ROBERT J. GENCO

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today Georgetown University honors one of the leaders in the field of Periodontology. Research conducted by Dr. Robert J. Genco and his colleagues demonstrated the essential role of neutrophils and antibodies in protection against bacteria that cause periodontal infections. His recent studies have demonstrated the importance of the elimination of periodontal disease-causing bacteria to the successful prevention and treatment of periodontal diseases.

Upon receiving his D.D.S. cum laude from the State University of New York at Buffalo in 1963, Dr. Genco attended the University of Pennsylvania and received a Ph.D. in Microbiology and Immunology. He returned to his alma mater where he currently serves as a dental researcher, educator, and administrator in his roles of Distinguished Professor and Chairman of the State University of New York at Buffalo Oral Biology Department, Director of the Periodontal Disease Clinical Research Center, and Associate Dean for Graduate Studies and Research.

Dr. Genco has published over 180 articles and presently edits the Journal of Periodontology. He has been elected to leadership roles in national and international professional organizations, including the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Association for Dental Research. Dr. Genco was recently inducted into the Institute of Medicine. His dedication to the dental profession is matched only by his achievements in the treatment and prevention of periodontal diseases.

DEBORAH GREENSPAN

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

With great pride Georgetown University salutes today Dr. Deborah Greenspan for her pioneering work in the identification and treatment of the oral manifestations of AIDS. The combined research of Dr. Deborah Greenspan and her husband, John, resulted in the discovery of the association between hairy leukoplakia and the HIV infection. This association is important to the early diagnosis and initiation of treatment of HIV disease.

Dr. Deborah Greenspan completed her dental education at the Royal Dental Hospital in London, England, and went into private practice for approximately ten years. She entered academic dentistry as a lecturer at the University of California, San Francisco, in 1972 and later completed a fellowship in Oral Medicine there. Because of her research and expertise in the HIV infection, Dr. Greenspan was appointed director of UCSF's Oral AIDS Center in 1987.

Recognized worldwide for her work in AIDS and dental education, Dr. Greenspan has been invited to participate in numerous national and international conferences and workshops. For her commitment to the challenge in dentistry created by AIDS, Dr. Greenspan received the Samuel Charles Miller Award from the American Academy of Oral Medicine and the Seymour Kreshover Award from the National Institute of Dental Research.

JOHN S. GREENSPAN

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

It is with significant pride that Georgetown University today pays tribute to Dr. John S. Greenspan for his pioneering work in the oral manifestation of HIV disease and in the therapeutic modalities for treatment of these oral manifestations. The combined talents of John and his wife, Deborah, resulted in the discovery of the association between hairy leukoplakia and HIV infection. This association is important to the early diagnosis and initiation of treatment of HIV disease.

John Greenspan began his career across the Atlantic Ocean at the Royal Dental Hospital of London School of Dentistry. After postgraduate study of Experimental Pathology and lecturing at the Royal Dental Hospital from 1963 to 1972, Dr. Greenspan began teaching at the University of California, San Francisco (UCSF). Today he is Professor of Oral Biology and Oral Pathology and Chairman of the Division of Oral Biology at the UCSF's Schools of Dentistry and Medicine. The fact that a significant number of his graduate students and postdoctoral fellows have pursued careers in academic dentistry is testimony to his dedication and contributions to dental education.

Nationally and internationally recognized for his work in oral pathology and AIDS, Dr. Greenspan has been invited to give numerous symposia and presentations in this field and has been the recipient of numerous awards including the Seymour Kreshover Award from the National Institute of Dental Research.

HAROLD C. SLAVKIN

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Georgetown University honors today Dr. Harold C. Slavkin for his research in craniofacial development. Dr. Slavkin's work, which focused on the genetics of the development of dentition, has major implications in the prevention of abnormalities in craniofacial development.

After receiving his D.D.S. with honors from the University of Southern California in 1965, Dr. Slavkin embarked on a teaching career at his alma mater. His selfless dedication to teaching and research has benefited both his colleagues and students for over 20 years. Since 1973, Dr. Slavkin has been Chief of the Laboratory for Developmental Biology at the University of Southern California's Gerontology Center. Concurrently he teaches at the dental, graduate, and undergraduate schools.

Nationally and internationally recognized for his work in craniofacial development, Dr. Slavkin has actively served in numerous professional and scientific organizations. A prolific writer, his articles appear in journals and as chapters in books, and he has authored two textbooks. Dr. Slavkin also produced several films and videos for public broadcasting, among them the television special "A Lifetime of Change."
