reserves. The largest of Australia's ka-aroos can bound along at 40 m.p.h. and height-foot fences.

Its main effects, he says, will be that m-kangaroos will be left dead on the grou-where they were shot instead of be-skinned for the formerly lucrative mu-million dollar export market.

However, the Queensland Save the Ka-garoo Committee maintains that the b-may save the red and blue kangaroos fr-extinction.

The committee says that the red, blue, agray kangaroos are the prime target shooters, whose main source of income lie-the export market.

Ban protested

Not surprisingly, the Australian Kangar-Industries Association is unhappy about ban. A spokesman said there was not eno-consumption of kangaroo skins in Austr-to make the industry viable.

"If kangaroos are not shot by the indust-they will be shot by the graziers and lefdie," he said.

In the financial year ending last Ju-Australian kangaroo products earned $- million in export income.

A total of 551,475 skins were exported $1.3 million dollars, with the United Sta-Italy, and West Germany as the best custers.
