

Definitions of the Unalienable Rights

life

key elements involved in living, security of life, access to shelter, access to education, security of a home, earning a living, security of work or business operations, property, money, security of health and all things which affect health, such as the health of nature.

liberty

freedom from tyranny, secure government, access to justice, freedom* of speech, publication, movement, freedom of material and spiritual belief.

pursuit of happiness

non interference with freedom to pursue own style of happiness in all things, freedom of marriage, freedom of group happiness. Group refers to any group such as a business organization or societal community.

Government by the Consent of the Governed. The Governed are not slaves or tax slaves. The Government must obtain the Consent of the Governed on all actions affecting the Governed's Unalienable Rights.

Consent is not to be interpreted as receiving the vote to hold office, since at the time of election the voters are not The Governed. It is while the Elected are in office that The People are The Governed and therefore the Elected (The Government) must obtain the Consent of the Governed regarding anything which affects The Governed's Unalienable Rights.

How shall we know whether the Constitution is succeeding ? By monitoring it in relation to how well The People's Unalienable Rights are secure. This vital link proves that The Declaration and Constitution are inextricably connected.

Freedom defined as acts which do not deny others their unalienable rights.

Consent Communication #15 7895

A communication was received from Peter Valentine, transmitting the definitions of the Unalienable Rights.

In City Council December 7, 1998

PLACED ON FILE