

Communications 4/21/97

Peter Valentine 37 Brookline

Concerning the unconstitutionality of ticketing my end purpose is to empower the city, not destabilize.

I intend to push the issue to the degree necessary.

Even so I intend to shovel my sidewalks whether ticketing or no ticketing.

My other important purpose is to focus attention on the fact that the Constitution does need refinement and expansion especially this time from the people's point of view. Although whatever occurs must be just and balanced for total well being.

To look at matters in the most meaningful way, for city officials to put great effort into diminishing our inalienable rights, or seeing to it that the Constitution does allow ticketing or even improving the Constitution and to sit idly by while the federal gov't is stealing funds needed by the people and to not confront the greatest issue that our country and sovereignty are being physically and illegally covertly overthrown which is another reason for the shortage of funds And

To not lead other cities in this great and honorable effort of reinvigoration and clarity when it has been asked to do so for over a year would indicate great poverty of moral will power.

If one is being attacked one must rearrange things to deal with the attack, not pretend that it doesn't exist.
