Historic election

The Cambridge Historical Society elected a new slate of officers at its 92nd annual meeting on Jan. 19. M. Wyllis Bibbins was elected president. Allison Crump, Karen Falb and Elizabeth Meyer were elected vice presidents. David Klempin will continue as secretary and Andrew Leighton became the new treasurer. Anne Donaghy was elected curator, and Luise Erdmann and Charles Sullivan were elected co-editors.

New members elected to the council are Robin Harris, Gillian Richardson and Martin Slobodkin. They join re-elected members Charlotte Moore, Maura Smith and Shelagh Hadley. Continuing as the society's executive director is Warren M. Little.

The council and membership thanked outgoing president George Hanford for his two years of leadership, and Bibbins presented him with a carving knife in recognition of his efforts to illustrate "Cambridge on the Cutting Edge" through the society's publications and programs celebrating Cambridge's 150th.

Paula Richter, assistant curator of American Decorative Arts at the Peabody-Essex Museum in Salem, gave an illustrated talk on samplers following the business meeting. After her talk, members enjoyed the traditional hot chocolate and a birthday cake prepared by Karen Falb.

Membership in the Cambridge Historical Society is open to anyone interested in Cambridge's history.

For membership information, write the society at 159 Brattle St., or call 549-4252.
