Housing complex eyed for Cambridge square

By Jack Hayes
Staff writer

While the owners of two small Central Square businesses wonder about their futures, the city and a Boston developer are moving ahead with plans to build a ten-story housing development on land now occupied by a tiny storefront on Magazine street.

"The general reception of this by the community has been so positive I can't see any impediment to this going through," said Michael Rosenberg, housing director for the city's Community Development Department.

Rosenberg pointed out that numerous meetings on the proposed development at Franklin, Green and Magazine streets have taken place between the the developer and local residents. At a public meeting last Thursday plans for the 85-unit structure were displayed.

"The more we talk to people and show them what's going on, the happier they get about it," said Leslie Watt, project director for Winn Developing Co. which is located in Faneuil Hall and has constructed over 5000 housing units from Vermont to Georgia.

But the owners of Odyssey Travel and Frank the Tailor shop seem less than enthusiastic about the new project.

Both say they have been kept pretty much in the dark about specific plans for the site, and neither has been invited to meetings on the topic.

Suzanne Diamantopoulos of Odyssey Travel said the current owner of the property has mentioned the possibility of her agency moving into space in the new building when it is complete, but says she has received no formal offers from Winn.

"All I've been given is an eviction notice," said Diamantopoulos, whose business has been located at 10 Magazine St. for five years. She added that, like Frank Pagliroulo, the tailor next door, she has been ordered to leave by May 31.

Operating under the assumption that they would have to find new premises for their businesses, both Diamantopoulos and Pagliroulo say they have searched the area for new affordable space.

A hearing on whether to grant Winn developers a "comprehensive" zoning permit necessary for construction of the building will be held on March 21 before the Board of Zoning Appeal.

TeenWork seeks summer jobs for local kids

The Cambridge TeenWork program launched its third year of operation at the Royal Sonesta Hotel on Friday, March 1. Over 70 representatives of Cambridge businesses and corporations were on hand to show their support, and to enjoy a fine lunch. The event was hosted by Bolt, Beranek and Newman, Charles Square Associates, Harvard University, MIT, the Polaroid Foundation and the Royal Sonesta Hotel.

TeenWork is an employment program operated by Cambridge Community Services in collaboration with the Cambridge Chamber of Commerce. Through TeenWork, Cambridge businesses hire high school students for the summer and/or contribute funds to sponsor the hiring of students in non-profit organizations.

Numerous businesses and corporations have contributed to TeenWork's success over the past two summers, and many have already pledged to support the 1985 program. Some of these include: the Cambridge Trust Company; the Harvard Coop; the Lotus Development Corporation; Lechmere Sales; Sears, Roebuck and Company; Star Market; and the Stride Rite Corporation, just to name a few.

Acting as master of ceremonies at the luncheon was E. Donald Lewis, president of the Chamber of Commerce and executive vice president of Hastings-Tapley Insurance Agency, Inc. Dr. Robert S. Peterkin, superintendent of Cambridge Schools, spoke about youth unemployment, and how important it is for the business community to provide learning opportunities for Cambridge youth through programs like TeenWork.

W. Easley Hamner, executive vice president of The Stubbins Associates, and president of the board of directors of Cambridge Community Services, discussed the history of the TeenWork program. Edward Murphy, general manager of Sears, Roebuck and Company, emphasized the fact that TeenWork is beneficial not only to student participants, but to businesses seeking effective employees as well.

The TeenWork program's goals is to secure 200 jobs for young people in Cambridge this summer.

Landlord loses case

An attempt by a Mass. avenue landlord to evict two tenants allegedly so that he could occupy their apartment was thwarted for a second time last month.

On February 27, District Court Judge Lawrence F. Feloney upheld the Cambridge Rent Control Board's earlier decision to deny an eviction permit to Steven Kapsalis, owner of a multi-unit apartment building at 991 Mass. Ave.

"Whatever is his primary motive," Feloney wrote in his decision, "the court finds that it is not to occupy apartment 14 personally."

Feloney pointed out that the occupants of the apartment in question had made complaints to two city agencies about Kapsalis's management of the building.

"The court finds it more credible that (Kapsalis) wants to dislodge these adversary tenants and create new economic advantages after they vacate..." he added.

Congrats, thanks, etc.

At Monday's city council meeting, the council voted to:

•express its gratitude to Father John Dever "for his dedicated service to the parishioners of St. Mary's Church on the occasion of his transfer to St. Clement's Church" in Somerville'

•"commend and congratulate the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School's Boys Track Team (and their coaches Frank McCarthy and Bob Maguire) for their exemplary performance at the Massachusetts state indoor championship meet" where they won second place;

•"commend and congratulate the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School's Girls Track Team (and coaches Joseph Sousa and Denise Banks for winning the Massachusetts state indoor championship"; and

•"recognize the tireless dedication and humanitarian efforts of Ms. Elsa Stern" by naming the recently completed new wing of the Michael J. Neville Manor after her.

NEW HOPE FOR DISC PROBLEMS—PART I

In the past, if someone had an inoperable disc condition, that person usually had limited motion, pain and discomfort, and was unable to perform the things that he/she would like to do. Since the advent of spinal manipulation to free joints that are fixed or are locked in an abnormal state, there is now hope if the joints are moving properly, even though the disc may be ruptured, the person may be able to live a relatively pain-free life and be on the road to recovery and rehabilitation without surgery.

What makes the difference? We have developed the concept that the person who ruptures a disc and has no pain has naturally better flexibility in their spine and, as a consequence of that — good movement; their disc tends to heal itself to a certain degree. People who have just minor swelling of discs, with severe discomfort, have abnormally locked spines.

We will continue to develop this concept as we go along. More to come.

Lead balloons

There are times when it is prudent to recognize that most lead balloons do not, in fact, fly.

Now is the proper time for the Arthur D. Little Co. — which once created a lighter-than-air lead balloon — to recognize that the best way for the firm to remain the "good neighbor" its officers say it wants to be is to give up its quixotic battle against the city's ban on nerve agent testing in Cambridge.

The nerve agent issue has been a public relations nightmare for the North Cambridge think tank, but, in ways similar to the debate surrounding the Nuclear Free Cambridge referendum in 1983, it has stimulated valuable public discussion of the proper role of local, state and federal government in restricting highly toxic substances within a particular municipality.

From a public relations standpoint, ADL has handled the nerve agent issue with rather surprising stupidity, first attempting to stonewall its residential neighbors and City Hall, then, belatedly, attempting to patch things up with a deceptively reassuring mass mailing (which included, for the record, a reprint of a general focus article on ADL from the "Chronicle". It is not likely the firm will ask for reprint permission on this editorial). Until recently, ADL seemed to underestimate the level of concern and intelligence of its residential neighbors, as well as their dogged determination.

