He just wanted to

A man in New Delhi, who requested a visa to come to the United States, gave a most surprising reason on his application: He wants to go to President Reagan's funeral.

A chagrined official at the U.S. Consulate informed him that Reagan is still very much alive.

The man said he knew that, but explained that he "would rather wait there than here."

No repeat offenders here

Tribal chiefs in Mozambique have instituted a crackdown on witches in the Dombe district, where justice is swift and punishment is severe.

The daily newspaper Noticias reported that those found guilty of casting spells are tied up and thrown into the Lucite River where they are devoured by crocodiles.

Justice Minister Jose Abudo said he was "alarmed" by the report.

This could ruin his life

Chang Ming-yuan, sentenced to life for murdering three people in Taiwan in 1977 and then set free years later, has been ordered back to jail because he assaulted someone, violating his parole. He is 96 years old.

Chang, the nation's oldest inmate, will be eligible for parole again when he is 106.

I've got a surprise for you

Instead of pouring chocolate syrup on her during sex as she expected, a Denver woman said her husband poured varnish on her instead.

Angela Zaba said it made her hair fall out, so she took her husband, David, to court where he pleaded guilty to assault.

Judge Larry Bohning called the charges "unusual even for the wide range of cases we see in Denver County Court."

An adventure in driving

The scrap metal market in Beijing is so good that thieves have stolen more than 5,000 manhole covers from the streets in the past two years to sell for a quick profit.

Many accidents have resulted.

Helena M. Reilly
of Andover, 90,
a schoolteacher

Helena M. (Sullivan) Reilly of Andover, a retired schoolteacher, died Thursday at her daughter's home after a brief illness. She was 90.

Born in North Andover, she was a lifelong resident of the town and graduated from the former Johnson High School in 1922. She later graduated the Lowell Normal School, now the University of Massachusetts-Lowell, in 1924. In 1959, she received her master's degree in education from the University of Lowell.

Mrs. Reilly obtained her first teaching position in Bradford, Vt., before returning to North Andover, where she taught fourth and fifth grade at the former North Andover Center School.

Between 1959 and 1972, she taught at the Groveland Elementary School, later renamed the Evelyn Shanahan School.

After retiring, Mrs. Reilly was a substitute teacher at the South School in Andover and several other elementary schools in North Andover.

She was a parishioner of St. Michael Church of North Andover, where she was baptised, confirmed, received her first Communion and was married. Mrs. Reilly was also a member of the Blessed Virgin Sodality of the parish.

She was married to the late George H.

Mrs. Reilly is survived by her daughter, Joan of Cambridge; six grandchildren; eight great-grandchildren; and a niece.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated tomorrow at 10 a.m. at St. Michael Church.

Burial will be in St. Mary-Immaculate Conception Cemetery in Lawrence.

Arrangements by Caron Funeral Home, North Andover.

Helen Boiardi, 90,
spaghetti maker

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio — Helen J. Boiardi, who with her husband helped make Chef Boy-ar-dee packaged spaghetti dinners, died July 3 at 90.

She and her husband, Hector, opened a restaurant in the early 1920s. Because so many customers asked for takeout orders of their spaghetti sauce, the couple went into the packaged food business.

The company, a pioneer in convenience food preparation, was sold to American Home Products of New York in 1946. —AP

Morris Cohen,
84, American who
spied for USSR

MOSCOW — Morris Cohen, an American who spied for the Soviet Union and was instrumental in relaying atomic secrets to the Kremlin in the 1940s, died June 23. He was 84.

He died without publicly revealing the name of the American scientist who helped him pass the information.

Mr. Cohen joined the American Communist Party in 1935 and later went to Spain to fight for the left-wing Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Spanish Civil War. While recovering from wounds, Mr. Cohen was recruited by Soviet intelligence to spy for Moscow in America.

In July 1945, during the first test of the atomic bomb in Los Alamos, N.M., Mr. Cohen and his wife, Lona, recruited a Los Alamos scientist to obtain detailed blueprints of the weapon. The information was passed to Moscow 12 days before the American bomb test.

Soviet dictator Josef Stalin ordered a crash program and exploded a similar atomic device four years later.

After fleeing arrest and taking new names, Peter and Helen Kroger, the couple moved to London in 1954 and started a new intelligence network posing as rare book dealers. The network existed for seven years before British intelligence exposed it.

