I urge you to continue this important work. For my part, I will continue to proactively address climate change in Congress and elsewhere. Together, we can shape a robust agenda that pushes the boundaries on global warming policy. I wish you the very best of luck as you undertake this effort. Please keep me informed of your progress. Thank you once again for your commitment.

Sincerely,

Dear Mayor Galluccio: Anthony

I write to commend the City of Cambridge on its participation in the Cities for Climate Protection campaign. In joining the campaign, you demonstrate unparalleled leadership, ambition, and dedication in tackling climate change.

Emissions inventories, in addition to the practical energy and policy changes you will implement, are the vital first steps to a wholesale shift in current consumption patterns and greenhouse gas discharges. Local decisions are most immediately felt and, more important, assure citizens that government is acting in the best interests of the environment, the economy, and their quality of life. As a longtime participant in the global warming agenda, I know well the difficulty in generating the consensus necessary to address this pressing, though seemingly far-away, concern.

Yours is a laudable commitment and one that must be emulated. While the media and, admittedly, those of us in Washington concentrate on the larger national and international issues surrounding global warming, local initiatives like yours have quietly made substantial contributions. Voluntary participation, especially in these times of great social pressure, proves that the community will and the environmental spirit can provide the foundation for tremendous social action. These measures benefit our Commonwealth, our nation, and the global community.
