Arbor Day

and

Japanese Maple Tree Celebration

at Mount Auburn Cemetery

The poster features a textured, woodcut-style background. On the left, there is a small illustration of a traditional Japanese garden with a fence and trees. The text 'Arbor Day' is prominently displayed in a large, serif font, with 'and' in a smaller font below it. A central rectangular inset contains a detailed illustration of a Japanese maple leaf. At the bottom, the text 'Japanese Maple Tree Celebration' is written in a bold, sans-serif font, followed by 'at Mount Auburn Cemetery' in a smaller font.

The collection of trees at Mount Auburn numbers over 5,000 and includes more than 750 different types, making the Cemetery an arboretum of national importance.

In the fall of 1999, Mount Auburn was pleased to add some very special trees to this collection: a matched set of four Japanese maples from the courtyard of the Boston Public Library.

Dear Friends,

This year's annual Arbor Day celebration will be particularly special as we welcome the "new" trees from Boston and hear about the new design for Asa Gray Garden. Noted landscape architect Craig Halvorson, designer of Post Office Square Park in Boston, will speak at 2:30 p.m. about his ideas for this important space at Mount Auburn Cemetery. We will also honor the memory of Asa Gray, the great American botanist. I hope you and your family will be able to join us.
