City day care needs are growing

Cambridge cannot be accommodated by available child care programs, but many programs keep long waiting lists. "Last year we had 100 families apply to fill four spots," commented Ellen Kelly, director of the Cambridge-Ellis School in Porter Square.

Kelly did not expect this year to be "as bad," but all over the city, slots are filled as quickly as they open, especially those that are subsidized by the state for lower income families. This shortage has persisted for a variety of reasons, including the scarcity of acceptable space to house programs, the shortage of teachers to staff them and the expense of running them. These problems are not unique to Cambridge, and providers and administrators do not agree as to how they should be addressed.

Ten to 15 years ago, said Jackie Neel, the administrative director of child care for the city, "programs were not as sophisticated. People were not thinking of them in the same way." For many parents in the seventies, Neel said, child care was primarily custodial, and consisted of "hiring a teacher to provide a safe environment" for children.

Today, though the structures of programs vary widely, parents and officials are demanding they provide an atmosphere that is educational as well as "safe." All programs are required to be staffed by state certified teachers and most have some kind of educational curriculum.

Maureen Endress, who directs the KLH Child Development Center in Cambridgeport, said that the educational component of care is particularly important to parents who are recent immigrants. According to Endress, the Haitian families who live in the neighborhood "view us as a preschool, though we're actually a day care. They're very desperate. They want their children to come. They want their children to learn English."

Because salary levels for child care workers are traditionally low, however, many programs are competing with the public school system for qualified teachers. The school system offers higher salaries than most child care programs, and in the past, Neel said, "wages for staff couldn't increase very dramatically because programs can't charge tuitions parents can't afford to pay.

At the Bigelow Cooperative Day Care program in Harvard Square, director Gay Smith is applying for funds from the Department of Social Services to increase the number of slots in the program for low income families. Racial, ethnic and economic diversity are important both to providers and to parents, but the cost of private programs like Bigelow is prohibitive to many families.

"It's incredibly expensive," said Sharon Finnegan, whose twins attend the Bigelow program. "Ninety percent of the people in this country could not afford our day care bill."

"The advantage that upper income people have is that they're not limited to places that provide subsidies," said Myrna Greenfield of the Child Care Resource Center (CCRC), an information, referral and technical assistance organization serving Boston, Cambridge and Somerville.

"One thing positive in terms of the state is that its approach is to fund programs that have a mix of subsidized and full fee paying slots," Greenfield said.

But although the state receives high ratings for its support of child care, some providers say that what the state offers isn't enough.

Staff complain about the lack of resources for curriculum development, toys and facility maintenance.

"The thing that bothers me most right now is that the funding from the state is not enough to cover everything," said Karen Thompson, a teacher at KLH. KLH teacher Lysa Young said that with the warm weather approaching, the center needs "sand toys and a structure in the yard," but she doubted they could find the money for these items.

The costs of providing and paying for child care tend to decrease as children get older, making infant care the least accessible to parents. According to Greenfield, the licensing requirements for infant care are extremely stringent, resulting in higher costs.

There has been consistent debate in policy making circles as to who should pick up the tab for existing programs, as well as who should provide new slots. Though many people agree that government should have some role in funding child care, the corporate sector is being looked upon increasingly to initiate new programs and subsidize tuitions for their employees.

Corporate-sponsored child care was touted years ago as the employment benefit of the eighties and is now being hailed as the benefit of the nineties.

According to Greenfield, "The employer can offer significant forms of support, but realistically, not every employer can." Company-sponsored child care can be a good recruitment tool, she said, "but it is unrealistic to assume that the private sector will provide all support."

Linda Mills, the corporate child care service coordinator for the CCRC, said there are a variety of ways businesses can help their employees, but that the steps they take often depend on how management sees child care in relation to corporate needs and goals.

"Some employers are very much aware that child care needs for their employees are issues for them as well," Mills said.

She said employers can provide informational services, subsidise the service their employees choose or provide a company child care program as ways of helping employees.

