CRLS science team reflects on Olympiad victory

BY JESSICA LEIGHT
Student Correspondent

When the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School science team took first place at the state Science Olympiad competition recently, the 20 team members present shouted, cried, jumped, and even sang.

After the weeks of intense study and preparation, of graham crackers, microwave popcorn and crises in a classroom at the high school for hours after school, the tension was finally broken — and in the best possible manner.

March 20, the day of the competition, had not been easy. No one was certain that Cambridge would win, even after the medals for individual events had been announced. And so, when the trophy came, it was that much sweeter.

In the last two weeks before the Olympiad competition, the entire team spent five hours a day after school preparing under the supervision of coaches Tad Sudnick and Kris Newton, a commitment which is intense, draining, and undoubtedly a "bonding" experience.

"I've never worked so hard for something in my entire life, and I've never been in a situation where everyone was so focused on something," said senior Bushra Makiya. "Everyone worked so hard and there was not a single person who didn't contribute, which was awesome."

At the same time, the last few days were not easy.

"The week leading up to the competition had been really hard on some of us," said sophomore Ben Somberg. "The night before ... was especially tough for me when our Mission Possible [Rube Goldberg] device just wasn't working, and we knew we were going to have to come in the next day with something we weren't exactly proud of."

On the day of the competition, the pressure built, until the entire team was sitting together in the auditorium, waiting for the final results to be read.

KIDS ON THE BEAT

"It was incredibly tense until we heard that Wayland High School came in second, and we knew we must be in first place," said junior Walter Drisdell.

To senior captain Rabi Whitaker, the moment when Cambridge's name was read and the room exploded with cheers and whistles seemed almost too good to be true.

"Every year before the Olympiad, I think about our chances of winning, and how much time we've spent preparing," Whitaker said. "Every year, I think we have just as good a shot at the championship as any other team. But this year, when we actually won, I was in a state of complete shock. I never imagined just how thrilling it would be to get up on stage as the first place team."

To some extent, the triumphant atmosphere of those moments on the stage endured the next week. Currently on a break before resuming preparation for the national competition, held in Chicago in May, science teamers nonetheless find themselves drawn to the room where so many hours were spent studying. On the days when meetings were held, most students did not leave but lingered, joking and chatting with the people who they have spent so many hours with. Leaving any time before 4 p.m. was just too weird.

"I enjoy leaving school at 2:30, but at the same time it feels strange," said senior captain Noaman Vaidya. "This is the first time I've seen sunlight in two months. Everyone's been congratulating us all week. What a thrill it is to win!"

Especially for seniors, who saw the team come in fourth three years ago, then third, then second, and then first, this year's win and the upcoming trip to Chicago are the culmination of years of work. But for everyone on the team or connected with it, it is a hard-won victory, and one to be savored.

"This victory signifies the true strength of CRLS, and specifically of the science department," said junior Emma Stickgold. "We are so lucky to have so many great teachers who are willing to dedicate countless hours to help students in their events. The captains are to be commended for their excellent work in bringing the team together and making things work."

"This victory signifies the true strength of CRLS, and specifically of the science department."

Things worked this year for the CRLS science team, and that's what they have been celebrating all week.

Trip to Russia marks 10th anniversary

Ten years ago this April, the CRLS Russian program hosted its first group of students and teachers from Russia.

The guests were here two weeks, then the CRLS Russian students, accompanied by Russian teacher Lucinda Leveille and science teacher Tad Sudnick, made the trek to Jaroslavl, Russia; thereby completing the first high school Russian exchange in Cambridge history.

Since 1990, the CRLS Russian Exchange has been paired with School #238 in St. Petersburg. The fifth round of exchange with this school will be completed with Leveille and five brave CRLS Russian students heading off April 10 for a 20-day expedition to St. Petersburg.

Stephen Huenneke, Ilya Luvish, Case Randall, Christina Roth, and Ronald Stewart will join the ranks of the 52 CRLS students who have traveled to Russia over the years.

Plans for St. Petersburg include sightseeing, helping out in English language classes at School #238, historic walks around the city, museum visits, cultural events like ballet, music performances and opera, outdoor picnics, and time at home with hosts.

CRLS homework is done on a daily basis so that students will not fall behind in their studies, and they keep a daily journal to remember and reflect upon their experience.

The Cambridge guests are always accompanied by their Russian hosts on excursions and walks around the city. With the political situation a bit tricky due to the NATO intervention in Serbia, Leveille will decide while in St. Petersburg whether or not to go to Moscow for the planned three-day visit. Plans for Moscow include the Bolshoi Theater, the Kremlin, the Tretyakov Gallery and the Tchaikovsky Conservatory.

The group will return Saturday, May 1, 1999, exactly 10 years after

Program spotlights Indian legend

The Underground Railway Theater will perform "Vision of Dreaming Branch" on Sunday, April 11, at 2 p.m. in the Sakey Lecture Hall of the main library, 449 Broadway.

A Hopi Indian legend come to life, this presentation is comic and poetic. It blends puppets, masks, music, instruments and ancient legends to tell the story of the adventures of an orphan girl as she searches for her heritage.

This program is free and open to the public. The Cambridge Public Library is handicapped accessible. For more information, call the library at 349-4040, fax 349-4028, or e-mail www.ci.cambridge.ma.us.

Pilot play debuts tonight

The Pilot School of Cambridge Rindge and Latin School debuts "Where's My Bubble?" tonight, April 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the CRLS Fitzgerald Theater, 459 Broadway.

Shows continue Friday and Saturday, also at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 and will be available at the door. Advance tickets are available at the Pilot School Office, Room R510, at CRLS.

This year's play follows a 27-year-old progressive educational tradition of going boldly where few other school programs have dared to go. Students, entirely on their own, have written, directed, arranged and choreographed a series of satirical skits, musical parodies, hip hop dances and raps that laugh mockingly in the face of the controversial statewide high stakes, MCAS exit tests, and at the nationwide standardization movement.

The play's title, "Where's My Bubble?," refers to those forms students must fill out every time they are evaluated in a standardized test — the circles students must darken with No. 2 pencils look like bubbles.

Proceeds benefit Pilot School scholarship and activities funds. For more information, call 349-6674.

The MIT/CRLS FIRST robotics Team 97, "The Psychedelics," won second place in its alliance with the Somerville, N.J. "Dexterous Gearheads" at the recent Johnson & Johnson Mid-Atlantic Robotics Regional competition at Rutgers University.

Against 36 other teams, the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School squad had placed 13th in the qualifying rounds over two days, and was chosen by fourth-seeded Somerville as partner for the elimination rounds.

The team has qualified to compete in the nationals at Epcot in Florida on April 22-24.

The Cambridge team's robot driver, Dana Jones, a CRLS sophomore, helped the Psychedelics win the "Best Play of the Day" award for strategic play in an earlier seeding round with the Kintnersville, Penn. "Cybersonics Technology" team.

"I'm proud of our team," said Rainuka Gupta, MIT senior and team coordinator. "It's great to be rewarded for our hard work. This is the first time we've placed at the regionals. We're excited by our success and are even more excited by what will come at nationals."

The competition pitted pairs of robots against each other to lift disk-shaped pillows to a height of eight feet, with bonuses awarded to robots which could mount a low platform on casters, called the puck, while defending against the opposition. The teams had designed and built the robots over a six-week period ending Feb. 22.

Malika Napoli, CRLS senior, described the process: "We broke up into groups to work on different parts of the robot. Then we collaborated together to build it. We went through some ordeals. For instance, we found near the end that we had too much weight, so we had to take the whole thing apart and put it back together."

Anton Abaya, a senior, could feel the excitement in the crowd.

"Our robot had the speed and power. It was also deceptive," Abaya said. "It looked like a tin can on wheels; you didn't think it could pack a punch. But it was a really powerful defender, and everyone in the stands said, 'Look at Team 97 go!'"

Badger, Bay State budget impasses share similar theme

BY TREVOR HUGHES
State House News Service

Could it be the cranberries?

Massachusetts and Wisconsin share the distinction of being the nation's leading producers of the tart little red berries. The two states now share another, more dubious distinction: the only states limping along without an approved budget for the current fiscal year.

But the distinctions don't end there. As in the Bay State, Wisconsin lawmakers are wrangling over tax cuts, education funding and spending their share of the multi-state tobacco settlement.

In Massachusetts, House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) and Senate President Thomas Birmingham (D-Chelsea) are trying to decide whether to cut the income tax rate from its 5.95 percent rate. Finneran wants to go to 5.75, limit state spending and reform the MBTA, while Birmingham prefers to provide property tax relief for elders, offer tax breaks to low-income families, and vastly increase prescription drug and health insurance coverage.

It's much the same situation in Wisconsin.

The Republican-controlled Assembly wants to cut the state's income tax rate, set at 6.77 percent for most people. The Democrat-controlled Senate wants to pour money from the state's lottery and approximately $600 million budget surplus into property tax relief, education and recycling.

But unlike Massachusetts, where Finneran and Birmingham met this week on Birmingham's balcony, the two sides in Wisconsin haven't sat down together since July 15. A similar situation occurred there in 1997, when the budget was signed in October. Last year's Massachusetts state budget was signed on July 30.

According to Wisconsin Senate Majority Leader Chuck Chvala, differences over the Badger State's approximately $30 billion two-year budget could be settled in a few days if the four-member Assembly conference committee returns to the table.

"The Republicans are almost single-mindedly focused on tax cuts. We think residents want a more balanced approach," said Chvala, who is the Democratic leader of the 33-member Senate. "Right now, it's kind of just a stare-down. I expect things will improve."

