COIA

Arthur E. Coia, General Secretary-Treasurer Emeritus of the Laborers' International Union of North America and long-time official with the Union's New England Region, died on March 4, 1993, in Providence, Rhode Island, after a long illness. He was 79.

Mr. Coia was a labor leader of vision who forged major initiatives in organizing and collective bargaining. He was particularly dedicated to increasing the level of skills of laborers and was a driving force behind the creation of the Laborers' training programs, which today are unparalleled in the construction industry.

Mr. Coia joined Laborers' Local 271 in his hometown of Providence at the age of 20. He was first elected to union office in 1936. Under his leadership, Local 271's membership grew from 150 to more than 3,000. In 1954, he was appointed as an international representative, in which capacity he organized many new units of workers, including public employees. He was appointed manager of the New England and Eastern Canada region in 1967 and developed a series of innovative programs that provided a better life for workers and their families. In 1971, he was elected as a Vice President of the international union.

A strong believer in the principle of cooperation, Mr. Coia forged new working relationships with management to promote a greater market share for the organized sector of the construction industry. With his background as a negotiator and organizer, he helped form advance joint labor-management funds that provided pension and health care coverage, training, legal services, and other benefits. In 1979, Mr. Coia was elected General Secretary-Treasurer of the Laborers' International Union, the second highest office in the 500,000-member union. In this position, he guided the union's occupational health and safety efforts to the forefront of the labor movement. He was re-elected to this office in 1981 and 1986.

Mr. Coia's commitment to education is reflected in the Arthur E. Coia Scholarship Fund which was established in 1989. The fund awards scholarships to the children of union members who demonstrate academic excellence and a financial need.

*Arthur E. Coia was an extraordinary leader. The fair wages, good benefits, and safe job sites that so many workers today take for granted came about through the heroic efforts of leaders like Arthur E. Coia, said Arthur A. Coia, his son, who is General President of the Laborers' International Union.

Mr. Coia is survived by his widow, Marie, of Providence; his son, Arthur A., and daughter-in-law, Joanne, of Barrington, R.I., and Washington, D.C.; a granddaughter, Christen Corrente, of Providence; and his husband, Darren, and a grandson, Arthur E. Coia II, of Providence.

The viewing will be held at the A.A. Mariani Funeral Home at 200 Hawkins Street in Providence on Monday, March 8, from 3:00-8:00 P.M. Mass for Christian burial will be said at St. Ann's Church, Pawtucket, at 10:00 A.M. on Sunday, March 8. Interment will be at St. Francis Cemetery in Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

In lieu of flowers or other remembrances, the family requests donations be made to the Arthur E. Coia Trust Scholarship Fund, 226 South Main Street, Providence, Rhode Island 02903.

Opening lead:
Queen of hearts.

There are 30-point tricks and there are 300-point tricks. To lose 30 points is a matter of more serious concern. This deal occurred in a team-of-four match. At the first table, South got to six spades doubled on the sequence shown.

West led a heart. Declarer ruffed and cashed the ace of spades, West showing out. The 4-0 trump break appeared to be no more than a temporary inconvenience, so South led a diamond to dummy, planning to take a trump finesse next. But East ruffed, returned a club to West, and then ruffed another diamond to beat the contract two tricks — 500 points.

Six spades doubled was also the contract at the second table. Again West led a heart, ruffed by South, and again declarer played the ace of spades, West showing out. But at this point declarer displayed unusual foresight. He recognized that an immediate diamond lead was not urgent, and he played a club instead.

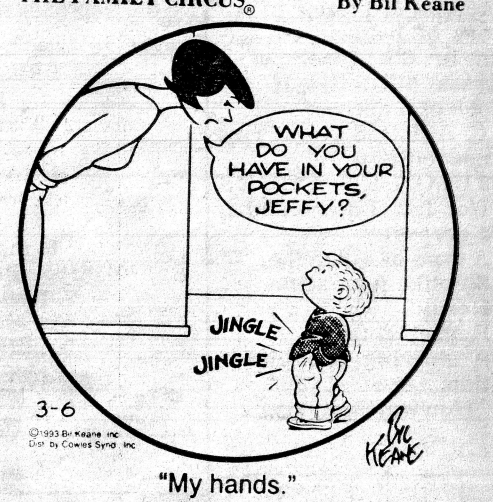

As a result, he saved 300 points. West won and returned another heart, which declarer ruffed. A diamond lead to dummy permitted East to ruff, all right, but that was the end of the line. South went down 200 points at this table instead of 500 points.

Not many declarers would have led a club at trick three to protect against the possibility of East's being void in diamonds. But the fact is that South had nothing to lose by the play, and something to gain if it turned out that East had no diamonds. After all, 300 points are not to be sneezed at.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 20): Far too much is at stake for you to back down over a point of principle on the work front. However, because Saturn remains in Aquarius for some months yet, you must expect your beliefs and values to come under the spotlight.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21): With Uranus playing such an important part in your solar chart, the urge to get away is overwhelming. However, wait until Monday's full moon in Virgo before making your move.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21): You seem at a stage in professional and financial affairs where you are ready to accept those things you cannot change and change those things that are no longer acceptable. You also have the perfect opportunity to your own ideas into practice.