ADL has not come up with any particularly convincing arguments on its own behalf. Above all, company officials have stressed that the facilities where the nerve agents are stored and tested are "state of the art" safe. At times, defenders of the ADL position have claimed that the city's nerve agent ban represents an attempt to restrict research and, by definition, thought in much the same way that opponents said the Nuclear Free Cambridge measure would have done. John Magee, ADL's president, even went so far last week as to point out that there are no similar governmentals restrictions on toxic substances in the home, such as cleaning solutions, which can also kill. One could choke to death on a glazed donut, too, but no one is considering a ban on bakeries.

The one fact which inevitably weakens any defense of ADL's position is that what's at issue here is a substance to which exposure can mean instant death, pure and simple. What is also undeniable is that a populous, urban environment is not the proper setting for the storage and testing of such substances.

The Arthur D. Little Co. has been a good neighbor in Cambridge for many years and the city wants the firm to remain such for many more years to come. But if one of the prime charges of government on any level is to protect the health and safety of its citizens, then, clearly, government must have the proper legislative tools to carry out that charge. The city's ban is not an effort to restrict research and it is not yet another attempt to over-regulate business. Instead, the ban is the proper execution of the city's responsibility to its people. While it may be true, as Judge Robert Hallisey pointed out in his ruling last week upholding the city's ban, that existing state and federal laws are not quite fair to firms like ADL which deal with highly toxic substances, the legal "loopholes" involve issues of proper study and notification prior to the issuing of regulatory bans such as this one. The fact remains that the federal government requires its contractors, like ADL, to adhere to all appropriate local regulations.

But aside from all the legal questions, it would be prudent for ADL, at this point, to recognize its responsibilities as a corporate citizen of Cambridge. As such, a continuing legal battle against the city will end up losing ADL more than it could possibly gain.

Care for COPA

The modern urban society, it seems, cannot function properly without a goodly number of human service organizations. Cambridge, as one of those societies, is blessed with a number of worthy organizations which do much to advance the quality of life in the city, particularly for those who may need a boost now and then.

Some of these agencies and service organizations function better than others, of course, but, for the most part, Cambridge is well-served by organizations such as the Cambridge Organization of Portuguese Americans (COPA) in East Cambridge.

COPA has grown from a storefront organization of volunteers to a respected cultural/human service agency serving the Portuguese population in Cambridge and elsewhere. Theirs is no small task, given that Cambridge is home to more than 15,000 persons of Portuguese descent.

This newspaper is not alone in commending COPA to the Cambridge community. US House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., US Rep. Tony Coelho and Mayor Leonard J. Russell all serve as honorary co-chairs of COPA's capital fund drive to raise $200,000 which will be used to build a coial center for elderly residents and to upgrade COPA classrooms for citizenship and English language classes.

Other agency watchers have recognized COPA's merits. Recently, "O'Jornal," the respected Portuguese weekly, presented its coveted community service award to COPA, saying: "COPA is recongized as a focal point for cultural and human services, not only for the Portuguese community in the Cambridge area, but indeed for the entire Southeastern New England community."

COPA deserves a pat on the back from its community, but more than good wishes are in order, considering the worth of the organization's capital fund drive. The best way you can say "thanks" for all COPA has done — for the city's Portuguese community and, of equal importance, for its community in general — is to contribute generously when a COPA volunteer calls.

This newspaper has supported COPA throughout its current campaign and will continue to do so right up to and including their victory dinner in June. And victory it will be, because we can't imagine that such a vital community organization will do anything but succeed in their drive to raise needed funds.

Countdown to the MX vote

In a few weeks Congress will vote on whether to build an additional 21 MX missiles. Each warhead on the MX missile has the explosive power of 23 Hiroshima bombs and there are ten warheads on each missile. Our government wants 21 missiles this year, 4,830 potential Hiroshimas, 21 are already in production, and 58 to follow. This is only the first hundred!

The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze believes it is vital to prevent the funding of these dangerous and destabilizing weapons.

Shelagh Chastain

The pros and cons of building the MX have been debated by Congress for years. Inspite of pressure from the Reagan Administration, the highly questionable wisdom of building this weapon has made Congress unable to reach a consensus. Despite claims by the Administration that the U.S. would never initiate a nuclear war, the MX is perceived by the Soviets as a first-strike weapon. Deployment of the MX in Minuteman silos, which is the current plan, will make them highly vulnerable. The silos are insufficiently hardened to protect even the smaller Minuteman weapons they now house. As Tom Wicker said (New York Times, Op Ed, March 1, 1985) "Soviet strategists certainly will ask themselves, why the U.S. would deploy a missile so easily destroyed at so great a loss? They might well conclude, to launch a surprise attack. Thus, the incentive for the Russians to attack first would be all the greater precisely because the MX's in Minuteman silos are so vulnerable." This is what is meant by a destabilizing situation.

In anticipation of the arms control talks senior government officials have been asserting that it is only the great buildup of America's military strength that has brought the Russians "back" to the arms negotiation table. Now we are assured that only the completion of the MX missile program could give the Russians the incentive to deal seriously with us at that table. Former ambassador to the Soviet Union George Kennan says, "The first of these assertions is unproved and highly unlikely. The second strikes me as the purest nonsense."

"But there is a possibility (even a probability) that the Administration has declined to recognize," Kennan continues. The Soviet leadership might really have come to the conclusion that the nuclear arms race holds no promising advantages for either side and that it would be in their interest to end it.

In 1984 Congress delayed the decision on additional MX production. Congressional approval of additional funds now can only persuade the Russians that our government is not serious about curtailing the arms race.

The Reagan Administration has said that we need the MX as a "bargaining chip" while at the same time saying that it is essential and non negotiable. Anything that is non negotiable is not a bargaining chip.

Another good reason for canceling the MX is its expense. Full deployment of the MX would cost $27 billion or more. In this time of enormous budget deficits, this country has no business spending money on even one MX missile.

Our representatives need to know that the people in their district are strongly opposed to the MX. The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze has been urged by members of Speaker O'Neill's staff to reach out to our friends and relatives across the country, ask them to speak out against the MX, and to let their representatives know how they feel. The decision about funding of the MX will be made soon by Congress. Now is the time to voice our concern.

Elderly needs

Let the coalition of Cambridge and Somerville elderly march on Speaker Tom O'Neill's office, directed by Ed Cyr, send the word out from the district of John F. Kennedy and "Tip" O'Neill, to the Republican administration condemning their threats to undermine the security and the very survival of some of the elderly.

Aided by the excellent direction of Donna Johnson, permitting all who participated to come and go as comfortably and safely as possible, and with the excellent presentations of Mary Mullen, Frances Seigel, Kathy Hatchy, and others, aide Jim Ferguson listened attentively in Speaker O'Neill's office. The cost of ever-rising rents, utilities, clothing and food and the bitter winter problems were presented very firmly.