"(The Republicans) said we're not going to negotiate until you give us a number on the tax cuts. Then they walked away from the table, took their ball and went home," Chvala added. "In order to negotiate, you have to be at the table. We could finish the negotiation in two days. It's the kind of thing you could do if there was a commitment to get it done quickly."

Like his Massachusetts counterparts, Chvala said state residents aren't being hurt by the impasse. He added that by law, the government continues to spend at the previous year's levels until a budget is passed. Massachusetts legislators have already passed three interim budgets to keep state government and now, local schools, operating.

"People go on with their lives," Chvala said. "In the Legislature we tend to think everything revolves around us, when in fact in most people's lives it's much more important how their kids are doing in school and getting them to the soccer game. You've heard the saying: if you like sausage or law, you should watch it be made. When it's all said and done, the people will be happy with the result."

But state Administration Secretary Mark Bugher said he's concerned legislators aren't taking their work seriously enough. Because Wisconsin's government will keep running absent a budget, the pressure, unfortunately, is off, Bugher said.

"The problem is in Wisconsin we have no penalties for failure to pass the budget. The Legislature is simply not motivated by the press," Bugher said. "We have a full-time Legislature. We have 132 members and I think the public deserves to have the work of the public done. If (members of the public) are made to feel the pain, I think that would in some ways move people back to the table and instill such motivation."

As he did in 1995, Bugher said he and GOP Gov. Tommy Thompson have been trying to broker a deal between Assembly Republicans and Senate Democrats. Bugher urged his counterpart in Massachusetts, Administration and Finance Secretary Andrew Natisos, to do the same.

"Our view is that the governor has the ultimate responsibility for operations of the state government. People hold the governor personally responsible," Bugher said. "In some ways, the Legislature is insulated from political or popular criticism. In som you have to assume respo for a leadership role."

"The governor has no a to order people back to t but he does have the bully and he can try to cut thos ideological differences and at something that will ... the most votes in both brar Bugher added.

Chvala agreed that help Bugher and Thompson is vit pecially because the split Le ture has never overridden an of Thompson's approxim 1,600 vetoes. In Massachu legislative Democrats can ride almost any Cellucci veto choose.

"I think the governor's inv ment out here is critical," Ch said. "We would have a hard here coming to agreement it Assembly and the Senate reac an agreement and then the go nor vetoed all of the items the mocrats wanted. It would make sense for us."

Cellucci blasts leaders for assuming too much budget control

BY TREVOR HUGHES
State House News Service

BOSTON — Gov. Paul Cellucci earlier this week lashed out at House and Senate leaders for personally handling negotiations for the 60-day-late state budget, arguing their desire to "have all the control" has stalled deliberations and subverted the legislative process.

In response, House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) and Senate President Thomas Birmingham (D-Chelsea) pleaded for understanding. Finneran argued residents should be patient since "life has never been better in Massachusetts." Both said they understand that the Legislature looks bad due to their inability to get the budget passed.

Speaking to reporters before attending a press conference at the Boston Public Library, Birmingham said he and Finneran met over the weekend and will meet again. The president said a breakthrough on the nearly $21 billion budget could be forthcoming, but noted differences remain over tax cuts, education and health care funding and MBTA reform.

"You know the saying: 90 percent of success is showing up. That applies with special force to negotiations. I'm happy that we're grinding it out and I continue to look for the breakthrough," said Birmingham. "We're making progress. Look, nobody's more frustrated than I am."

"We've got a job to do. We've got a job that's overdue," Birmingham added. "It could well be that we have a breakthrough this afternoon and within a couple of days the details are all ironed out. I just can't give you a timeline. It's impossible to say time, place or circumstances."

Standing shoulder-to-shoulder with Birmingham, Finneran said deliberations were too important to rush. He said residents should take heart that "life in Massachusetts has never been better."

"When we reach an agreement, I think people will say, 'Hey, (that was) probably worth the wait because these are very serious issues, which have been ignored or neglected for many, many years,'" said Finneran. "We're trying our very, very best to put in place policies and programs and initiatives that will make a serious improvement to the quality of life."

But Cellucci, after participating with the pair at a press conference, laid the blame for the late budget squarely at the feet of the two Democrats.

"If we had the six members of the conference committee meeting and making real decisions, the budget would have been done a long time ago. But we have two men — the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate — who want to make all of the decisions, who want to have all of the control.

"That's why we have no budget," Cellucci said. "The process isn't working because the speaker and the president aren't allowing it to work."

On Friday, the Senate's chief conference committee negotiator said he, his House counterpart and the four other members of the conference committee could have completed work on the budget "within a few weeks," instead of now being two months late. Legislators have already passed three interim budgets to keep state government and now, local schools, operating.

Both Birmingham and Finneran are former Ways and Means Committee chairmen, and in that role are accustomed to handling negotiations over the state budget.

"The leaders of the House and Senate seem incapable of completing their jobs," Cellucci said. "This is the biggest failure of leadership in this state we've seen in quite some time."

Massachusetts and Wisconsin share the distinction of being the only states lacking an approved annual budget. In Wisconsin, Gov. Tommy Thompson's aides have reportedly tried to bring Assembly and Senate negotiators back to the bargaining table. Cellucci this week said he wouldn't take such an active role. He sai it's up to Finneran and Birming ham to reach agreement on thei own.

"The way our system works is I've made my priorities known. Now we have to know what the legislative priorities are," Cellucci said. "The House and the Senate have to agree before the Legislature has priorities. They seem incapable of doing that. I've offered suggestions. I've told them what my priorities are. This is their failure. It is a failure of the House and Senate leadership."

Earlier, the trio participated in a press conference with Boston Mayor Thomas Menino to mark a $15 million appropriation for the Boston Public Library. The state money, along with an anticipated $37 million in federal, city and private funds, will be used to renovate the Copley Place headquarters of the nation's oldest free municipal library.

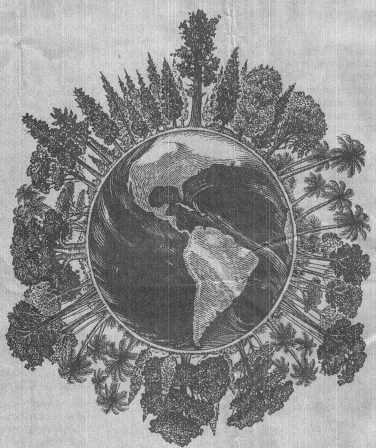

Cellucci vetoed the $15 million last year, but this week said he had only objected to the way the money would have been spent — cash instead of borrowing.

"We never said it was unworthy," Cellucci said. "I wanted a bond bill. The Legislature hasn't approved a bond bill. At the pace they're moving, we'd probably never get a bond bill. I'm not going to have the libraries suffer because the Legislature is unwilling to act."

Procedural Requirements

LEGAL NOTICE
NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT AND NOTICE OF INTENT TO REQUEST RELEASE OF FUNDS

September 2, 1999
City of Cambridge Community Development Department
Cambridge, MA 02139
617-349-4600

These Notices shall satisfy two separate but related procedural requirements for activities to be undertaken by the Cambridge Housing Authority.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

On or about September 17, 1999 the City of Cambridge will authorize the Cambridge Housing Authority to submit a request to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the release of HOPE VI funds under Section 24 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, as amended, to undertake a project known as the John F. Kennedy Apartments HOPE VI Revitalization Project for the purpose of rehabilitating an existing elderly housing development and creating a 19-unit assisted living facility on site. The eight story building will be completely revitalized, including building envelope restoration, upgrading of all building systems, and kitchen and bath modernization. The total number of units on site will be reduced from 88 to 69. The estimated cost of the project is $10,290,000.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

The City of Cambridge has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR) on file at the City's Community Development Department, 57 Inman Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts and the Cambridge Housing Authority, 675 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, Massachusetts and may be examined or copied weekdays 8:30 AM to 5:00 PM.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Any individual, group or agency disagreeing with this determination or wishing to comment on the project may submit written comments to the City's Community Development Department. All comments received by September 17, 1999 will be considered by the City prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds. Comments should specify which Notice they are addressing.

RELEASE OF FUNDS

The City of Cambridge certifies to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) that Robert W. Healy in his capacity as City Manager consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows the Cambridge Housing Authority to use Program funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will consider objections to its release of funds and the City of Cambridge's certification for a period of fifteen days following the anticipated submission date or its actual receipt of the request (whichever is later) only if they are on one of the following bases: a. the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer of the City of Cambridge; b. the City has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; c. the grant recipient has committed funds or incurred costs not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; or d. another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR Part 58) and shall be addressed to the Director, Office of Community Planning and Development, HUD at 10 Causeway Street, Boston, MA 02222-1092. Potential objectors should contact HUD to verify the actual last day of the objection period.

Teen forum on June 2

Community Newspaper Company, owner of the Cambridge Chronicle, has invited teenagers from across Eastern Massachusetts to attend a forum Wednesday, June 2, at the BankBoston Conference and Training Center in Waltham from 7 to 10 p.m.

"We want to fill a room with teenagers and give them the chance to talk about the issues and concerns that they have in school and in their lives in general," said Mary Jo Meisner, CNC vice chairwoman.

The forum is the most recent chapter in a year-long series of reports on the state of public education in the commonwealth by CNC, which publishes newspapers in more then 130 communities in Eastern Massachusetts and the Cape.

Schools, union mum on CRLS schedule

BY INDRANI SEN
Chronicle Staff

Administration officials have expressed a desire to switch from a seven-day schedule to a five-day schedule, so that students' Monday-to-Friday schedule would be the same every week, reducing confusion.