CANCER (June 22-July 23): Leave your fears and insecurities behind when dealing with close personal relationships and matters of the heart. New acquaintances and new opportunities will more than compensate for recent emotional upsets or financial misfortunes.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23): You are probably still going through a difficult phase over partnerships and joint finances. Just remember you are perfectly entitled to safeguard what you have worked so hard to accomplish.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): Don't panic or try to pressure Uranus on your future. A fine aspect between Mercury and Uranus suggests they cannot afford to keep you on the sidelines for long.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23): An unusual amount of planetary activity is related to your home and family, while Monday's full moon is likely to bring major changes in the working pattern of your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): Make sure travel plans are kept simple. You are certainly coming up with some wonderfully creative ideas at the moment but minor delays indicate you are still making heavy weather of putting some of them into practice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): You may be feeling happier about your home and family life, but business and professional matters still require your full attention. The full moon on the 8th should let you get to grips with an upsetting situation on the work front.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): The full moon in Virgo on the 8th should give you a bit of a jolt. But it will also help you see that there is nothing to fear from change and plenty to be said for throwing out the rule book every once in a while.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): You can expect better news as far as personal money matters are concerned, although the approaching full moon in Virgo indicates that partners still need a certain amount of convincing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): A fine aspect between Mercury and Uranus indicates that others are about to get a glimpse of just how enterprising, intuitive and progressive you can be.

BIRTHDAY TODAY: With Mercury, the planet of communication and the mind, in alliance with the revolutionary planet Uranus on your anniversary, you are determined to paint on the broadest possible canvas. Fate has handed you a new broom — now it is up to you to sweep away all traces of the past.

Child's school tale usually one-sided

NANCY ANDERSON PARENTS NETWORK

Q For the second time this month, my son Tyler, who's in third grade, has been sent to the principal's office. Tyler told me that he called another child some names (swear words) so his teacher sent him to the office. Tyler then told me he sat in the office for a long time and missed a large part of his day.

I am upset that this was the way my son was dealt with. I hesitate to call the principal because I think this might do my son more harm than good. What do you recommend?

— Town Withheld

A It is our experience that a parent should not react, or overreact, to a story they hear through their child until they are sure they have all the facts. In your situation, we would first call your son's teacher to find out exactly what transpired. If your son was guilty of name-calling or swearing, you could then ask what action was taken. If he was sent to the principal's office, call the principal to ask specifically what was discussed with your son, so you could follow up on it at home. Also ask how long he was detained at the office and determine if it was appropriate.

Once you get the whole story from the school, have a talk with Tyler about behavior rules in school, at home and elsewhere. Emphasize the seriousness of such offenses. Consider additional punishment if extreme cases of misconduct occur in school.

Q Our family just bought a computer. We are now in the market for some good educational games for our kids, David, 6, and Holly, 3. What can you recommend?

— Danvers

A When shopping for an educational game, first check whether it will "fit" your computer. For example, if you have an IBM computer, you need "IBM Compatible" programs. Also check that your computer has the appropriate software version and hardware needed for the game.

Store personnel usually can make valuable recommendations based upon your child's age and interests.

The price range for games varies from about $10 to $60. The age ranges start at toddler. We suggest that:

- The recommended age range matches that of your child.
- You look for a game that has many skill levels. If your child becomes proficient at one level, does the game offer additional challenging levels?
- Some of our favorite game manufacturers include Broderbund, First Byte, The Learning Company and Springboard. The games themselves come with directions and customer-service numbers.

Help child prove to herself she's not 'dumb'

HASSLE-FREE HOMEWORK

Dear Dr. Fournier: My daughter is in fourth grade. She does very well in school except for math. She's not failing, but she struggles just to barely make a B. She is already beginning to say "I'm dumb." My daughter is not dumb and I try to tell her that but she doesn't listen to me. I'm happy with my child, but she is not happy with herself.

THE ASSESSMENT: As parents, we hope for report cards that confirm our belief in our child's brightness. But when we receive a report card in which every grade is not equally good, we can't help but focus on what's "not good enough" for fear of how others may respond to our child.

To the extent that a child calls herself "dumb," the word and definition are learned from their environment. As parents, we must help our children "unlearn" the destructive messages that have been learned to such perfection. For this, you can help your daughter figure what makes her feel diminished when she confronts math.

WHAT TO DO: Begin with your child's successes, and make a list of the subjects in which she does well. Ask her what makes her feel like she is in control of her own success.

Your child's answers will help you determine the "magnets" that help her recognize and develop her own good feelings of accomplishment. Use these as headings for a chart that also lists all of your child's school subjects. Then, subject by subject, ask which criteria apply. Help your child see that each subject is not identical and that success is not accomplished the same way in every circumstance.

When it comes to math, ask your child "What is different?" Once you can pinpoint what produces the feeling of failure, you have found a problem area where you and your child can work together to develop a strategy. Here is an example:

PROBLEM: I can't do math as fast as the other kids.

STRATEGY: Watch your child as she does some problems, and observe what slows her down. For example, she may still be dependent on her fingers for math facts. Get an abacus to help with math homework and then develop a way for her to learn math facts separately from homework.