Currently, two Cambridge firms, Polaroid Corporation and the Stride Rite Co. provide support for child care, and Mills said several other larger firms in the city were developing some kind of service.

"Still, Mills commented, one cannot expect employers to do it all. Partnerships between governments, parents and employers might be more reasonable."

Hospital deficit

ment, which could then file suit for collection. This policy will not affect the poor of Cambridge.

The third plan calls for local officials to ask Harvard Community Health Plan to change its policy of only referring city employees to Mount Auburn Hospital for in-patient care.

About 20 percent of the city's 5,000 employees subscribe to the Harvard Community Health Plan and, as a result, can no longer admit themselves to The Cambridge Hospital, said City Manager Robert Healy. The Harvard group's policy went into effect last year. The majority of employees subscribe to Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Healy said.

The last plan calls for local officials to investigate how money can be collected from those Somerville residents who use the city-run hospital but don't pay their bills. The goal is to get the city of Somerville to reimburse the hospital for these non-paying patients, including the needy.

Cambridge residents account for 70 percent of the patients at the hospital and six neighborhood health centers; Somerville residents account for 20 percent, and residents from outside these cities account for the balance, O'Brien said.

"More than $1 million (of the hospital deficit) can be attributed to non-paying Somerville residents," charges Walsh, adding that "it is unconscionable for Cambridge taxpayers to be forced to subsidize" these unpaid services.

Walsh said that if the hospital's low-occupancy rate and rising labor costs were corrected, another "big dent" could also be made in the $8 million deficit for fiscal year 1987.

About 60 percent of the hospital's 182 beds are regularly filled, O'Brien said, acknowledging that this is but one of several factors contributing to the ongoing financial crisis. About 70 percent of the 305 beds at the privately-run Mount Auburn Hospital are regularly filled, a spokesperson said.

Nonetheless, O'Brien said: "I not sure how Walsh arrived at that number" for non-paying Somerville patients.

More than 15 percent of the hospital's services can be linked to free health care for the poor and bad debt, he said, adding that the state and various insurers pay for a portion of the free care.

"There are certainly Somerville patients contributing to the free care and bad debt" at the hospital, O'Brien said. But he said the hospital is still trying to gauge how much these patients contribute to this problem.

Free care and bad debt are responsible for "less than half of the total (hospital) deficit," O'Brien said. And he stressed that Somerville patients are not necessarily responsible for 20 percent of unpaid accounts or the total deficit.

Many Somerville residents are referred to the city-run hospital by the nonprofit Cambridge/Somerville Mental Health and Retardation Center and the Cambridge and Somerville Program for Alcoholism Rehabilitation.

About 40 percent of the hospital's revenue comes from Medicare; about 17 percent from Medicaid; about 14 percent from Blue Cross/Blue Shield; about 9 percent from other Health Maintenance Organizations like Harvard's; and about 20 percent from individual payments.

The initial hospital budget for fiscal year 1987 was $36.4 million, O'Brien said. The proposed budget for fiscal year 1988 is about $37 million, he said. The proposed city budget for 1988 is about $196.6 million.

Because of the $8 million cost overruns at the hospital, the city was forced to allocate an additional $3 million from the upcoming 1987 tax levy to help close this gap.

O'Connell represents US against Aussies

JASON O'CONNELL

Things aren't going too well for Australia this year. They lost the Americas Cup, Crocodile Dundee ran off to the States, and this summer Aussie batters must face top ranked Cambridge Rindge and Latin School pitcher Jason O'Connell.

O'Connell, recently selected as one of 16 New England high school players for the USA High School All Star Distict I Baseball Team, will pitch for the USA in a series of games against Australian high schoolers this summer.

O'Connell, who is 3-0 on the mound this season for the undefeated CRLS team, is batting over 500. When not pitching he plays third base, according to coach Bill Fulginite.

Baseball became an obsession for O'Connell when he was 7 years old. He joined a little league team sponsored by the Pearl Food Market in East Cambridge and pitched a 17-0 win record, underscored by a batting average of 450, until he graduated to leagues with "older kids."

