'Elite Eight' showcases star girls

Although girls' participation in sports may not be as high as it could be in Cambridge, things are looking brighter on the hoop side: introducing Cambridge's first Girls All-Star Basketball Game organized by Leslie Davis, physical education teacher at the Agassiz Elementary School.

The "Elite Eight Classic," sponsored by Cambridge Savings Bank, Ernie Butner IV, Verna's Donut Shop, Magsam Automotive and Marino's Ristorante is a long-overdue event featuring 20 of the best grade 8 female basketball players across the city.

This game focuses on grade 8 students with the hope that this will have an immediate impact on the girls' athletic involvement in their upcoming year as freshmen at CRLS. The game is played with high school rules and includes officials who call the game very closely. It provides the girls a chance to showcase their talents and feel the city's appreciation. Each player receives a uniform and trophies are awarded to five players chosen by a panel as the game's all-stars and Most Valuable Player.

The roster for Elite Eight Classic was:

King School: Latasha Pogue, forward; Shauna Rutlass, center (all-star); Sophia Kelly, guard/forward (all-star); Renel Pogue, point (all-star).

Graham & Parks School: Marie Bernard, center; Gurda Hyppolite, point/forward; Marcline Marsan, guard/forward.

Tobin School: Rose Marie Joseph, center; Merlinda Marseille, forward/center.

Agassiz School: Aja Pascual, point (MVP).

Kennedy School: Larrysha Upshaw, forward; Merlene James, center.

Fletcher School: Stephane Stevens, forward (all-star); Flor Alvarenga, forward.

Peabody School: Dominique Farmer, guard.

Morse School: Tinere Jackson, guard/forward; Eun-Joo Sohn, guard/forward.

Fitzgerald School: Catriane Pereira, forward (all-star).
