WHEREAS: This is the beginning of a technological gold rush, and cities are in danger of being trampled by a stampeding herd of providers; and

WHEREAS: There are regulatory and legal barriers in effect impacting the feasibility of telecommunication providers entering new markets. This makes it difficult for cities to know how to proceed. For example, there are federally mandated limitations on cross-ownership of telephone companies and cable systems. These limitations will impact the economic feasibility of the installations; and

WHEREAS: As more fiber-optic based competitors enter the market, each one will need to use public right-of-way for the physical installation; and

HEREAS: This creates air pollution, noise pollution, health and safety concerns, and reduces street pavement life. Further there is only a limited amount of space available beneath the street. Other utilities, such as gas, water, sewer, storm drain and cable, are already located in that space; and

WHEREAS: At present, the deployment of services is being determined on a piecemeal, private investment basis. This may result in some segment of the public (i.e., residents, businesses or government institutions) being excluded. These technologies are of limited use if they are not interconnected to create a comprehensive system, and if they are not affordable; now therefore be it

ORDERED: That the City Manager be and hereby is requested to establish a permanent seven member Telecommunications Commission to guide the development and implementation of telecommunications and the information superhighway so that when it comes to Cambridge, we will be prepared. Also, a Council subcommittee should be formed by the Mayor to actively participate as legislative advocates for telecommunication issues at the state and federal levels of governments. The City Manager should develop for the City its own telecommunication policies which include: universal access; a role for the city in a regulatory structure; reimbursement for the city for the use of public right of way and the negative impact on local infrastructure; appropriate allocation to the City of telecommunications resources. The City Manager should also develop a comprehensive telecommunications master plan that will include conducting a needs assessment of Cambridge's public and private section to determine local priorities.