But since any such change must be approved by the teachers union, the fate of next year's schedule is tied up with the teacher contract negotiations currently in progress. A gag order signed by the negotiating parties at the start of the process has prevented information on the talks from reaching the public.

"I think it's too bad," said Mary Tittmann, the former co-chairwoman of Cambridge United for Education, a parents group. "I think for the kids, they'd like to know what's going to happen next year. But I guess for contract negotiations its par for the course."

One highly-placed official said a five-day schedule has been agreed upon.

But Cambridge Teachers Association President Roger O'Sullivan would not confirm that such an agreement has been reached.

"I can't comment because that would be breaking the gag rule," he said.

He did say, however, that June 7 is the annual meeting for elementary and secondary teachers, and they will be provided with an update on the contract talks then. He said the meeting won't be open to the public and he doesn't know when parents and students will be told about next year's schedule.

"It could be after that meeting," he said. "I don't know yet. It depends on where we are in negotiations."

High school's Emma Stickgold a 'natural leader'

At 16 years old, CRLS junior garners political power

BY INDRANI SEN
Chronicle Staff

At a recent School Committee meeting, a man introduced himself as "the father of the infamous Emma Stickgold," raising a giggle from the board and the audience.

Though infamous may be too strong a word, Emma Stickgold certainly has made a name for herself in the Cambridge school community. The 16-year-old Cambridge Rindge and Latin junior has become a fixture at public meetings, championing the causes of teacher accountability, student involvement, the governance of schools, and, most recently, violence prevention measures.

So, when she announced her candidacy for the chairmanship of the State Student Advisory Council at last week's School Committee meeting, it came as no shock. The post would make her a voting member of the state Board of Education, the appointed board that overseas education in Massachusetts.

"Cambridge has a unique personality, and I think that's reflected in me," she said. "I think the state needs that perspective."

The political bug bit Stickgold at an early age. She's been involved in student activism since she was elected editor of her class newspaper in the fifth grade at the Graham and Parks School, but entered the wider political arena last summer, working fulltime for Jarrett Barrios' successful campaign for state representative.

Along the way, she has picked up a slew of high-powered supporters, who now gush about her abilities and bright future.

"She's such a sweetpea," said Rep. Barrios, who has pledged his endorsement of her in the SSAC race. "It was an easy decision to make. She cares so much about education and seeing public schools serve all the children of Massachusetts."

Rep. Alice Wolf, who is working with Stickgold on an SSAC bill to include student input in teacher evaluations, also expressed support.

"I think it's terrific that she's running," she said. "She'd be an enlightened member of the Board of Education."

Stickgold says her main issues will be the state-mandated MCAS tests, teacher assessment, student involvement in education decisions, and student violence. On the latter issue, she said she hopes the SSAC can begin to lobby for gun control measures.

Politically, she describes herself as liberal but, she said, "if someone presents a viable argument, I would consider their opinion just as valid as mine."

The election, to be held on June 3, promises to be unpredictable.

> "I think that she's a very talented and gifted leader."
> Supt. Bobbie D'Alessandro

The winner will have to get a majority vote from the 44 members of the SSAC, representing the 11 regional councils in the state. Voting is taken in stages, eliminating candidates after each round until one person gets more than 50 percent of the vote.

"In previous years, we've had to go to four or five or even six votes before the person gets more than 50 percent of the votes," said CRLS student Nick Kantor, a two-year SSAC representative.

Kantor predicts there will be five or six candidates for the chairmanship, with at least two returning members of the SSAC throwing their hats in the ring.

Emma, who was elected to the state council only this spring for next year, will be facing tough competition from the returning members, who already have established some support, he said.

"There's several candidates that already have votes in place and I'd be surprised if one of them didn't win," he said. As for Stickgold's chances, he went on, "it's feasible, but it's not likely. She definitely has an uphill battle."

Kantor himself is supporting another candidate.

"Honestly, I think she works well with adults, but I think in order for her to be an effective leader, she'd have to work equally well with other students," he said. "I think that's an area that she's going to have to work on."

He also pointed out that this will be Stickgold's first year on the state council, though she has spent a year on the Greater Boston regional council.

"If you haven't been on state the previous year, it's really hard to be effective," Kantor said.

But Stickgold argues that her lack of experience at the state level is made up for with the work she has done in the Legislature, helping draft and fight for SSAC bills.

"I've dealt with probably more political issues than any other candidate," she said. "I've been working on the issues all along... When they wanted legislation, I was the one who sat down with Alice Wolf, along with Nick Kantor."

She says she has other qualities that make her well-suited to the job, including her commitment, her willingness to compromise, and her realistic attitude.

Emma Stickgold discusses her campaign strategy.

Schools spokeswoman Lois Sullivan suggested yet another quality.

"I like her passion," she said. "I think she has great passion."

Superintendent Bobbie D'Alessandro agreed.

"I'm very proud of Emma," she said. "I think that she's a very talented and gifted leader. She seems to be a very natural leader."

Stickgold says she's not pinning all her hopes on winning the election, however.

"If I don't get it, I'll be fine," she said. "My first reaction will be to run for vice chair. Even if I don't get vice chair, there's plenty of opportunities to play a big role in what we do."

CRLS paper wins top prize

It's generally thought that "there's always room for improvement." But, according to the American Scholastic Press Association, that's not true of the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School newspaper.

The CRLS paper, the Register Forum, recently was named the Best Overall Newspaper as well as the Most Outstanding High School Newspaper for 1999 by the ASPA.

"This is by far the most outstanding high school newspaper to be seen this year," wrote the ASPA judge in awarding the Register Forum the organization's top prize. "Having read the issues from cover to cover, there were no specific items that needed any constructive criticism."

Co-Editor Leah Beeferman said getting no constructive criticism was OK with her.

"I guess it could have been helpful, but it was nice to know that there was really nothing we [illegible] with it," she said.

Acting Co-Principal Bill Mangan was not surprised to see the paper praised in such high terms.

"The sophistication and the scholasticism that's behind it is more than you'd expect to see in a high school newspaper," he said. "I think it's because it's not just kind of a superficial kind of fluffy type of thing. I think it gets to the real issues and presents them in a very insightful way. It speaks about global issues, the type of thing you'd see in Time or Newsweek."

The paper will lose its faculty advisor of 22 years, Stephen Surette, at the end of this school year. House A English teacher Paul Burke will take over.

Next year, Beeferman said, "we will continue to try to make it as good as it is and try to make it better."

Beeferman said everyone deserves credit for the award.

"I think the combination of everything together is why it's as good as it is," she said.

More MCAS defections

Department of Education spokeswoman Jan O'Keefe said although the state is leaving it up to the individual districts to deal with refuseniks, violations of the mandate that all fourth-, eighth-, and 10th-graders take the tests should not be tolerated.

"Commissioner [David] Driscoll believes that students should be in school taking the MCAS tests," she said. "It's their responsibility. It's the rules.

"People who are breaking the rules ought to have action taken against them," she added. "Local school officials ought to take appropriate action if these students break the rules."

Cambridge Schools spokeswoman Lois Sullivan said the district will not be taking any action against the MCAS protesters. She and other school officials, including a School Committee member, were present at a press conference called by the 10th-grade refuseniks last week.

"I'm here in a very neutral capacity," she said at the gathering.

Though the fourth-graders are also becoming experts at talking to the press, their parents are trying to keep things as normal as possible for the two weeks of testing.

"We mainly tried to just make it kind of a rich educational experience," Wise said. "We were fairly conscious about not wanting to cover important things that the other kids weren't getting because they're busy wasting their time taking the MCAS. The point wasn't to get ahead of the other kids."

> "Local school officials ought to take appropriate action if these students break the rules."
> Jan O'Keefe, DOE spokeswoman

Cohen admitted to feeling a little nervous about being one of the few students not taking the tests at first, but he now feels good about his parents' decision, he said. Even hearing that his classmates are being given candy to help them through the two-hour test sessions wasn't enough to sway him from his conviction.

"Even though I have a really big sweet tooth, I would rather be learning things here than be eating candy at school and filling in the bubbles," he said.

Aging Council seeks applicants

Somerville-Cambridge Elder Services is accepting applications from residents of Cambridge or Somerville who are at least 60 years of age and want to serve as members of the Area Agency on Aging Advisory Council.

Founded in 1972 to help residents of the two cities maintain their dignity and independence as they grow older, SCES is a non-profit organization, a state-designated Aging Services Access Point, and a federally-designated Area Agency on Aging.

In its role as an Area Agency on Aging, SCES distributes federal funds to community agencies that provide supportive services to older adults. Advisory council members are closely involved in making recommendations for how such funds are allocated. In addition, advisory council members serve as liaisons between SCES and the community in an effort to inform the agency about the needs of elders.

"We are looking for new advisory council members who have the time and interest to devote to volunteering for this important work," said Amanda Sawires, who coordinates the work of the advisory council for SCES. "Each member serves a two-year term and we meet monthly."

For more information about serving on the advisory council, call Sawires at 628-2601, ext. 3119.

Taking a walk on the path to good health

BY RICHARD GRIFFIN

Health advisors are unanimous: For the benefit of our physical selves, we elders ought to exercise more than we do.

One author, Douglas Powell, is so convinced of its value that he risks telling the younger members of his extended family what to do. "If I could make only one suggestion to my children and grandchildren about optimal aging," he writes, "it would be this: Get regular exercise."

Among the forms of exercise open to most of us, surely the easiest and one of the best is walking. It's an activity in which I engage every day myself, starting with an early morning jaunt to the corner store to buy the newspaper and continuing later with another excursion of a mile, back and forth from Harvard Square.

