rindge Avenue from its intersection with Rindge Avenue Extension to the Lexington Branch Railroad Right-of-way and the subsequent transfer of this property to the MBTA. The Board does not object to this action and in fact feels that this action coupled with the simultaneous agreement on the part of the MBTA to transfer to the City of Cambridge approximately 52,500 square feet of land at its Trackless Trolley Running Repair Facility in North Cambridge is in the best interest of the City for the purposes of protecting the citizens of Cambridge, real estate values and obtaining the best possible land use.

Respectfully submitted

PLANNING BOARD
CITY HALL ANNEX, 57 INMAN STREET, CAMBRIDGE 02139

July 11, 1980

To the Honorable, The City Council:

Subject: Closureof Rindge Avenue from its intersection with Rindge Avenue Extension to the Lexington Branch Railroad Right-of-way and the subsequent transfer of the property to the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority

The Planning Board has received and considered the proposal to close Rindge Avenue from its intersection with Rindge Avenue Extension to the Lexington Branch Railroad Right-of-way and the subsequent transfer of this property to the MBTA. The Board does not object to this action and in fact feels that this action coupled with the simultaneous agreement on the part of the MBTA to transfer to the City of Cambridge approximately 52,500 square feet of land at its Trackless Trolley Running Repair Facility in North Cambridge is in the best interest of the City for the purposes of protecting the citizens of Cambridge, real estate values and obtaining the best possible land use.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

August 4, 1980

To the Honorable, The City Council:

The purpose of tonight's public hearing is to consider and act upon a request by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority for an order discontinuing a portion of Rindge Avenue in the Alewife Area of the City, abandon all utilities located herein, and authorizing the transfer of said portion to the Authority.

The proposed discontinuance is consistent with the proposed Revitalization Plan for the Alewife Area and is compatible with the zoning changes recently enacted by the City Council. In addition, the acquisition of 52,500 sq. ft. of land in North Cambridge will give the city control over the reuse of those parcels.

The Planning Board, Traffic and Parking Department, Public Works Department and Fire Department have reviewed the proposed discontinuance and do not interpose any objections. Copies of supporting letters are enclosed.

In view of the desires of all concerned and the public interest served, I recommend that City Council adopt the attached Order at tonight's meeting.

Very truly yours,

James L. Sullivan
