Food Reveals Character – In Literature and Life

Spring Culinary Event

Sunday, May 7, 2000, 2–4 p.m.

Askwith Lecture Hall, Longfellow Hall, Appian Way, Cambridge

5/6/00

“Walk me through your checkout line and I’ll tell you who you are,” says novelist Elinor Lipman, who rounds out her fiction with telling details about what her characters choose to eat. In her memoir, My Kitchen Wars, Betty Fussell uses memorable food moments to mark the turning points in her eventful marriage. These engaging writers show how food, drink and cooking can become revealing and often funny ways to define real and contemporary life, real and imagined.

Speakers

Elinor Lipman is the author of a half-dozen novels, including The Inn at Lake Devine and her latest book, The Ladies’ Man. In addition to My Kitchen Wars Betty Fussell has written many books including The Story of Corn and has lectured and written widely on food history.

To be followed by a reception at the Schlesinger Library, The Radcliffe Institute.

Free parking will be available at the Everett Street Garage, corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Everett Street