They were arrested in 1961 and sentenced to 20 years in prison. The couple was exchanged in 1969 for British teacher Gerald Brooke, arrested in Moscow by the KGB for distributing anti-Communist propaganda.

Former Gov. Furcolo remembered, praised

By DAVID TALBOT

Eulogizing former Gov. Foster J. Furcolo yesterday, friends and family praised his legacy of establishing community colleges in Massachusetts and recalled his gentle manner.

"He felt that every young person — every young man and woman who was qualified — should get an education. Maybe that is one of the primary gifts that Foster Furcolo has left to us," said the Rev. James Haddad at St. Joseph's Church in Needham.

"I think he comes out of that Catholic tradition that says: 'You and I must be mindful of the dignity of others.'"

Daughter Kathryn Sherman recalled how Gov. Furcolo spent three days cooking veal scallopini, his unfailing attendance at school plays, and "his kind, gentle, soft manner."

Gov. Furcolo, a former congressman who vaulted from his Springfield law firm to become Democratic governor from 1957 to 1961, died Wednesday at age 83. He was the state's first Italian-American governor.

In addition to creating the state's community college system, he set up a loan program for needy students.

"He was an important guy in my future," former Gov. Michael Dukakis said after the funeral. "For a lot of us starting in politics in those days, he was one of the standard-bearers. He had been a fine congressman, very progressive."

Gov. William F. Weld was vacationing in the Adirondack Mountains and didn't attend.

But Bernard Cardinal Law, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino, House Speaker Charles Flaherty and former Gov. Endicott Peabody did pay respects.

Harold Freeman,
former carpenter,
Dedham resident

Harold Wendell Freeman, a carpenter, died Friday at his Dedham home after a long illness. He was 78.

He was born in Lincoln, R.I., and educated there. He moved to Dedham 35 years ago. He was a carpenter with Houston and Lagerstrom, retiring in 1980.

Mr. Freeman served in the U.S. Army during World War II.

He later founded the Freeman Construction Company in Hopedale, employing 21 men building homes.

He was also a member of the Montgomery Lodge A.F. and A.M. in Milford.

Mr. Freeman is survived by his wife, Margaret (Pottler-Haine); three daughters, Jane Farnham of Cocoa Beach, Fla., Bonnie Cook of Rehoboth, Mass., and Lesley Haine of Hopedale; and three grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held at noon tomorrow at the Folsom Funeral Home, Dedham.

Burial will be in the Brookdale Cemetery, Dedham.

Arrangements by Folsom Funeral Home, Dedham.

Georg Shook, 61,
artist, news exec

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Georg Shook, an artist and Tennessee newspaper executive in town to teach an art seminar, was killed in a single-car crash July 2. He was 61.

Mr. Shook was a promotions/creative services manager at The Commercial Appeal in Memphis and had been with the paper for 34 years.

He also traveled the country teaching art students. His specialty was watercolor and he wrote a book on his painting technique.

His paintings are included in collections around the world and several have been used in national publications, including American Artist and Today's Art. —AP

NASA sets sights on space station

By JULES CRITTENDEN

A quarter of a century after NASA's monumental push put Neil Armstrong on the moon, America is again poised for lift-off in a brave, new era of space exploration.

The historic handshake by an American astronaut and a Russian cosmonaut through the airlock of Atlantis-Mir on June 28 signaled the start of work on a space station that is touted as a stepping stone to the planets.

Years of hard drinking ruin your liver? Generate a new one.

Those Marlboro 100s blacken your lungs? Just pop in a spare lobe.

Dialysis a pain, and your sister won't part with a kidney? Head down to the local pig farm.

Human life is often limited by failing organs and diseases that attack fragile systems. But a living-donor double-lung transplant at Massachusetts General Hospital last month offers a glimpse of what is on the horizon.

"More cadaveric donors is the best solution," said Joel Newman, spokesman for the United Network of Organ Sharing.