But, addicted as I am to this rewarding activity, I must confess to finding it sometimes boring. Not seldom I experience an impatience to have the walk over, to be back home again at work in my office. Even in the stimulating urban village where I live, walking sometimes palls on me.

For this drop in interest, journalist and money guru Mary Frakes has the perfect remedy. In her new book, "MindWalks," she displays a dazzling variety of approaches to walking. About her inventions, she says: "I discovered that the benefits of walking were even greater from the neck up than they were from the neck down."

Frakes' discovery came during a time of stress in her own life. "I developed the concept of MindWalks," she writes, "at a time when I felt as though the world had chewed me up and spit me out." Burdened by stress and bewildered at the downturns in her life, she took to walking, something that "gave my mind the time and space needed to work out problems and come to terms with whatever was disturbing my soul."

Gradually, Frakes started to notice externally things she had never seen before. And deep within, she began to experience the growth of a new self. She has shared her experiences with readers in order to help them find nourishment for their own bodies and souls.

During weeks of carrying the book with me while walking, I have found that nourishment. It's full of surprising insights that will change the way you both think and feel. Frakes' writing style is fresh and lively, free of deadening cliches. I even like the size: small, ready to fit into a side pocket, reminiscent of the "big/little" books of my boyhood.

A possible problem for elders who read the book while walking is the danger of getting so absorbed as to trip over a curb or other obstacle. I posed this question to Mary Frakes herself.

The author responded: "I suggest people scan the road ahead of them periodically so that they can see the obstacles." Besides, she adds, "a MindWalk is, in large part, being attuned to your surroundings and being aware of the world around you."

About this fine book, I have only one quibble. In a chapter on walking in the country, Frakes writes: "A MindWalk down a country road puts us back in touch with an environment that is real rather than designed by man." As a committed urban inhabitant, I reject the idea of reality being limited to natural growth rather than what human beings have built.

A few excerpts from Frakes' hundred brief essays may suggest their richness:

"As you walk today, free your subconscious to give you a mental slap on the forehead."

"Deliberately slowing your pace encourages contemplation of both inner and outer environments."

"Walking allows you to be a scavenger of things that are too small to be noticed in the everyday rush but that have a beauty all the more special for being easily overlooked."

"If you're feeling blue, take a route you walked at a time you overcame an obstacle."

"Mall walking doesn't have to be boring. It's all a question of where your mind is."

"Think of the physical trade-off between left and right as an outward manifestation of spiritual balance of the interplay of opposing forces."

MindWalks will be available in book stores in middle or late June. It can be ordered before that by a toll-free telephone call to (877) MINDWALK or (617) 576-3234.

If you are interested in starting a group to do MindWalks, Mary Frakes will send you a small booklet with instructions.

On another subject, let me alert readers to a television program scheduled for Channel 2 showing on the evening of Wednesday, June 2. Called "Stealing Time: The New Science of Aging," the production is sponsored in part by the American Association of Retired Persons.

On the basis of the videotape promo sent me by AARP, I already feel mixed about its main message — "We are close to turning back the clock on aging." But I think readers will find it stimulating.

Teen forum on June 2

Community Newspaper Company, owner of the Cambridge Chronicle, has invited teenagers from across Eastern Massachusetts to attend a forum Wednesday, June 2, at the BankBoston Conference and Training Center in Waltham from 7 to 10 p.m.

"We want to fill a room with teenagers and give them the chance to talk about the issues and concerns that they have in school and in their lives in general," said Mary Jo Meisner, CNC vice chairwoman.

The forum is the most recent chapter in a year-long series of reports on the state of public education in the commonwealth by CNC, which publishes newspapers in more then 130 communities in Eastern Massachusetts and the Cape.

The session for teenagers has been organized by CNC in partnership with Fox 25 TV and radio station Jam'n 94.5 FM. Also taking part in the planning of the event are the state's Executive Office of Health and Human

Schools, union mum on CRLS schedule

BY INDRANI SEN
Chronicle Staff

Administration officials have expressed a desire to switch from a seven-day schedule to a five-day schedule, so that students' Monday-to-Friday schedule would be the same every week, reducing confusion.

But since any such change must be approved by the teachers union, the fate of next year's schedule is tied up with the teacher contract negotiations currently in progress. A gag order signed by the negotiating parties at the start of the process has prevented information on the talks from reaching the public.

"I think it's too bad," said Mary Tittmann, the former co-chairwoman of Cambridge United for Education, a parents group. "I think for the kids, they'd like to know what's going to happen next year. But I guess for contract negotiations its par for the course."

One highly-placed official said a five-day schedule has been agreed upon.

But Cambridge Teachers Association President Roger O'Sullivan would not confirm that such an agreement has been reached.

"I can't comment because that would be breaking the gag rule," he said.

He did say, however, that June 7 is the annual meeting for elementary and secondary teachers, and they will be provided with an update on the contract talks then. He said the meeting won't be open to the public and he doesn't know when parents and students will be told about next year's schedule.

"It could be after that meeting," he said. "I don't know yet. It depends on where we are in negotiations."

High school's Emma Stickgold a 'natural leader'

At 16 years old, CRLS junior garners political power

BY INDRANI SEN
Chronicle Staff

At a recent School Committee meeting, a man introduced himself as "the father of the infamous Emma Stickgold," raising a giggle from the board and the audience.

Though infamous may be too strong a word, Emma Stickgold certainly has made a name for herself in the Cambridge school community. The 16-year-old Cambridge Rindge and Latin junior has become a fixture at public meetings, championing the causes of teacher accountability, student involvement, the governance of schools, and, most recently, violence prevention measures.

So, when she announced her candidacy for the chairmanship of the State Student Advisory Council at last week's School Committee meeting, it came as no shock. The post would make her a voting member of the state Board of Education, the appointed board that overseas education in Massachusetts.

"Cambridge has a unique personality, and I think that's reflected in me," she said. "I think the state needs that perspective."

The political bug bit Stickgold at an early age. She's been involved in student activism since she was elected editor of her class newspaper in the fifth grade at the Graham and Parks School, but entered the wider political arena last summer, working fulltime for Jarrett Barrios' successful campaign for state representative.

Along the way, she has picked up a slew of high-powered supporters, who now gush about her abilities and bright future.

"She's such a sweetpea," said Rep. Barrios, who has pledged his endorsement of her in the SSAC race. "It was an easy decision to make. She cares so much about education and seeing public schools serve all the children of Massachusetts."

Rep. Alice Wolf, who is working with Stickgold on an SSAC bill to include student input in teacher evaluations, also expressed support.

"I think it's terrific that she's running," she said. "She'd be an enlightened member of the Board of Education."

Stickgold says her main issues will be the state-mandated MCAS tests, teacher assessment, student involvement in education decisions, and student violence. On the latter issue, she said she hopes the SSAC can begin to lobby for gun control measures.

Politically, she describes herself as liberal but, she said, "if someone presents a viable argument, I would consider their opinion just as valid as mine."

The election, to be held on June 3, promises to be unpredictable.

> "I think that she's a very talented and gifted leader."
> Supt. Bobbie D'Alessandro

The winner will have to get a majority vote from the 44 members of the SSAC, representing the 11 regional councils in the state. Voting is taken in stages, eliminating candidates after each round until one person gets more than 50 percent of the vote.

"In previous years, we've had to go to four or five or even six votes before the person gets more than 50 percent of the votes," said CRLS student Nick Kantor, a two-year SSAC representative.

Kantor predicts there will be five or six candidates for the chairmanship, with at least two returning members of the SSAC throwing their hats in the ring.

Emma, who was elected to the state council only this spring for next year, will be facing tough competition from the returning members, who already have established some support, he said.

"There's several candidates that already have votes in place and I'd be surprised if one of them didn't win," he said. As for Stickgold's chances, he went on, "it's feasible, but it's not likely. She definitely has an uphill battle."

Kantor himself is supporting another candidate.

"Honestly, I think she works well with adults, but I think in order for her to be an effective leader, she'd have to work equally well with other students," he said. "I think that's an area that she's going to have to work on."

He also pointed out that this will be Stickgold's first year on the state council, though she has spent a year on the Greater Boston regional council.

"If you haven't been on state the previous year, it's really hard to be effective," Kantor said.

But Stickgold argues that her lack of experience at the state level is made up for with the work she has done in the Legislature, helping draft and fight for SSAC bills.

"I've dealt with probably more political issues than any other candidate," she said. "I've been working on the issues all along... When they wanted legislation, I was the one who sat down with Alice Wolf, along with Nick Kantor."

She says she has other qualities that make her well-suited to the job, including her commitment, her willingness to compromise, and her realistic attitude.

Emma Stickgold discusses her campaign strategy.

Schools spokeswoman Lois Sullivan suggested yet another quality.

"I like her passion," she said. "I think she has great passion."

Superintendent Bobbie D'Alessandro agreed.

"I'm very proud of Emma," she said. "I think that she's a very talented and gifted leader. She seems to be a very natural leader."

Stickgold says she's not pinning all her hopes on winning the election, however.

"If I don't get it, I'll be fine," she said. "My first reaction will be to run for vice chair. Even if I don't get vice chair, there's plenty of opportunities to play a big role in what we do."

CRLS paper wins top prize

It's generally thought that "there's always room for improvement." But, according to the American Scholastic Press Association, that's not true of the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School newspaper.

The CRLS paper, the Register Forum, recently was named the Best Overall Newspaper as well as the Most Outstanding High School Newspaper for 1999 by the ASPA.