The elderly of Cambridge and Somerville should be proud of their representatives who spoke out for them and deserve their support.

Social Security is the backbone of a civilized democracy. These meager, limited benefits were hard-earned over the Depression years.

The unconscionable acts by the Administration are an indictment of public apathy. It is the result of the four-second attention span of the average American. It is the result of small, splintered groups fighting the many problems surrounding them.

We need a united council of concerned citizens to deal in strength. Forebearance has passed beyond the point of common sense and good citizenship.

Cut the sinful overkill of the defense budget and you can provide for the indigent and elderly and the unfortunate among us and you can build the roads and bridges and hospitals and schools. This is a country of the people. It is time to stop tearing down what it took so long to create. Tax laws must be re-written now.

What the elderly were looking for was a reassurance from "Tip" O'Neill and the Democratic Party that they would be protected. A petition was submitted to Jim Ferguson calling for keeping Social Security off the budget cutters' table.

Housing complex eyed for Cambridge square

By Jack Hayes
Staff writer

While the owners of two small Central Square businesses wonder about their futures, the city and a Boston developer are moving ahead with plans to build a ten-story housing development on land now occupied by a tiny storefront on Magazine street.

"The general reception of this by the community has been so positive I can't see any impediment to this going through," said Michael Rosenberg, housing director for the city's Community Development Department.

Rosenberg pointed out that numerous meetings on the proposed development at Franklin, Green and Magazine streets have taken place between the the developer and local residents. At a public meeting last Thursday plans for the 85-unit structure were displayed.

"The more we talk to people and show them what's going on, the happier they get about it," said Leslie Watt, project director for Winn Developing Co. which is located in Faneuil Hall and has constructed over 5000 housing units from Vermont to Georgia.

But the owners of Odyssey Travel and Frank the Tailor shop seem less than enthusiastic about the new project.

Both say they have been kept pretty much in the dark about specific plans for the site, and neither has been invited to meetings on the topic.

Suzanne Diamantopoulos of Odyssey Travel said the current owner of the property has mentioned the possibility of her agency moving into space in the new building when it is complete, but says she has received no formal offers from Winn.

"All I've been given is an eviction notice," said Diamantopoulos, whose business has been located at 10 Magazine St. for five years. She added that, like Frank Pagliroulo, the tailor next door, she has been ordered to leave by May 31.

Operating under the assumption that they would have to find new premises for their businesses, both Diamantopoulos and Pagliroulo say they have searched the area for new affordable space.

A hearing on whether to grant Winn developers a "comprehensive" zoning permit necessary for construction of the building will be held on March 21 before the Board of Zoning Appeal.

TeenWork seeks summer jobs for local kids

The Cambridge TeenWork program launched its third year of operation at the Royal Sonesta Hotel on Friday, March 1. Over 70 representatives of Cambridge businesses and corporations were on hand to show their support, and to enjoy a fine lunch. The event was hosted by Bolt, Beranek and Newman, Charles Square Associates, Harvard University, MIT, the Polaroid Foundation and the Royal Sonesta Hotel.

TeenWork is an employment program operated by Cambridge Community Services in collaboration with the Cambridge Chamber of Commerce. Through TeenWork, Cambridge businesses hire high school students for the summer and/or contribute funds to sponsor the hiring of students in non-profit organizations.

Numerous businesses and corporations have contributed to TeenWork's success over the past two summers, and many have already pledged to support the 1985 program. Some of these include: the Cambridge Trust Company; the Harvard Coop; the Lotus Development Corporation; Lechmere Sales; Sears, Roebuck and Company; Star Market; and the Stride Rite Corporation, just to name a few.

Acting as master of ceremonies at the luncheon was E. Donald Lewis, president of the Chamber of Commerce and executive vice president of Hastings-Tapley Insurance Agency, Inc. Dr. Robert S. Peterkin, superintendent of Cambridge Schools, spoke about youth unemployment, and how important it is for the business community to provide learning opportunities for Cambridge youth through programs like TeenWork.

W. Easley Hamner, executive vice president of The Stubbins Associates, and president of the board of directors of Cambridge Community Services, discussed the history of the TeenWork program. Edward Murphy, general manager of Sears, Roebuck and Company, emphasized the fact that TeenWork is beneficial not only to student participants, but to businesses seeking effective employees as well.

The TeenWork program's goals is to secure 200 jobs for young people in Cambridge this summer.

Landlord loses case

An attempt by a Mass. avenue landlord to evict two tenants allegedly so that he could occupy their apartment was thwarted for a second time last month.

On February 27, District Court Judge Lawrence F. Feloney upheld the Cambridge Rent Control Board's earlier decision to deny an eviction permit to Steven Kapsalis, owner of a multi-unit apartment building at 991 Mass. Ave.

"Whatever is his primary motive," Feloney wrote in his decision, "the court finds that it is not to occupy apartment 14 personally."

Feloney pointed out that the occupants of the apartment in question had made complaints to two city agencies about Kapsalis's management of the building.

"The court finds it more credible that (Kapsalis) wants to dislodge these adversary tenants and create new economic advantages after they vacate..." he added.

Congrats, thanks, etc.

At Monday's city council meeting, the council voted to:

•express its gratitude to Father John Dever "for his dedicated service to the parishioners of St. Mary's Church on the occasion of his transfer to St. Clement's Church" in Somerville'

•"commend and congratulate the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School's Boys Track Team (and their coaches Frank McCarthy and Bob Maguire) for their exemplary performance at the Massachusetts state indoor championship meet" where they won second place;

•"commend and congratulate the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School's Girls Track Team (and coaches Joseph Sousa and Denise Banks for winning the Massachusetts state indoor championship"; and

•"recognize the tireless dedication and humanitarian efforts of Ms. Elsa Stern" by naming the recently completed new wing of the Michael J. Neville Manor after her.

NEW HOPE FOR DISC PROBLEMS—PART I

In the past, if someone had an inoperable disc condition, that person usually had limited motion, pain and discomfort, and was unable to perform the things that he/she would like to do. Since the advent of spinal manipulation to free joints that are fixed or are locked in an abnormal state, there is now hope if the joints are moving properly, even though the disc may be ruptured, the person may be able to live a relatively pain-free life and be on the road to recovery and rehabilitation without surgery.

What makes the difference? We have developed the concept that the person who ruptures a disc and has no pain has naturally better flexibility in their spine and, as a consequence of that — good movement; their disc tends to heal itself to a certain degree. People who have just minor swelling of discs, with severe discomfort, have abnormally locked spines.

We will continue to develop this concept as we go along. More to come.

Lead balloons

There are times when it is prudent to recognize that most lead balloons do not, in fact, fly.

