IN CITY COUNCIL

September 15, 1992

MAYOR RUSSELL

WHEREAS: The United States Department of the Interior is hosting an intergenerational conference inspired by the "America Reads" initiative at the Harvard University Graduate School of Education; and

WHEREAS: Numerous communities from around the Commonwealth will be attending with teams comprised of senior citizens, educators, community members, and high school students to learn about innovative efforts to assure that every child in the United States can read by third grade; and

WHEREAS: Carol A. Rasco, Senior Advisor to Secretary Riley and Director of America Reads, will serve as the keynote speaker of this important conference; and

WHEREAS: The City of Cambridge is proud to have such an important endeavor convened within its boundaries and is grateful for the opportunity to participate and learn from the efforts of the Department of Education, the Graduate School of Education and the participants at this conference; now therefore be it

RESOLVED: That the City Council extend its warmest welcome to all the participants of the "America Reads" intergenerational conference and extend its sincere thanks to all in attendance for their on-going commitment to educating our children.