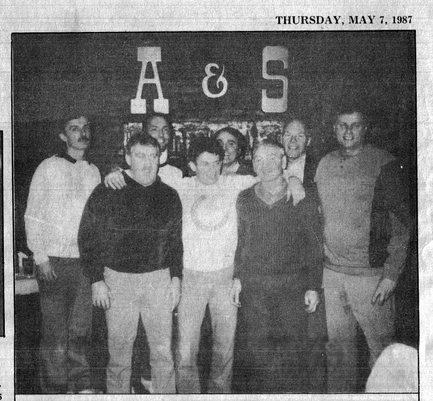

"Losing" isn't part of his vocabulary, noted Fulginite, "and although we concentrated on his fielding abilities last year (he batted 383 in 1986) this season we are looking toward his pitching."

O'Connell's winning ways are not confined to the ball field. Academically he is near the top of his class earning "honor roll" grades throughout his high school career.

This year, Coach Fulginite is looking toward O'Connell and teammates Jimmy Edgehill and Mike Jarvis to keep the team in the win column.

Next year Clemson University will have the privilege of including O'Connell on their roster.

In the meantime, Cambridge Mayor Walter Sullivan is assisting O'Connell to raise funds for the Australia trip.

NO STRINGS — The Cambridge Family YMCA recently held its first racquetball and handball tournament, dedicated to the memory of Mike Troiano and Paul Cramer. Cable corner

Cable offers access to your government

American Cablesystems is offering the residents of Cambridge a broad range of services and programming.

To those who find little on network TV to attract them, cable can be a valuable resource for expanded programming in selected areas of interest.

Over the next weeks, Cable corner will explore what is actually cable television — what's new, what's important, what's great for those select few interested in specific types of viewing. Cable provides an array of programs to meet informational needs not addressed by broadcast television.

In an age when focus on government and political issues is mainly dictated by the coverage given them on network news, there is an interesting alternative. Gavel-to-Gavel LIVE coverage of proceedings at a Federal, state and local level is bringing accessibility to the decision making processes into the living rooms of our citizens.

In Cambridge, residents have been able to view the State House proceedings on Channel 44 for several years. Now, with cable, that access has been expanded to include both local and federal proceedings. Every Monday evening, the Cambridge City Council Meeting and Public Hearings are covered live on the Municipal Channel 8. The local government, its players, and issues of concern to the various communities within Cambridge, are now extremely visible. This live coverage is repeated on Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons. The politics and policies of the city which directly affect its residents, are now a part of available television viewing.

Live coverage of the US Congress is also available through cable to the Cambridge viewers on Channel 22. C-SPAN, (the Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network) is a nonprofit cooperative of the cable-television industry. It was created in 1977 to provide public-affairs programming from the nation's capital to a national cable-television audience.

The network's on-air debut in 1979 coincided with the inauguration of live telecasts from the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives. At that time, C-SPAN's programming consisted solely of live, gavel-to-gavel telecasts of House proceedings, and its potential audience comprised 3.5 million households. Today, C-SPAN's programming is still the live, gavel-to-gavel uncut telecasts of the House whenever it is in session; yet, these live proceedings account for only one-tenth of the network's total schedule. The balance of the programming consists of live and taped telecasts of House and Senate committee and subcommittee hearings; all National Press Club newsmaker luncheons; the Close Up Foundation's Washington-studies programs with students, teachers, and senior citizens; State Department and Pentagon briefings; and conferences of public-policy organizations meeting in Washington, D.C., and around the country.

C-SPAN places special emphasis on its daily viewer call-in programs, which in 1986 aired the calls of over 12,000 viewers. Each weekday morning and evening, and also on Sunday evening, C-SPAN viewers can talk directly to congressmen, senators, cabinet members, and other public-policy experts. One call-in program each weekday — beginning approximately at 8:45 am Eastern time — is devoted to journalists, who discuss with viewers the gathering and reporting of national news.