Now is the proper time for the Arthur D. Little Co. — which once created a lighter-than-air lead balloon — to recognize that the best way for the firm to remain the "good neighbor" its officers say it wants to be is to give up its quixotic battle against the city's ban on nerve agent testing in Cambridge.

The nerve agent issue has been a public relations nightmare for the North Cambridge think tank, but, in ways similar to the debate surrounding the Nuclear Free Cambridge referendum in 1983, it has stimulated valuable public discussion of the proper role of local, state and federal government in restricting highly toxic substances within a particular municipality.

From a public relations standpoint, ADL has handled the nerve agent issue with rather surprising stupidity, first attempting to stonewall its residential neighbors and City Hall, then, belatedly, attempting to patch things up with a deceptively reassuring mass mailing (which included, for the record, a reprint of a general focus article on ADL from the "Chronicle". It is not likely the firm will ask for reprint permission on this editorial). Until recently, ADL seemed to underestimate the level of concern and intelligence of its residential neighbors, as well as their dogged determination.

ADL has not come up with any particularly convincing arguments on its own behalf. Above all, company officials have stressed that the facilities where the nerve agents are stored and tested are "state of the art" safe. At times, defenders of the ADL position have claimed that the city's nerve agent ban represents an attempt to restrict research and, by definition, thought in much the same way that opponents said the Nuclear Free Cambridge measure would have done. John Magee, ADL's president, even went so far last week as to point out that there are no similar governmentals restrictions on toxic substances in the home, such as cleaning solutions, which can also kill. One could choke to death on a glazed donut, too, but no one is considering a ban on bakeries.

The one fact which inevitably weakens any defense of ADL's position is that what's at issue here is a substance to which exposure can mean instant death, pure and simple. What is also undeniable is that a populous, urban environment is not the proper setting for the storage and testing of such substances.

The Arthur D. Little Co. has been a good neighbor in Cambridge for many years and the city wants the firm to remain such for many more years to come. But if one of the prime charges of government on any level is to protect the health and safety of its citizens, then, clearly, government must have the proper legislative tools to carry out that charge. The city's ban is not an effort to restrict research and it is not yet another attempt to overregulate business. Instead, the ban is the proper execution of the city's responsibility to its people. While it may be true, as Judge Robert Hallisey pointed out in his ruling last week upholding the city's ban, that existing state and federal laws are not quite fair to firms like ADL which deal with highly toxic substances, the legal "loopholes" involve issues of proper study and notification prior to the issuing of regulatory bans such as this one. The fact remains that the federal government requires its contractors, like ADL, to adhere to all appropriate local regulations.

But aside from all the legal questions, it would be prudent for ADL, at this point, to recognize its responsibilities as a corporate citizen of Cambridge. As such, a continuing legal battle against the city will end up losing ADL more than it could possibly gain.

Care for COPA

The modern urban society, it seems, cannot function properly without a goodly number of human service organizations. Cambridge, as one of those societies, is blessed with a number of worthy organizations which do much to advance the quality of life in the city, particularly for those who may need a boost now and then.

Some of these agencies and service organizations function better than others, of course, but, for the most part, Cambridge is well-served by organizations such as the Cambridge Organization of Portuguese Americans (COPA) in East Cambridge.

COPA has grown from a storefront organization of volunteers to a respected cultural/human service agency serving the Portuguese population in Cambridge and elsewhere. Theirs is no small task, given that Cambridge is home to more than 15,000 persons of Portuguese descent.

This newspaper is not alone in commending COPA to the Cambridge community. US House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., US Rep. Tony Coelho and Mayor Leonard J. Russell all serve as honorary co-chairs of COPA's capital fund drive to raise $200,000 which will be used to build a coial center for elderly residents and to upgrade COPA classrooms for citizenship and English language classes.

Other agency watchers have recognized COPA's merits. Recently, "O'Jornal," the respected Portuguese weekly, presented its coveted community service award to COPA, saying: "COPA is recongized as a focal point for cultural and human services, not only for the Portuguese community in the Cambridge area, but indeed for the entire Southeastern New England community."

COPA deserves a pat on the back from its community, but more than good wishes are in order, considering the worth of the organization's capital fund drive. The best way you can say "thanks" for all COPA has done — for the city's Portuguese community and, of equal importance, for its community in general — is to contribute generously when a COPA volunteer calls.

This newspaper has supported COPA throughout its current campaign and will continue to do so right up to and including their victory dinner in June. And victory it will be, because we can't imagine that such a vital community organization will do anything but succeed in their drive to raise needed funds.

Countdown to the MX vote

In a few weeks Congress will vote on whether to build an additional 21 MX missiles. Each warhead on the MX missile has the explosive power of 23 Hiroshima bombs and there are ten warheads on each missile. Our government wants 21 missiles this year, 4,830 potential Hiroshimas, 21 are already in production, and 58 to follow. This is only the first hundred!

The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze believes it is vital to prevent the funding of these dangerous and destabilizing weapons.

Shelagh Chastain

The pros and cons of building the MX have been debated by Congress for years. Inspite of pressure from the Reagan Administration, the highly questionable wisdom of building this weapon has made Congress unable to reach a consensus. Despite claims by the Administration that the U.S. would never initiate a nuclear war, the MX is perceived by the Soviets as a first-strike weapon. Deployment of the MX in Minuteman silos, which is the current plan, will make them highly vulnerable. The silos are insufficiently hardened to protect even the smaller Minuteman weapons they now house. As Tom Wicker said (New York Times, Op Ed, March 1, 1985) "Soviet strategists certainly will ask themselves, why the U.S. would deploy a missile so easily destroyed at so great a loss? They might well conclude, to launch a surprise attack. Thus, the incentive for the Russians to attack first would be all the greater precisely because the MX's in Minuteman silos are so vulnerable." This is what is meant by a destabilizing situation.

In anticipation of the arms control talks senior government officials have been asserting that it is only the great buildup of America's military strength that has brought the Russians "back" to the arms negotiation table. Now we are assured that only the completion of the MX missile program could give the Russians the incentive to deal seriously with us at that table. Former ambassador to the Soviet Union George Kennan says, "The first of these assertions is unproved and highly unlikely. The second strikes me as the purest nonsense."

"But there is a possibility (even a probability) that the Administration has declined to recognize," Kennan continues. The Soviet leadership might really have come to the conclusion that the nuclear arms race holds no promising advantages for either side and that it would be in their interest to end it.

In 1984 Congress delayed the decision on additional MX production. Congressional approval of additional funds now can only persuade the Russians that our government is not serious about curtailing the arms race.

The Reagan Administration has said that we need the MX as a "bargaining chip" while at the same time saying that it is essential and non negotiable. Anything that is non negotiable is not a bargaining chip.

