Commercial and institutional over-development press in on Cambridge from every direction; if left unrestrained, over-development will burden our city with insoluble problems of congestion, crowding and traffic. At the same time, bizarre conditions in the real estate market result in a dwindling supply of economical housing, and Cambridge is increasingly unaffordable by middle income families. Though our zoning is out of date, our City Administration will not respond to residential concerns, and our City Council is deadlocked.

Cambridge neighborhoods, in short, are in trouble.

OUR PURPOSE:

We are residents from all over Cambridge who are assembling a new citizen activist group, Cambridge Citizens for Liveable Neighborhoods (CCLN). Our purpose is to accomplish what our City government has thus far failed to do: Control over-development, and guide Cambridge's future. In the near term, we will:

- Alert Cambridge residents to over-development's threats to their neighborhoods.
- Promote better cooperation among residents and neighborhood groups already active in opposing over-development.
- Combat specific ill-conceived or illegal development projects, and prevent irreversible destructive construction.
- File zoning petitions to protect residential interests and to close loopholes in
