

If Lincoln Street have become a public way ^{by dedication} before the Statute of 1846. (which is implied to become by being opened and used for 20 years) and was then of full width, no time less than 40 years would give any encroachment legal validity.

In other words if Lincoln Street was opened in 1806 and remained open and unenclosed till 1846. it became a public way by dedication.

If it was then of full width, any person who subsequently enclosed a portion of said Street could not acquire a legal claim to the land so enclosed until the expiration of 40 years. that is to say, not before 1876 certainly, and he could never have an equitable claim to the land so enclosed.

Lucien 10. 216

Handwritten musical notation on ten staves, consisting of notes, rests, and clefs, written in a cursive style.