"This is by far the most outstanding high school newspaper to be seen this year," wrote the ASPA judge in awarding the Register Forum the organization's top prize. "Having read the issues from cover to cover, there were no specific items that needed any constructive criticism."

Co-Editor Leah Beeferman said getting no constructive criticism was OK with her.

"I guess it could have been helpful, but it was nice to know that there was really nothing wrong with it," she said.

Acting Co-Principal Bill Mangan was not surprised to see the paper praised in such high terms.

"The sophistication and the scholasticism that's behind it is more than you'd expect to see in a high school newspaper," he said. "I think it's because it's not just kind of a superficial kind of fluffy type of thing. I think it gets to the real issues and presents them in a very insightful way. It speaks about global issues, the type of thing you'd see in Time or Newsweek."

The paper will lose its faculty advisor of 22 years, Stephen Surette, at the end of this school year. House A English teacher Paul Burke will take over.

Next year, Beeferman said, "we will continue to try to make it as good as it is and try to make it better."

Beeferman said everyone deserves credit for the award.

"I think the combination of everything together is why it's as good as it is," she said.

Department of Education spokeswoman Jan O'Keefe said although the state is leaving it up to the individual districts to deal with refuseniks, violations of the mandate that all fourth-, eighth-, and 10th-graders take the tests should not be tolerated.

"Commissioner [David] Driscoll believes that students should be in school taking the MCAS tests," she said. "It's their responsibility. It's the rules.

"People who are breaking the rules ought to have action taken against them," she added. "Local school officials ought to take appropriate action if these students break the rules."

Cambridge Schools spokeswoman Lois Sullivan said the district will not be taking any action against the MCAS protesters. She and other school officials, including a School Committee member, were present at a press conference called by the 10th-grade refuseniks last week.

"I'm here in a very neutral capacity," she said at the gathering.

Though the fourth-graders are also becoming experts at talking to the press, their parents are trying to keep things as normal as possible for the two weeks of testing.

"We mainly tried to just make it kind of a rich educational experience," Wise said. "We were fairly conscious about not wanting to cover important things that the other kids weren't getting because they're busy wasting their time taking the MCAS. The point wasn't to get ahead of the other kids."

> "Local school officials ought to take appropriate action if these students break the rules."
> Jan O'Keefe, DOE spokeswoman

Cohen admitted to feeling a little nervous about being one of the few students not taking the tests at first, but he now feels good about his parents' decision, he said. Even hearing that his classmates are being given candy to help them through the two-hour test sessions wasn't enough to sway him from his conviction.

"Even though I have a really big sweet tooth, I would rather be learning things here than be eating candy at school and filling in the bubbles," he said.

Sponsored by Mayor Francis Duehay, the city's Women's Commission, School Department and Human Services, the day was designed to inspire the girls to begin a lifelong interest in physical activity.

"This is a great day for all of us. Thank you to Paul Parravano of MIT President Vest's office, Mayor Duehay, and everyone else who made this day a reality," said Nancy Ryan, director of the Women's Commission, as she presented Olympic-style medals and ribbons to all participants.

Aging Council seeks applicants

Somerville-Cambridge Elder Services is accepting applications from residents of Cambridge or Somerville who are at least 60 years of age and want to serve as members of the Area Agency on Aging Advisory Council.

Founded in 1972 to help residents of the two cities maintain their dignity and independence as they grow older, SCES is a non-profit organization, a state-designated Aging Services Access Point, and a federally-designated Area Agency on Aging.

In its role as an Area Agency on Aging, SCES distributes federal funds to community agencies that provide supportive services to older adults. Advisory council members are closely involved in making recommendations for how such funds are allocated. In addition, advisory council members serve as liaisons between SCES and the community in an effort to inform the agency about the needs of elders.

"We are looking for new advisory council members who have the time and interest to devote to volunteering for this important work," said Amanda Sawires, who coordinates the work of the advisory council for SCES. "Each member serves a two-year term and we meet monthly."

For more information about serving on the advisory council, call Sawires at 628-2601, ext. 3119.

Taking a walk on the path to good health

BY RICHARD GRIFFIN

Health advisors are unanimous: For the benefit of our physical selves, we elders ought to exercise more than we do.

One author, Douglas Powell, is so convinced of its value that he risks telling the younger members of his extended family what to do. "If I could make only one suggestion to my children and grandchildren about optimal aging," he writes, "it would be this: Get regular exercise."

Among the forms of exercise open to most of us, surely the easiest and one of the best is walking. It's an activity in which I engage every day myself, starting with an early morning jaunt to the corner store to buy the newspaper and continuing later with another excursion of a mile, back and forth from Harvard Square.

But, addicted as I am to this rewarding activity, I must confess to finding it sometimes boring. Not seldom I experience an impatience to have the walk over, to be back home again at work in my office. Even in the stimulating urban village where I live, walking sometimes palls on me.

For this drop in interest, journalist and money guru Mary Frakes has the perfect remedy. In her new book, "MindWalks," she displays a dazzling variety of approaches to walking. About her inventions, she says: "I discovered that the benefits of walking were even greater from the neck up than they were from the neck down."

Frakes' discovery came during a time of stress in her own life. "I developed the concept of MindWalks," she writes, "at a time when I felt as though the world had chewed me up and spit me out." Burdened by stress and bewildered at the downturns in her life, she took to walking, something that "gave my mind the time and space needed to work out problems and come to terms with whatever was disturbing my soul."

Gradually, Frakes started to notice externally things she had never seen before. And deep within, she began to experience the growth of a new self. She has shared her experiences with readers in order to help them find nourishment for their own bodies and souls.

During weeks of carrying the book with me while walking, I have found that nourishment. It's full of surprising insights that will change the way you both think and feel. Frakes' writing style is fresh and lively, free of deadening cliches. I even like the size: small, ready to fit into a side pocket, reminiscent of the "big/little" books of my boyhood.

A possible problem for elders who read the book while walking is the danger of getting so absorbed as to trip over a curb or other obstacle. I posed this question to Mary Frakes herself.

The author responded: "I suggest people scan the road ahead of them periodically so that they can see the obstacles." Besides, she adds, "a MindWalk is, in large part, being attuned to your surroundings and being aware of the world around you."

About this fine book, I have only one quibble. In a chapter on walking in the country, Frakes writes: "A MindWalk down a country road puts us back in touch with an environment that is real rather than designed by man." As a committed urban inhabitant, I reject the idea of reality being limited to natural growth rather than what human beings have built.

A few excerpts from Frakes' hundred brief essays may suggest their richness:

"As you walk today, free your subconscious to give you a mental slap on the forehead."

"Deliberately slowing your pace encourages contemplation of both inner and outer environments."

"Walking allows you to be a scavenger of things that are too small to be noticed in the everyday rush but that have a beauty all the more special for being easily overlooked."

"If you're feeling blue, take a route you walked at a time you overcame an obstacle."

"Mall walking doesn't have to be boring. It's all a question of where your mind is."

"Think of the physical trade-off between left and right as an outward manifestation of spiritual balance of the interplay of opposing forces."

MindWalks will be available in book stores in middle or late June. It can be ordered before that by a toll-free telephone call to (877) MINDWALK or (617) 576-3234.

If you are interested in starting a group to do MindWalks, Mary Frakes will send you a small booklet with instructions.

On another subject, let me alert readers to a television program scheduled for Channel 2 showing on the evening of Wednesday, June 2. Called "Stealing Time: The New Science of Aging," the production is sponsored in part by the American Association of Retired Persons.

On the basis of the videotape promo sent me by AARP, I already feel mixed about its main message — "We are close to turning back the clock on aging." But I think readers will find it stimulating.

Badger, Bay State budget impasses share similar themes

BY TREVOR HUGHES
State House News Service

Could it be the cranberries?

Massachusetts and Wisconsin share the distinction of being the nation's leading producers of the tart little red berries. The two states now share another, more dubious distinction: the only states limping along without an approved budget for the current fiscal year.

But the distinctions don't end there. As in the Bay State, Wisconsin lawmakers are wrangling over tax cuts, education funding and spending their share of the multi-state tobacco settlement.

In Massachusetts, House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) and Senate President Thomas Birmingham (D-Chelsea) are trying to decide whether to cut the income tax rate from its 5.95 percent rate. Finneran wants to go to 5.75, limit state spending and reform the MBTA, while Birmingham prefers to provide property tax relief for elders, offer tax breaks to low-income families, and vastly increase prescription drug and health insurance coverage.

It's much the same situation in Wisconsin.

The Republican-controlled Assembly wants to cut the state's income tax rate, set at 6.77 percent for most people. The Democrat-controlled Senate wants to pour money from the state's lottery and approximately $600 million budget surplus into property tax relief, education and recycling.

But unlike Massachusetts, where Finneran and Birmingham met this week on Birmingham's balcony, the two sides in Wisconsin haven't sat down together since July 15. A similar situation occurred there in 1997, when the budget was signed in October. Last year's Massachusetts state budget was signed on July 30.

According to Wisconsin Senate Majority Leader Chuck Chvala, differences over the Badger State's approximately $30 billion two-year budget could be settled in a few days if the four-member Assembly conference committee returns to the table.

"The Republicans are almost single-mindedly focused on tax cuts. We think residents want a more balanced approach," said Chvala, who is the Democratic leader of the 33-member Senate. "Right now, it's kind of just a stare-down. I expect things will improve."

"(The Republicans) said we're not going to negotiate until you give us a number on the tax cuts. Then they walked away from the table, took their ball and went home," Chvala added. "In order to negotiate, you have to be at the table. We could finish the negotiation in two days. It's the kind of thing you could do if there was a commitment to get it done quickly."