Another good reason for canceling the MX is its expense. Full deployment of the MX would cost $27 billion or more. In this time of enormous budget deficits, this country has no business spending money on even one MX missile.

Our representatives need to know that the people in their district are strongly opposed to the MX. The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze has been urged by members of Speaker O'Neill's staff to reach out to our friends and relatives across the country, ask them to speak out against the MX, and to let their representatives know how they feel. The decision about funding of the MX will be made soon by Congress. Now is the time to voice our concern.

Elderly needs

Let the coalition of Cambridge and Somerville elderly march on Speaker Tom O'Neill's office, directed by Ed Cyr, send the word out from the district of John F. Kennedy and "Tip" O'Neill, to the Republican administration condemning their threats to undermine the security and the very survival of some of the elderly.

Aided by the excellent direction of Donna Johnson, permitting all who participated to come and go as comfortably and safely as possible, and with the excellent presentations of Mary Mullen, Frances Seigel, Kathy Hatchy, and others, aide Jim Ferguson listened attentively in Speaker O'Neill's office. The cost of ever-rising rents, utilities, clothing and food and the bitter winter problems were presented very firmly.

The elderly of Cambridge and Somerville should be proud of their representatives who spoke out for them and deserve their support.

Social Security is the backbone of a civilized democracy. These meager, limited benefits were hard-earned over the Depression years.

The unconscionable acts by the Administration are an indictment of public apathy. It is the result of the four-second attention span of the average American. It is the result of small, splintered groups fighting the many problems surrounding them.

We need a united council of concerned citizens to deal in strength. Forebearance has passed beyond the point of common sense and good citizenship.

Cut the sinful overkill of the defense budget and you can provide for the indigent and elderly and the unfortunate among us and you can build the roads and bridges and hospitals and schools. This is a country of the people. It is time to stop tearing down what it took so long to create. Tax laws must be re-written now.

What the elderly were looking for was a reassurance from "Tip" O'Neill and the Democratic Party that they would be protected. A petition was submitted to Jim Ferguson calling for keeping Social Security off the budget cutters' table.

Lead balloons

There are times when it is prudent to recognize that most lead balloons do not, in fact, fly.

Now is the proper time for the Arthur D. Little Co. — which once created a lighter-than-air lead balloon — to recognize that the best way for the firm to remain the "good neighbor" its officers say it wants to be is to give up its quixotic battle against the city's ban on nerve agent testing in Cambridge.

The nerve agent issue has been a public relations nightmare for the North Cambridge think tank, but, in ways similar to the debate surrounding the Nuclear Free Cambridge referendum in 1983, it has stimulated valuable public discussion of the proper role of local, state and federal government in restricting highly toxic substances within a particular municipality.

From a public relations standpoint, ADL has handled the nerve agent issue with rather surprising stupidity, first attempting to stonewall its residential neighbors and City Hall, then, belatedly, attempting to patch things up with a deceptively reassuring mass mailing (which included, for the record, a reprint of a general focus article on ADL from the "Chronicle". It is not likely the firm will ask for reprint permission on this editorial). Until recently, ADL seemed to underestimate the level of concern and intelligence of its president, even went so far last week as to point out that there are no similar governmentals restrictions on toxic substances in the home, such as cleaning solutions, which can also kill. One could choke to death on a glazed donut, too, but no one is considering a ban on bakeries.

The one fact which inevitably weakens any defense of ADL's position is that what's at issue here is a substance to which exposure can mean instant death, pure and simple. What is also undeniable is that a populous, urban environment is not the proper setting for the storage and testing of such substances.

The Arthur D. Little Co. has been a good neighbor in Cambridge for many years and the city wants the firm to remain such for many more years to come. But if one of the prime charges of government on any level is to protect the health and safety of its citizens, then, clearly, government must have the proper legislative tools to carry out that charge. The city's ban is not an effort to restrict research and it is not yet another attempt to overregulate business. Instead, the ban is the proper execution of the city's responsibility to its people. While it may be true, as Judge Robert Hallisey pointed out in his ruling last week upholding the city's ban, that existing state and federal laws are not quite

Countdown to the MX vote

In a few weeks Congress will vote on whether to build an additional 21 MX missiles. Each warhead on the MX missile has the explosive power of 23 Hiroshima bombs and there are ten warheads on each missile. Our government wants 21 missiles this year, 4,830 potential Hiroshimas, 21 are already in production, and 58 to follow. This is only the first hundred!

The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze believes it is vital to prevent the funding of these dangerous and destabilizing weapons.

Shelagh Chastain

The pros and cons of building the MX have been debated by Congress for years. Inspite of pressure from the Reagan Administration, the highly questionable wisdom of building this weapon has made Congress unable to reach a consensus. Despite claims by the Administration that the U.S. would never initiate a nuclear war, the MX is perceived by the Soviets as a first-strike weapon. Deployment of the MX in Minuteman silos, which is the current plan, will make them highly vulnerable. The silos are insufficiently hardened to protect even the smaller Minuteman weapons they now house. As Tom Wicker said (New York Times, Op Ed, March 1, 1985) "Soviet strategists certainly will ask themselves, why the U.S. would deploy a missile so easily destroyed at so great a loss? They might well conclude, to launch a surprise attack. Thus, the incentive for the Russians to attack first would be all the greater precisely because the MX's in Minuteman silos are so vulnerable." This is what is meant by a destabilizing situation.

In anticipation of the arms control talks senior government officials have been asserting that it is only the great buildup of America's military strength that has brought the Russians "back" to the arms negotiation table. Now we are assured that only the completion of the MX missile program could give the Russians the incentive to deal seriously with us at that table. Former ambassador to the Soviet Union George Kennan says, "The first of these assertions is unproved and highly unlikely. The second strikes me as the purest nonsense."

"But there is a possibility (even a probability) that the Administration has declined to recognize," Kennan continues. The Soviet leadership might really have come to the conclusion that the nuclear arms race holds no promising advantages for either side and that it would be in their interest to end it.

In 1984 Congress delayed the decision on additional MX production. Congressional approval of additional funds now can only persuade the Russians that our government is not serious about curtailing the arms race.

The Reagan Administration has said that we need the MX as a "bargaining chip" while at the same time saying that it is essential and non negotiable. Anything that is non negotiable is not a bargaining chip.

Another good reason for canceling the MX is its expense. Full deployment of the MX would cost $27 billion or more. In this time of enormous budget deficits, this country has no business spending money on even one MX missile.

Our representatives need to know that the people in their district are strongly opposed to the MX. The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze has been urged by members of Speaker O'Neill's staff to reach out to our friends and relatives across the country, ask them to speak out against the MX, and to let their representatives know how they feel. The decision about funding of the MX will be made soon by Congress. Now is the time to voice our concern.