But harvesting parts from the dead doesn't begin to meet the needs of the

Homesick teen-ager faces DSS discipline

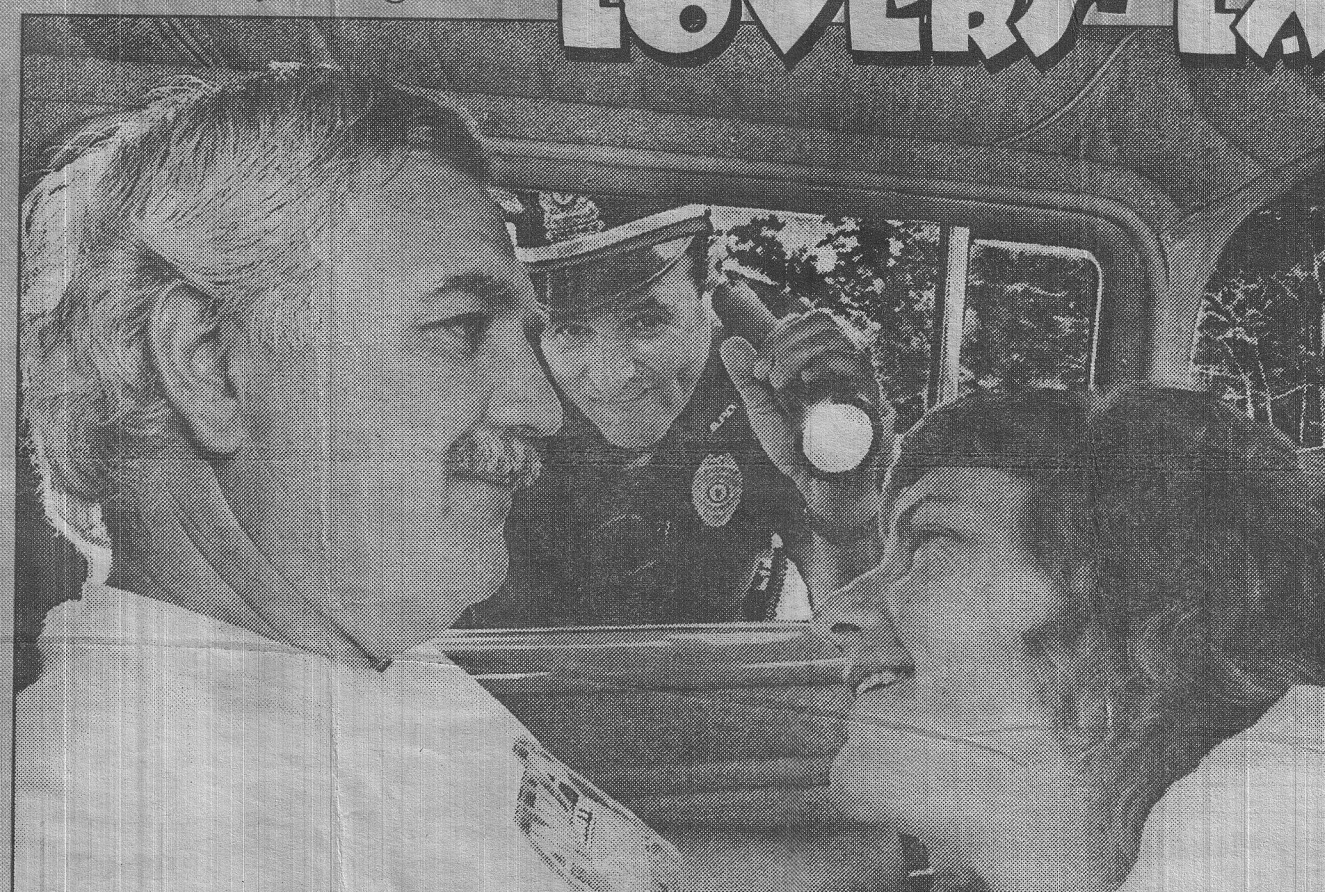

By TIM CORNELL and DAN ROSENFELD

A 15-year-old ripped out of his father's Salisbury home and tossed into foster care without a hearing will be hauled off tomorrow to a harder-core facility because he has rebelled against life without his family.

Trapped in foster care for nearly three years after a judge ordered him into state custody while she ponders which parent will get him, Thomas "T.J." Balboni says he wants nothing more than

Forever young on... LOVERS' LANES

By J.M. LAWRENCE

Up at Spot Pond in Stoneham, they let the trees grow to cover the view of the water. Canada geese now weave across the road where William Surratt's love life began in his Chevy convertible more than 25 years ago.

The couples would back their cars in, side by side under the trees.