Like his Massachusetts counterparts, Chvala said state residents aren't being hurt by the impasse. He added that by law, the government continues to spend at the previous year's levels until a budget is passed. Massachusetts legislators have already passed three interim budgets to keep state government and now, local schools, operating.

"People go on with their lives," Chvala said. "In the Legislature we tend to think everything revolves around us, when in fact in most people's lives it's much more important how their kids are doing in school and getting them to the soccer game. You've heard the saying: if you like sausage or law, you should watch it be made. When it's all said and done, the people will be happy with the result."

But state Administration Secretary Mark Bugher said he's concerned legislators aren't taking their work seriously enough. Because Wisconsin's government will keep running absent a budget, the pressure, unfortunately, is off, Bugher said.

"The problem is in Wisconsin we have no penalties for failure to pass the budget. The Legislature is simply not motivated by the press," Bugher said. "We have a full-time Legislature. We have 132 members and I think the public deserves to have the work of the public done. If (members of the public) are made to feel the pain, I think that would in some ways move people back to the table and instill such motivation."

As he did in 1995, Bugher said he and GOP Gov. Tommy Thompson have been trying to broker a deal between Assembly Republicans and Senate Democrats. Bugher urged his counterpart in Massachusetts, Administration and Finance Secretary Andrew Natisos, to do the same.

"Our view is that the governor has the ultimate responsibility for operations of the state government. People hold the governor personally responsible," Bugher said. "In some ways, the Legislature is insulated from political or popular criticism. In some cases you have to assume responsibility for a leadership role."

"The governor has no authority to order people back to the table but he does have the bully pulpit and he can try to cut though the ideological differences and arrive at something that will ... receive the most votes in both branches," Bugher added.

Chvala agreed that help from Bugher and Thompson is vital, especially because the split Legislature has never overridden any one of Thompson's approximately 1,600 vetoes. In Massachusetts, legislative Democrats can override almost any Cellucci veto they choose.

"I think the governor's involvement out here is critical," Chvala said. "We would have a hard time here coming to agreement if the Assembly and the Senate reached an agreement and then the governor vetoed all of the items the Democrats wanted. It would not make sense for us."

Cellucci blasts leaders for assuming too much budget control

BY TREVOR HUGHES
State House News Service

BOSTON — Gov. Paul Cellucci earlier this week lashed out at House and Senate leaders for personally handling negotiations for the 60-day-late state budget, arguing their desire to "have all the control" has stalled deliberations and subverted the legislative process.

In response, House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) and Senate President Thomas Birmingham (D-Chelsea) pleaded for understanding. Finneran argued residents should be patient since "life has never been better in Massachusetts." Both said they understand that the Legislature looks bad due to their inability to get the budget passed.

Speaking to reporters before attending a press conference at the Boston Public Library, Birmingham said he and Finneran met over the weekend and will meet again. The president said a breakthrough on the nearly $21 billion budget could be forthcoming, but noted differences remain over tax cuts, education and health care funding and MBTA reform.

"You know the saying: 90 percent of success is showing up. That applies with special force to negotiations. I'm happy that we're grinding it out and I continue to look for the breakthrough," said Birmingham. "We're making progress. Look, nobody's more frustrated than I am."

"We've got a job to do. We've got a job that's overdue," Birmingham added. "It could well be that we have a breakthrough this afternoon and within a couple of days the details are all ironed out. I just can't give you a timeline. It's impossible to say time, place or circumstances."

Standing shoulder-to-shoulder with Birmingham, Finneran said deliberations were too important to rush. He said residents should take heart that "life in Massachusetts has never been better."

"When we reach an agreement, I think people will say, 'Hey, (that was) probably worth the wait because these are very serious issues, which have been ignored or neglected for many, many years,'" said Finneran. "We're trying our very, very best to put in place policies and programs and initiatives that will make a serious improvement to the quality of life."

But Cellucci, after participating with the pair at a press conference, laid the blame for the late budget squarely at the feet of the two Democrats.

"If we had the six members of the conference committee meeting and making real decisions, the budget would have been done a long time ago. But we have two men — the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate — who want to make all of the decisions, who want to have all of the control.

"That's why we have no budget," Cellucci said. "The process isn't working because the speaker and the president aren't allowing it to work."

On Friday, the Senate's chief conference committee negotiator said he, his House counterpart and the four other members of the conference committee could have completed work on the budget "within a few weeks," instead of now being two months late. Legislators have already passed three interim budgets to keep state government and now, local schools, operating.

Both Birmingham and Finneran are former Ways and Means Committee chairmen, and in that role are accustomed to handling negotiations over the state budget.

"The leaders of the House and Senate seem incapable of completing their jobs," Cellucci said. "This is the biggest failure of leadership in this state we've seen in quite some time."

Massachusetts and Wisconsin share the distinction of being the only states lacking an approved annual budget. In Wisconsin, Gov. Tommy Thompson's aides have reportedly tried to bring Assembly and Senate negotiators back to the bargaining table. Cellucci this week said he wouldn't take such an active role. He said it's up to Finneran and Birmingham to reach agreement on their own.

"The way our system works is I've made my priorities known. Now we have to know what the legislative priorities are," Cellucci said. "The House and the Senate have to agree before the Legislature has priorities. They seem incapable of doing that. I've offered suggestions. I've told them what my priorities are. This is their failure. It is a failure of the House and Senate leadership."

Earlier, the trio participated in a press conference with Boston Mayor Thomas Menino to mark $15 million appropriation for the Boston Public Library. The state money, along with an anticipated $37 million in federal, city and private funds, will be used to renovate the Copley Place headquarters of the nation's oldest free municipal library.

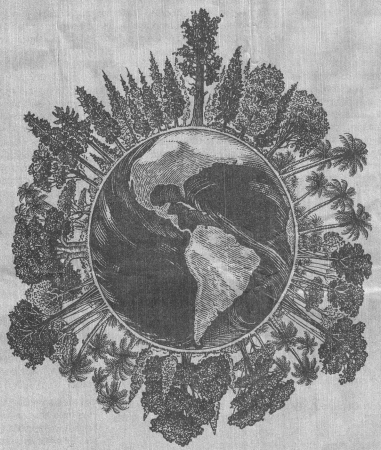

Cellucci vetoed the $15 million last year, but this week said he had only objected to the way the money would have been spent — cash instead of borrowing.

"We never said it was unworthy," Cellucci said. "I wanted a bond bill. The Legislature hasn't approved a bond bill. At the pace they're moving, we'd probably never get a bond bill. I'm not going to have the libraries suffer because the Legislature is unwilling to act."

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

On or about September 17, 1999 the City of Cambridge will authorize the Cambridge Housing Authority to submit a request to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the release of HOPE VI funds under Section 24 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, as amended, to undertake a project known as the John F. Kennedy Apartments HOPE VI Revitalization Project for the purpose of rehabilitating an existing elderly housing development and creating a 9-unit assisted living facility on site. The eight story building will be completely revitalized, including building envelope restoration, upgrading of all building system, and kitchen and bath modernization. The total number of units on site will be reduced from 88 to 69. The estimated cost of the project is $10,290,000.

Healy in his capacity as City Manager consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUDs approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows the Cambridge Housing Authority to use Program funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

CRLS science team reflects on Olympiad victory

BY JESSICA LEIGHT
Student Correspondent

When the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School science team took first place at the state Science Olympiad competition recently, the 20 team members present shouted, cried, jumped, and even sang.

After the weeks of intense study and preparation, of graham crackers, microwave popcorn and crises in a classroom at the high school for hours after school, the tension was finally broken — and in the best possible manner.

March 20, the day of the competition, had not been easy. No one was certain that Cambridge would win, even after the medals for individual events had been announced. And so, when the trophy came, it was that much sweeter.

In the last two weeks before the Olympiad competition, the entire team spent five hours a day after school preparing under the supervision of coaches Tad Sudnick and Kris Newton, a commitment which is intense, draining, and undoubtedly a "bonding" experience.

"I've never worked so hard for something in my entire life, and I've never been in a situation where everyone was so focused on something," said senior Bushra Makiya. "Everyone worked so hard and there was not a single person who didn't contribute, which was awesome."

At the same time, the last few days were not easy.

"The week leading up to the competition had been really hard on some of us," said sophomore Ben Somberg. "The night before ... was especially tough for me when our Mission Possible [Rube Goldberg] device just wasn't working, and we knew we were going to have to come in the next day with something we weren't exactly proud of."

On the day of the competition, the pressure built, until the entire team was sitting together in the auditorium, waiting for the final results to be read.

KIDS ON THE BEAT

"It was incredibly tense until we heard that Wayland High School came in second, and we knew we must be in first place," said junior Walter Drisdell.

To senior captain Rabi Whitaker, the moment when Cambridge's name was read and the room exploded with cheers and whistles seemed almost too good to be true.

"Every year before the Olympiad, I think about our chances of winning, and how much time we've spent preparing," Whitaker said. "Every year, I think we have just as good a shot at the championship as any other team. But this year, when we actually won, I was in a state of complete shock. I never imagined just how thrilling it would be to get up on stage as the first place team."

To some extent, the triumphant atmosphere of those moments on the stage endured the next week. Currently on a break before resuming preparation for the national competition, held in Chicago in May, science teamers nonetheless find themselves drawn to the room where so many hours were spent studying. On the days when meetings were held, most students did not leave but lingered, joking and chatting with the people who they have spent so many hours with. Leaving any time before 4 p.m. was just too weird.