Elderly needs

Let the coalition of Cambridge and Somerville elderly march on Speaker Tom O'Neill's office, directed by Ed Cyr, send the word out from the district of John F. Kennedy and "Tip" O'Neill, to the Republican administration condemning their threats to undermine the security and the very survival of some of the elderly.

Aided by the excellent direction of Donna Johnson, permitting all who participated to come and go as comfortably and safely as possible, and with the excellent presentations of Mary Mullen, Frances Seigel, Kathy Hatchy, and others, aide Jim Ferguson listened attentively in

The unconscionable acts by the Administration are an indictment of public apathy. It is the result of the four-second attention span of the average American. It is the result of small, splintered groups fighting the many problems surrounding them.

We need a united council of concerned citizens to deal in strength. Forebearance has passed beyond the point of common sense and good citizenship.

Cut the sinful overkill of the defense budget and you can provide for the indigent and elderly and the unfortunate among us and you can build the roads and bridges and hospitals and schools. This is a country of the people. It is time to stop

By Jack Hayes
Staff writer

While the owners of two small Central Square businesses wonder about their futures, the city and a Boston developer are moving ahead with plans to build a ten-story housing development on land now occupied by a tiny storefront on Magazine street.

"The general reception of this by the community has been so positive I can't see any impediment to this going through," said Michael Rosenberg, housing director for the city's Community Development Department.

Rosenberg pointed out that numerous meetings on the proposed development at Franklin, Green and Magazine streets have taken place between the the developer and local residents. At a public meeting last Thursday plans for the 85-unit structure were displayed.

"The more we talk to people and show them what's going on, the happier they get about it," said Leslie Watt, project director for Winn Developing Co. which is located in Faneuil Hall and has constructed over 5000 housing units from Vermont to Georgia.

But the owners of Odyssey Travel and Frank the Tailor shop seem less than enthusiastic about the new project.

Both say they have been kept pretty much in the dark about specific plans for the site, and neither has been invited to meetings on the topic.

Suzanne Diamantopoulos of Odyssey Travel said the current owner of the property has mentioned the possibility of her agency moving into space in the new building when it is complete, but says she has received no formal offers from Winn.

"All I've been given is an eviction notice," said Diamantopoulos, whose business has been located at 10 Magazine St. for five years. She added that, like Frank Pagliroulo, the tailor next door, she has been ordered to leave by May 31.

Operating under the assumption that they would have to find new premises for their businesses, both Diamantopoulos and Pagliroulo say they have searched the area for new affordable space.

A hearing on whether to grant Winn developers a "comprehensive" zoning permit necessary for construction of the building will be held on March 21 before the Board of Zoning Appeal.

Landlord loses case

An attempt by a Mass. avenue landlord to evict two tenants allegedly so that he could occupy their apartment was thwarted for a second time last month.

On February 27, District Court Judge Lawrence F. Feloney upheld the Cambridge Rent Control Board's earlier decision to deny an eviction permit to Steven Kapsalis, owner of a multi-unit apartment building at 991 Mass. Ave.

"Whatever is his primary motive," Feloney wrote in his decision, "the court finds that it is not to occupy apartment 14 personally."

Feloney pointed out that the occupants of the apartment in question had made complaints to two city agencies about Kapsalis's manage-

TeenWork seeks summer jobs for local kids

The Cambridge TeenWork program launched its third year of operation at the Royal Sonesta Hotel on Friday, March 1. Over 70 representatives of Cambridge businesses and corporations were on hand to show their support, and to enjoy a fine lunch. The event was hosted by Bolt, Beranek and Newman, Charles Square Associates, Harvard University, MIT, the Polaroid Foundation and the Royal Sonesta Hotel.

TeenWork is an employment program operated by Cambridge Community Services in collaboration with the Cambridge Chamber of Commerce. Through TeenWork, Cambridge businesses hire high school students for the summer and/or contribute funds to sponsor the hiring of students in non-profit organizations.

Numerous businesses and corporations have contributed to TeenWork's success over the past two summers, and many have already pledged to support the 1985 program. Some of these include: the Cambridge Trust Company; the Harvard Coop; the Lotus Development Corporation; Lechmere Sales; Sears, Roebuck and Company; Star Market; and the Stride Rite Corporation, just to name a few.

Acting as master of ceremonies at the luncheon was E. Donald Lewis, president of the Chamber of Commerce and executive vice president of Hastings-Tapley Insurance Agency, Inc. Dr. Robert S. Peterkin, superintendent of Cambridge Schools, spoke about youth unemployment, and how important it is for the business community to provide learning opportunities for Cambridge youth through programs like TeenWork.

W. Easley Hamner, executive vice president of The Stubbins Associates, and president of the board of directors of Cambridge Community Services, discussed the history of the TeenWork program. Edward Murphy, general manager of Sears, Roebuck and Company, emphasized the fact that TeenWork is beneficial not only to student participants, but to businesses seeking effective employees as well.

The TeenWork program's goals is to secure 200 jobs for young people in Cambridge this summer.

NEW HOPE FOR DISC PROBLEMS—PART I

In the past, if someone had an inoperable disc condition, that person usually had limited motion, pain and discomfort, and was unable to perform the things that he/she would like to do. Since the advent of spinal manipulation to free joints that are fixed or are locked in an abnormal state, there is now hope if the joints are moving properly, even though the disc may be ruptured, the person may be able to live a relatively pain-free life and be on the road to recovery and rehabilitation without surgery.

What makes the difference? We have developed the concept that the person who ruptures a disc and has no pain has naturally better flexibility in their spine and, as a consequence of that — good movement; their disc tends to heal itself to a certain degree. People who have just minor swelling of discs, with severe discomfort, have abnormally locked spines.

We will continue to develop this concept as we go along. More to come.

Lead balloons

There are times when it is prudent to recognize that most lead balloons do not, in fact, fly.

Now is the proper time for the Arthur D. Little Co. — which once created a lighter-than-air lead balloon — to recognize that the best way for the firm to remain the "good neighbor" its officers say it wants to be is to give up its quixotic battle against the city's ban on nerve agent testing in Cambridge.

The nerve agent issue has been a public relations nightmare for the North Cambridge think tank, but, in ways similar to the debate surrounding the Nuclear Free Cambridge referendum in 1983, it has stimulated valuable public discussion of the proper role of local, state and federal government in restricting highly toxic substances within a particular municipality.

From a public relations standpoint, ADL has handled the nerve agent issue with rather surprising stupidity, first attempting to stonewall its residential neighbors and City Hall, then, belatedly, attempting to patch things up with a deceptively reassuring mass mailing (which included, for the record, a reprint of a general focus article on ADL from the "Chronicle". It is not likely the firm will ask for reprint permission on this editorial). Until recently, ADL seemed to underestimate the level of concern and intelligence of its residential neighbors, as well as their dogged determination.