"I enjoy leaving school at 2:30, but at the same time it feels strange," said senior captain Noaman Vaidya. "This is the first time I've seen sunlight in two months. Everyone's been congratulating us all week. What a thrill it is to win!"

Especially for seniors, who saw the team come in fourth three years ago, then third, then second, and then first, this year's win and the upcoming trip to Chicago are the culmination of years of work. But for everyone on the team or connected with it, it is a hard-won victory, and one to be savored.

"This victory signifies the true strength of CRLS, and specifically of the science department," said junior Emma Stickgold. "We are so lucky to have so many great teachers who are willing to dedicate countless hours to help students in their events. The captains are to be commended for their excellent work in bringing the team together and making things work."

Things worked this year for the CRLS science team, and that's what they have been celebrating all week.

Trip to Russia marks 10th anniversary

Ten years ago this April, the CRLS Russian program hosted its first group of students and teachers from Russia.

The guests were here two weeks, then the CRLS Russian students, accompanied by Russian teacher Lucinda Leveille and science teacher Tad Sudnick, made the trek to Jaroslavl, Russia; thereby completing the first high school Russian exchange in Cambridge history.

Since 1990, the CRLS Russian Exchange has been paired with School #238 in St. Petersburg. The fifth round of exchange with this school will be completed with Leveille and five brave CRLS Russian students heading off April 10 for a 20-day expedition to St. Petersburg.

Stephen Huenneke, Ilya Luvish, Case Randall, Christina Roth, and Ronald Stewart will join the ranks of the 52 CRLS students who have traveled to Russia over the years.

Plans for St. Petersburg include sightseeing, helping out in English language classes at School #238, historic walks around the city, museum visits, cultural events like ballet, music performances and opera, outdoor picnics, and time at home with hosts.

CRLS homework is done on a daily basis so that students will not fall behind in their studies, and they keep a daily journal to remember and reflect upon their experience.

The Cambridge guests are always accompanied by their Russian hosts on excursions and walks around the city. With the political situation a bit tricky due to the NATO intervention in Serbia, Leveille will decide while in St. Petersburg whether or not to go to Moscow for the planned three-day visit. Plans for Moscow include the Bolshoi Theater, the Kremlin, the Tretyakov Gallery and the Tchaikovsky Conservatory.

The group will return Saturday, May 1, 1999, exactly 10 years after

Pilot play debuts tonight

The Pilot School of Cambridge Rindge and Latin School debuts "Where's My Bubble?" tonight, April 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the CRLS Fitzgerald Theater, 459 Broadway.

Shows continue Friday and Saturday, also at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 and will be available at the door. Advance tickets are available at the Pilot School Office, Room R510, at CRLS.

This year's play follows a 27-year-old progressive educational tradition of going boldly where few other school programs have dared to go. Students, entirely on their own, have written, directed, arranged and choreographed a series of satirical skits, musical parodies, hip hop dances and raps that laugh mockingly in the face of the controversial statewide high stakes, MCAS exit tests, and at the nationwide standardization movement.

The play's title, "Where's My Bubble?," refers to those forms students must fill out every time they are evaluated in a standardized test — the circles students must darken with No. 2 pencils look like bubbles.

Proceeds benefit Pilot School scholarship and activities funds. For more information, call 349-6674.

The MIT/CRLS FIRST robotics Team 97, "The Psychedelics," won second place in its alliance with the Somerville, N.J. "Dexterous Gearheads" at the recent Johnson & Johnson Mid-Atlantic Robotics Regional competition at Rutgers University.

Against 36 other teams, the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School squad had placed 13th in the qualifying rounds over two days, and was chosen by fourth-seeded Somerville as partner for the elimination rounds.

The team has qualified to compete in the nationals at Epcot in Florida on April 22-24.

The Cambridge team's robot driver, Dana Jones, a CRLS sophomore, helped the Psychedelics win the "Best Play of the Day" award for strategic play in an earlier seeding round with the Kintnersville, Penn. "Cybersonics Technology" team.

"I'm proud of our team," said Rainuka Gupta, MIT senior and team coordinator. "It's great to be rewarded for our hard work. This is the first time we've placed at the regionals. We're excited by our success and are even more excited by what will come at nationals."

The competition pitted pairs of robots against each other to lift disk-shaped pillows to a height of eight feet, with bonuses awarded to robots which could mount a low platform on casters, called the puck, while defending against the opposition. The teams had designed and built the robots over a six-week period ending Feb. 22.

Malika Napoli, CRLS senior, described the process: "We broke up into groups to work on different parts of the robot. Then we collaborated together to build it. We went through some ordeals. For instance, we found near the end that we had too much weight, so we had to take the whole thing apart and put it back together."

Anton Abaya, a senior, could feel the excitement in the crowd.

"Our robot had the speed and power. It was also deceptive," Abaya said. "It looked like a tin can on wheels; you didn't think it could pack a punch. But it was a really powerful defender, and everyone in the stands said, 'Look at Team 97 go!'"

Cook, et al petition to amend the text of the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Cambridge relative to Yards Protection as follows:

A. In Article 2.000 - Definitions, amend the definition of "Green Area" to read as follows:

Green Area
A landscape of area of land associated with and located on the same tract of land as a major building or group of buildings in relation to which it serves to provide light and air, or scenic, recreational or similar purposes. Green area shall, except as stated below, be completely planted with living trees, grass, ground cover, bushes, shrubs, and/or similar vegetation, as well as water and other natural features of the site. Pervious ground covers such as wood shavings may be used, but only as mulch beneath vegetation.

Such area may not include any portion of the lot used for parking access drives or other hard surface areas, except walks and terraces designed and intended for non-vehicular use. However, in no case shall hard surfaced walks and terraces exceed twenty-five (25) percent of the total required green area.

Green area shall consist of open space at grade, with vegetation as stated above. It shall be open and unobstructed to the sky. It shall consist of friable, permeable material (including but not limited to loam, gravel, sand and crushed stone, and including naturally occurring soil, bedrock, and incidental pipes and other underground utilities) having a minimum depth of three feet. Said land shall be capable of supporting the growth of trees, grass, ground cover, bushes, shrubs, and similar vegetation.

B. Amend 4.21.c. to read as follows:

Provision of parking for occupants, employees, customers, or visitors shall be considered as an accessory use, provided that:

(1) where accessory to residential uses, such parking shall be limited to the accommodation of three passenger vehicles, or two passenger vehicles for each dwelling unit, whichever is greater, and

(2) an accessory building used for garage purposes shall be limited to the accommodation of one passenger vehicle.

C. Amend Section 4.21.d. to read as follows:

A customary home occupation or the office of a resident physician, dentist, attorney-at law, architect, engineer, or member of other recognized profession shall be considered as an accessory use, provided that:
(1) no more than three persons shall practice or be employed on the premises at any one time, and
(2) said use shall not occur in an accessory building.

D. Amend Section 4.21.g.(2) to read as follows:
The total area of uses accessory to the principal use except for non-structural parking facilities and driveways may not occupy more than 150 square feet of the area of the lot.

E. Amend Section 4.21.h. to read as follows:

An accessory building shall not occupy more than 150 square feet of the area of the lot. No side of an accessory building shall exceed 18 feet in length. An accessory building shall not be located nearer than ten (10) feet to the principal building or nearer than five (5) feet to any side or rear lot line or nearer to the front lot line than the minimum setback in the zoning district. No lot may contain more than one accessory building.

F. Amend Section 4.21.k. to read as follows:

No accessory building shall be constructed except at natural grade, nor may any accessory building exceed fifteen (15) feet in height above mean natural grade.

G. Add a new Section 4.21.o. reading as follows:

o. An ornamental pool shall be considered an allowed accessory use, subject to the following conditions:

(1) With regard to the ornamental pool itself:

(a) Its height shall not exceed two (2) feet above mean natural grade;
(b) It shall not exceed two (2) feet in depth; and
(c) It shall otherwise comply with the provisions of this section 4.21 with regard to the dimensions of accessory buildings.

(2) With regard to any structure or structures contained in the ornamental pool:

(a) The total area of said structures shall not occupy an area in excess of 15% of the area of the ornamental pool; and
(b) They shall otherwise comply with the provisions of this section 4.21 with regard to the dimensions of accessory buildings.

H. Delete section 5.22.3 as the zoning ordinance is numbered prior to the changes below.

I. Insert a new Section 5.22 reading as follows, and renumber the existing Sections 5.22 and following accordingly.

5.22 Minimum Standards for Yards;

5.22.1 Minimum Standards for Yards in Office, Residence and Open Space Districts.

Yards in Office, Residence and Open Space Districts shall comply with the following standards:

(1) Setbacks.
Buildings shall comply with yard requirements stated in this Zoning Ordinance by being set back above and below ground.

(2) Green area - general.
Three of the yards on a lot shall consist exclusively of green areas as defined in section 2.000. At a minimum, green area setback shall consist of permanently maintained densely planted trees and shrubs that may be expected to form within three (3) years after time of planting a continuous unbroken, year round visual screen. Every effort shall be made to retain the best existing trees in said setbacks to meet the requirements of this section in whole or in part. Plans for landscaping and maintenance shall be approved by the Committee of Public Planting as appointed by the City Manager. No Certificate of Occupancy may be granted until landscaping under the terms of this section is completed.

(3) Lots with more than four yards.
If the shape of a lot creates a situation where there are more than four yards, this green area requirement shall apply to three-fourths of the yards, rounded up if the calculation results in a fractional number.