ADL has not come up with any particularly convincing arguments on its own behalf. Above all, company officials have stressed that the facilities where the nerve agents are stored and tested are "state of the art" safe. At times, defenders of the ADL position have claimed that the city's nerve agent ban represents an attempt to restrict research and, by definition, thought in much the same way that opponents said the Nuclear Free Cambridge measure would have done. John Magee, ADL's president, even went so far last week as to point out that there are no similar governmentals restrictions on toxic substances in the home, such as cleaning solutions, which can also kill. One could choke to death on a glazed donut, too, but no one is considering a ban on bakeries.

The one fact which inevitably weakens any defense of ADL's position is that what's at issue here is a substance to which exposure can mean instant death, pure and simple. What is also undeniable is that a populous, urban environment is not the proper setting for the storage and testing of such substances.

The Arthur D. Little Co. has been a good neighbor in Cambridge for many years and the city wants the firm to remain such for many more years to come. But if one of the prime charges of government on any level is to protect the health and safety of its citizens, then, clearly, government must have the proper legislative tools to carry out that charge. The city's ban is not an effort to restrict research and it is not yet another attempt to overregulate business. Instead, the ban is the proper execution of the city's responsibility to its people. While it may be true, as Judge Robert Hallisey pointed out in his ruling last week upholding the city's ban, that existing state and federal laws are not quite fair to firms like ADL which deal with highly toxic substances, the legal "loopholes" involve issues of proper study and notification prior to the issuing of regulatory bans such as this one. The fact remains that the federal government requires its contractors, like ADL, to adhere to all appropriate local regulations.

But aside from all the legal questions, it would be prudent for ADL, at this point, to recognize its responsibilities as a corporate citizen of Cambridge. As such, a continuing legal battle against the city will end up losing ADL more than it could possibly gain.

Care for COPA

The modern urban society, it seems, cannot function properly without a goodly number of human service organizations. Cambridge, as one of those societies, is blessed with a number of worthy organizations which do much to advance the quality of life in the city, particularly for those who may need a boost now and then.

Some of these agencies and service organizations function better than others, of course, but, for the most part, Cambridge is well-served by organizations such as the Cambridge Organization of Portuguese Americans (COPA) in East Cambridge.

COPA has grown from a storefront organization of volunteers to a respected cultural/human service agency serving the Portuguese population in Cambridge and elsewhere. Theirs is no small task, given that Cambridge is home to more than 15,000 persons of Portuguese descent.

This newspaper is not alone in commending COPA to the Cambridge community. US House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., US Rep. Tony Coelho and Mayor Leonard J. Russell all serve as honorary co-chairs of COPA's capital fund drive to raise $200,000 which will be used to build a coial center for elderly residents and to upgrade COPA classrooms for citizenship and English language classes.

Other agency watchers have recognized COPA's merits. Recently, "O'Jornal," the respected Portuguese weekly, presented its coveted community service award to COPA, saying: "COPA is recongized as a focal point for cultural and human services, not only for the Portuguese community in the Cambridge area, but indeed for the entire Southeastern New England community."

COPA deserves a pat on the back from its community, but more than good wishes are in order, considering the worth of the organization's capital fund drive. The best way you can say "thanks" for all COPA has done — for the city's Portuguese community and, of equal importance, for its community in general — is to contribute generously when a COPA volunteer calls.

This newspaper has supported COPA throughout its current campaign and will continue to do so right up to and including their victory dinner in June. And victory it will be, because we can't imagine that such a vital community organization will do anything but succeed in their drive to raise needed funds.

Countdown to the MX vote

In a few weeks Congress will vote on whether to build an additional 21 MX missiles. Each warhead on the MX missile has the explosive power of 23 Hiroshima bombs and there are ten warheads on each missile. Our government wants 21 missiles this year, 4,830 potential Hiroshimas, 21 are already in production, and 58 to follow. This is only the first hundred!

The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze believes it is vital to prevent the funding of these dangerous and destabilizing weapons.

Shelagh Chastain

The pros and cons of building the MX have been debated by Congress for years. Inspite of pressure from the Reagan Administration, the highly questionable wisdom of building this weapon has made Congress unable to reach a consensus. Despite claims by the Administration that the U.S. would never initiate a nuclear war, the MX is perceived by the Soviets as a first-strike weapon. Deployment of the MX in Minuteman silos, which is the current plan, will make them highly vulnerable. The silos are insufficiently hardened to protect even the smaller Minuteman weapons they now house. As Tom Wicker said (New York Times, Op Ed, March 1, 1985) "Soviet strategists certainly will ask themselves, why the U.S. would deploy a missile so easily destroyed at so great a loss? They might well conclude, to launch a surprise attack. Thus, the incentive for the Russians to attack first would be all the greater precisely because the MX's in Minuteman silos are so vulnerable." This is what is meant by a destabilizing situation.

In anticipation of the arms control talks senior government officials have been asserting that it is only the great buildup of America's military strength that has brought the Russians "back" to the arms negotiation table. Now we are assured that only the completion of the MX missile program could give the Russians the incentive to deal seriously with us at that table. Former ambassador to the Soviet Union George Kennan says, "The first of these assertions is unproved and highly unlikely. The second strikes me as the purest nonsense."

"But there is a possibility (even a probability) that the Administration has declined to recognize," Kennan continues. The Soviet leadership might really have come to the conclusion that the nuclear arms race holds no promising advantages for either side and that it would be in their interest to end it.

In 1984 Congress delayed the decision on additional MX production. Congressional approval of additional funds now can only persuade the Russians that our government is not serious about curtailing the arms race.

The Reagan Administration has said that we need the MX as a "bargaining chip" while at the same time saying that it is essential and non negotiable. Anything that is non negotiable is not a bargaining chip.

Another good reason for canceling the MX is its expense. Full deployment of the MX would cost $27 billion or more. In this time of enormous budget deficits, this country has no business spending money on even one MX missile.

Our representatives need to know that the people in their district are strongly opposed to the MX. The Cambridge Lobby for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze has been urged by members of Speaker O'Neill's staff to reach out to our friends and relatives across the country, ask them to speak out against the MX, and to let their representatives know how they feel. The decision about funding of the MX will be made soon by Congress. Now is the time to voice our concern.

Elderly needs

Let the coalition of Cambridge and Somerville elderly march on Speaker Tom O'Neill's office, directed by Ed Cyr, send the word out from the district of John F. Kennedy and "Tip" O'Neill, to the Republican administration condemning their threats to undermine the security and the very survival of some of the elderly.

Aided by the excellent direction of Donna Johnson, permitting all who participated to come and go as comfortably and safely as possible, and with the excellent presentations of Mary Mullen, Frances Seigel, Kathy Hatchy, and others, aide Jim Ferguson listened attentively in Speaker O'Neill's office. The cost of ever-rising rents, utilities, clothing and food and the bitter winter problems were presented very firmly.