(4) Lots in two or more zoning districts.
When a zoning district boundary line or lines split a lot, a lot partially in an Office, Residence or Open Space district shall comply with provisions elsewhere in this zoning ordinance with regard to lots in two or more zoning districts, except that the setback and green area requirements of this section 5.22.1 shall apply to all parts of the lot regardless of zoning district.
(5) Lots abutting more restrictively zoned districts.
When any lot abuts a more restrictively zoned district or districts, all yards abutting the more restrictively zoned district(s) shall be designated as yards required to comply with the green area requirements of this section 5.22.1. This provision shall apply to that quantity of abutting yards numbering up to and including the maximum number of green area yards required. The total number of green area yards required on a lot shall not be changed by the provisions of this subsection (5).

(6) Pedestrian and vehicular access.

(a) When a yard used to satisfy the green area requirement of this section 5.22.1 is a front yard, the green area may be interrupted by not more than one path for pedestrian access to the building. Said pedestrian path shall be constructed perpendicular to the lot line and shall be not more than 8 feet wide. The green area yard may also be interrupted by not more than one driveway constructed perpendicular to the lot line and which is not more than 12 feet wide.

(b) The sum of the widths of the said pedestrian path and driveway may not exceed the setback provided by the smallest of the yards provided on the lot.

(c) The areas allowed to be used for access under this subsection (6) shall be counted as part of the 25% of total required green area which is allowed to be used for hard surfaced walks and terraces for the front yard in which the access areas are constructed.

(7) Townhouse development.

When a lot is used for townhouse development, the provisions of this section 5.22.1 shall apply to the lot before subdivision into townhouse lots. Subdivision into townhouse lots shall be done in such a manner as to not affect the application of this footnote to the entire unsubdivided lot. In particular, the pedestrian path and driveway allowed by subsection (6) above shall apply to the lot before subdivision into townhouse lots and subdivision into townhouse lots shall not increase the number of pedestrian paths and driveways allowed.

5.22.2 Minimum standards for yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space Districts.

Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts shall comply with the following standards:

(1) Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts on lots which include residential uses shall comply with the following standards:
(a) Yards which are required in the district shall comply with Section 5.22.1. In the situation stated in (1)(b) following, the number of required yards shall be increased as stated in (1)(b) through (1)(d) following.
(b) If a lot:
(i) abuts a Residence or Open Space district, and
(ii) there are no yard dimensional requirements in the district in which the lot is located applicable to that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district, or if the applicable yard dimensional requirements of the district in which the lot is located are less than those which apply to the yard in the district which is abutted by it.

Then that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district shall comply with the yard dimensional requirements applicable to the yard in the Residence or Open Space district which is abutted by it.

(c) In the event that a portion of a lot abuts more than one yard in a Residence or Open Space district which yards differ in applicable dimensional requirements, the most stringent of the various dimensional requirements shall apply.

(d) The number of yards on a lot required to comply with green area requirements shall be the number of yards required in the district plus additional yards in accordance with subsections (b) and (c) above, except that the total number of yards required to comply shall not exceed the number of yards required for a similar lot located in a Residence, Office or Open Space district, as calculated in accordance with section 5.22.1 above.

(2) Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts on lots which do not include residential uses shall comply with the following standards:

(a) Yards shall comply with the provisions of section 5.22.1 with regard to yards abutting Residence or Open Space districts except that:

(i) Yards abutting Residence or Open Space districts shall comply with the requirements of section 5.22.1, up to the maximum number of yards required, in the same manner as stated in section 5.22.1.(5) and
(ii) Yards not abutting Residence or Open Space districts shall not be subject to the requirements of this section.
(b) If:
(i) a lot abuts a Residence or Open Space district, and

(ii) there are no yard requirements in the district in which the lot is located applicable to that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district, or the applicable yard dimensional requirements of the district in which the lot is located are less than those which apply to the yard which is abutted by it, then the portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district shall comply with the yard dimensional requirements applicable to the yard which is abutted by it.
(c) In the event that a portion of a lot abuts more than one yard or yards in Residence or Open Space districts which yards differ in applicable dimensional requirements, the most stringent of the various dimensional requirements shall apply.
(d) The number of yards on a lot required to comply with green area requirements shall be the number of yards required in the district plus additional yards in accordance with subsections (b) and (c) above, except that the total number of yards required to comply shall not exceed the number of yards required for a similar lot located in a Residence, Office or Open Space district, as calculated in accordance with section 5.22.1 above.

J. In Section 5.31.1, Table 5-1, delete footnote (k) with regard to yard requirements for the "Res. C-2B" District, and in Section 5.31.2, Footnotes, delete footnote (k) and insert the following in place thereof: "Reserved".

Every effort shall be made to retain the best existing trees in said setbacks to meet the requirements of this section in whole or in part. Plans for landscaping and maintenance shall be approved by the Committee of Public Planting as appointed by the City Manager. No Certificate of Occupancy may be granted until landscaping under the terms of this section is completed.

(3) Lots with more than four yards.
If the shape of a lot creates a situation where there are more than four yards, this green area requirement shall apply to three-fourths of the yards, rounded up if the calculation results in a fractional number.

(4) Lots in two or more zoning districts.
When a zoning district boundary line or lines split a lot, a lot partially in an Office, Residence or Open Space district shall comply with provisions elsewhere in this zoning ordinance with regard to lots in two or more zoning districts, except that the setback and green area requirements of this section 5.22.1 shall apply to all parts of the lot regardless of zoning district.
(5) Lots abutting more restrictively zoned districts.
When any lot abuts a more restrictively zoned district or districts, all yards abutting the more restrictively zoned district(s) shall be designated as yards required to comply with the green area requirements of this section 5.22.1. This provision shall apply to that quantity of abutting yards numbering up to and including the maximum number of green area yards required. The total number of green area yards required on a lot shall not be changed by the provisions of this subsection (5).

(6) Pedestrian and vehicular access.

(a) When a yard used to satisfy the green area requirement of this section 5.22.1 is a front yard, the green area may be interrupted by not more than one path for pedestrian access to the building. Said pedestrian path shall be constructed perpendicular to the lot line and shall be not more than 8 feet wide. The green area yard may also be interrupted by not more than one driveway constructed perpendicular to the lot line and which is not more than 12 feet wide.

(b) The sum of the widths of the said pedestrian path and driveway may not exceed the setback provided by the smallest of the yards provided on the lot.

(c) The areas allowed to be used for access under this subsection (6) shall be counted as part of the 25% of total required green area which is allowed to be used for hard surfaced walks and terraces for the front yard in which the access areas are constructed.

(7) Townhouse development.

When a lot is used for townhouse development, the provisions of this section 5.22.1 shall apply to the lot before subdivision into townhouse lots. Subdivision into townhouse lots shall be done in such a manner as to not affect the application of this footnote to the entire unsubdivided lot. In particular, the pedestrian path and driveway allowed by subsection (6) above shall apply to the lot before subdivision into townhouse lots and subdivision into townhouse lots shall not increase the number of pedestrian paths and driveways allowed.

5.22.2 Minimum standards for yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space Districts.

Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts on lots which include residential uses shall comply with the following standards:
(1) Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts on lots which include residential uses shall comply with the following standards:
(a) Yards which are required in the district shall comply with Section 5.22.1. In the situation stated in (1)(b) following, the number of required yards shall be increased as stated in (1)(b) through (1)(d) following.
(b) If a lot:
(i) abuts a Residence or Open Space district, and
(ii) there are no yard dimensional requirements in the district in which the lot is located applicable to that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district, or if the applicable yard dimensional requirements of the district in which the lot is located are less than those which apply to the yard in the district which is abutted by it.

Then that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district shall comply with the yard dimensional requirements applicable to the yard in the Residence or Open Space district which is abutted by it.

(c) In the event that a portion of a lot abuts more than one yard in a Residence or Open Space district which yards differ in applicable dimensional requirements, the most stringent of the various dimensional requirements shall apply.

(d) The number of yards on a lot required to comply with green area requirements shall be the number of yards required in the district plus additional yards in accordance with subsections (b) and (c) above, except that the total number of yards required to comply shall not exceed the number of yards required for a similar lot located in a Residence, Office or Open Space district, as calculated in accordance with section 5.22.1 above.

(2) Yards in districts other than Office, Residence and Open Space districts on lots which do not include residential uses shall comply with the following standards:

(a) Yards shall comply with the provisions of section 5.22.1 with regard to yards abutting Residence or Open Space districts except that:

(i) Yards abutting Residence or Open Space districts shall comply with the requirements of section 5.22.1, up to the maximum number of yards required, in the same manner as stated in section 5.22.1.(5) and
(ii) Yards not abutting Residence or Open Space districts shall not be subject to the requirements of this section.
(b) If:
(i) a lot abuts a Residence or Open Space district, and

(ii) there are no yard requirements in the district in which the lot is located applicable to that portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district, or the applicable yard dimensional requirements of the district in which the lot is located are less than those which apply to the yard which is abutted by it, then the portion of the lot abutting the Residence or Open Space district shall comply with the yard dimensional requirements applicable to the yard which is abutted by it.
(c) In the event that a portion of a lot abuts more than one yard or yards in Residence or Open Space districts which yards differ in applicable dimensional requirements, the most stringent of the various dimensional requirements shall apply.
(d) The number of yards on a lot required to comply with green area requirements shall be the number of yards which abut a Residence or Open Space district, except that the total number of yard required to comply shall not exceed the number of yards required for a similar lot located in a Residence, Office or Open Space district, as calculated in accordance with section 5.22.1, above.

J. In Section 5.31.1, Table 5-1, delete footnote (k) with regard to yard requirements for the "Res. C-2B" District, and in Section 5.31.2, Footnotes, delete footnote (k) and insert the following in place thereof: "Reserved".