The elderly of Cambridge and Somerville should be proud of their representatives who spoke out for them and deserve their support.

Social Security is the backbone of a civilized democracy. These meager, limited benefits were hard-earned over the Depression years.

The unconscionable acts by the Administration are an indictment of public apathy. It is the result of the four-second attention span of the average American. It is the result of small, splintered groups fighting the many problems surrounding them.

We need a united council of concerned citizens to deal in strength. Forebearance has passed beyond the point of common sense and good citizenship.

Cut the sinful overkill of the defense budget and you can provide for the indigent and elderly and the unfortunate among us and you can build the roads and bridges and hospitals and schools. This is a country of the people. It is time to stop tearing down what it took so long to create. Tax laws must be re-written now.

What the elderly were looking for was a reassurance from "Tip" O'Neill and the Democratic Party that they would be protected. A petition was submitted to Jim Ferguson calling for keeping Social Security off the budget cutters' table.

RE: UDAG Application by the City of Cambridge to assist
U. S. Trust Corporation in developing a $15,000,000.00 Building

Dear Mr. Healy:

Mayor Leonard Russell and City Councillor Walter Sullivan are on the Board of Directors of U. S. Trust/Middlesex which is a subsidiary of the UST Corporation.

It is my opinion that both City Councillors, pursuant to Chapter 268A of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, would have to disclose to the City Council that they are members of the Board of Directors of the U. S. Trust/Middlesex and, as a result, would have to refrain from voting on the Authorization to Submit the Application or any subsidiary votes required for the above project. A written statement of the above would also be filed with the City Clerk of Cambridge.

As a result, only seven (7) members of the Cambridge City Council would be eligible to vote on said Application or any subsidiary issues needed to complete the project. If the remaining seven (7) members of the City Council vote to authorize the City Manager to submit the Application and said Application is funded, it is my opinion, under State Law, the City may receive the grant and expend the funds pursuant to the Application.

Very truly yours,

The UST Corp Office Building, located at the corner of Portland Street and Broadway, sits at the edge of the Neighborhood Four residential community, adjacent to the Kendall Square Redevelopment Area. To that end, the materials and scale elements of the new building intend to be sympathetic to the nearby residential structures, without compromising the integrity or economy of the office function the building is to serve.

II. Architectural Guidelines

-On the Portland Street facade, the parked cars will be screened from the street as much as possible.

-The Davis Street facade will have as much brick as possible with garage openings as small as possible to allow for proper natural ventilation of the facility.

-The brick on the exterior walls of the office floors of the building and their base will match the brick of the existing box factory as closely as possible. On the portions of these brick walls which contain openings, the windows shall

To the Honorable, the City Council:

On Monday, March 18, 1985, the Community Development Department and the City Manager's Office are submitting a UDAG application to assist the U.S. Trust Corporation in developing a $15,000,00.00 Office Building.

I am a director of the U.S. Trust/Middlesex which is a subsidiary of the U.S. Trust Corporation. As such it is my intention to refrain from voting on the Authorization to Submit the Application or any subsidiary votes required for the above project.

The City Solicitor of Cambridge, by an opinion dated March 12, 1985, has ruled that it would be a conflict to participate in the above vote or any subsidiary vote required on the above project. It is my intention to abide by the above opinion issued by the City Solicitor.

I am requesting that a copy of this notice be filed with the City Clerk.

Very truly yours,

Mayor Leonard J. Russell

Dear Mr. Healy:

Two City Councillors, Walter Sullivan and Leonard Russell are on the Board of Directors of U.S. Trust/Middlesex which is a subsidiary of the UST Corporation.

It is my opinion that both City Councillors, pursuant to 268A of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, would have to disclose to the City Council that they are members of the Board of Directors of the U.S. Trust/Middlesex and as a result, would have to refrain from voting on the Authorization to Submit the Application or any subsidiary votes required for the above project. A written statement of the above would also be filed with the City Clerk of Cambridge.

As a result, only seven (7) members of the Cambridge City Council would be eligible to vote on said Application or any subsidiary issues needed to

RE: UST Corporation UDAG
Public Hearing

I am writing to request that a public hearing on the above referenced project be scheduled for the City Council meeting to be held on March 18, 1985.

As you know, we have been working with UST Corporation over the past two months in developing an application for Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The UDAG is needed to assist UST in the construction of a proposed new office building and branch bank to be located on 196 Broadway in the Area Four/Kendall Square area.

To comply with HUD regulations, a public hearing that is properly advertised and noticed needs to be held prior to submission of the application.

In connection with this public hearing, we expect to submit for the same meeting a resolution for consideration by City Council authorizing submission of the application. This resolution, along with a completed application will be transmitted to you in the next two weeks.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Robert W. Healy

FROM: Kathy A. Spiegelman
Assistant City Manager

RE: UST Corporation
UDAG Application

Pursuant both to my memorandum of February 21, 1985 and to the public hearing to be held on March 18, 1985, regarding the above referenced subject, I am herewith transmitting, for Council consideration, an application for UDAG funding to be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development by March 31, 1985.

As noted in my February 21 memo, we have been working closely with UST Corporation over the past two months on this project which involves the construction of a new 10 story, $15 million office building at 196 Broadway in Area Four. UST has met several times with residents of Area Four in an effort to develop local support and to assure a minimum impact on the neighborhood. As a result of these meetings, UST has made several committments involving jobs, employment training, design changes and housing which were requested by residents.

Briefly, the project involves the partial demolition of an existing structure located at 196 Broadway; rehabilitation of the remaining 42,000 square feet of office space; construction of a new 92,000 square foot building; and construction of a new 128 car parking garage. UST will consolidate all of their data processing operations at this location and occupy approximately 60% of the total space. Additionally, the existing U.S. Trust/Middlesex branch bank, presently located in Kendall Square will be relocated into this building in a new drive-up facility.

It is expected that this project will involve the creation and/or retention of 731 jobs. Of this figure, it is estimated that approximately 531 will be new employment opportunities.

As noted earlier, total project cost is $15 million, of which $4.2 million is proposed to be in the form of a UDAG loan from the City to the developer. Although HUD will set the actual terms for the loan payback, we are proposing that the UDAG funds be loaned to UST at an annual interest rate of 6% for a term of 15 years. Further, as a result of negotiations with the neighborhood, we are also proposing that all loan repayment proceeds, (principal and interest) be expended exclusively in Area Four for eligible community development activities in an arrangement similar to that employed by the North Cambridge and East Cambridge Stabilization Committees.

Please find enclosed a proposed Council resolution which would authorize you to submit the application and to make certain assurances to HUD in connection with said application as required by Federal regulations.