Special programming on C-SPAN in 1987 includes two regularly scheduled weekly series: "The Road to the White House" follows the 1988 presidential aspirants with on-location coverage from Iowa and New Hampshire; "Inside the Constitution" features interviews with constitutional scholars, who will provide a historical perspective on the document in its bicentennial year.

For the first time in history, every citizen has the capability of seeing its government at work at all levels of the process. This programming is available and affordable to all. The local channels and C-SPAN are a part of each of the basic tiers/packages with prices ranging from $3.95 to $10.95 per month. American Cablesystems is also installing free basic service in the Cambridge Public Schools, the public libraries, all community centers and social service agencies throughout the city.

GRAINGER AND ESTER BROWNING, formerly of Cambridge, marked their 40th wedding anniversary on April 20. The couple now resides in Waltham and were married in the Union Baptist Church in 1947. They have two children, the Rev. Grainger Browning Jr. of Maryland and Corneila Aida Browning, who works at Cambridge's Henry Buckner School and the Bishop Hildebrand Outreach Center.

STACEY ANN FULGINITI, daughter of Rosanne and Robert Fulginiti of Cambridge and a seventh grade student at the Kennedy School, is a finalist in the Miss Mass. National Teen-Ager Contest, which will be held in Worcester.

Crime watch

Crime patterns traced in city

By Anthony G. Paolillo
Special to the Chronicle

This week's column is the final in the series of crime profiles on each of the city's 13 neighborhoods. Today's article will cover Neighborhood 9 through Neighborhood 13.

Neighborhood 9 is bordered by the B&M Railroad right of way, Garden street, and Mass avenue.

A good percentage of the housebreaks occur in this neighborhood during the summertime. Historically, the best time frame for breaks in this area has been between 5 and 9. After averaging two street robberies per month for three straight years, that average fell to one per month in 1986. Hot spots for larceny from motor vehicles and auto theft remain Sherman street and Walden Square. Commericial breaks increased in the 2200 to 2500 blocks of Mass avenue last year. Almost 8 percent of the serious crime in the city occurs in this neighborhood each year.

NEIGHBORHOOD 9

Auto Theft	12	9	6	6	7	7
Larc from MV	3	6	4	5	6.5	7.5
Vandalism	16	21	11	10	10.5	8

Neighborhood 10 is bounded by the Charles River, JFK street, Garden street, Concord avenue, Fresh Pond, B&M Railroad and the Watertown/Cambridge line.

After experiencing major auto theft and commercial burglary patterns in 1985, both of these crimes declined dramatically in this neighborhood in 1986. There is a housebreak pattern active at this time. On weekend nights, a suspect riding a bike has hit on Ash, Parker and Craigie between the hours of 6 and 10 pm. Street robbery declined in the western half of Harvard Square in 1986. This neighborhood averages 7000 calls for service annually that produces 7 percent of the citywide serious crime.

Vandalism	6	8	6	7	7.5	7

Neighborhood 11 is bounded by the Somerville line and Porter Square, the Arlington/Belmont line, and the B&M railroad.

Slight increase in auto theft and larcenies from motor vehicles along Mass avenue near Porter Square in 1986. This neighborhood averages a consistent 90 to 100 housebreaks annually. The majority of the street robberies are in the vicinity of Rindge towers. This neighborhood averages 8000 calls for service a year that produce 9 percent of the citywide crime total.

NEIGHBORHOOD 11

YEAR:	81	82	83	84	85	86

Vandalism	7	10	5	10	9	10.5

Neighborhood 12 is bounded by the B&M railroad, Blanchard road and Fresh Pond.

There is very little activity in this neighborhood other than occasional weekend commercial break patterns in area warehouses. The majority of auto theft and larceny from motor vehicles are from the Fresh Pond Mall on weekday afternoons. This neigborhood produces 2000 calls for service that account for 3 percent of the serious crime citywide. There were only five housebreaks here in 1986.

Neighborhood 13 is bounded by Fresh Pond the B&M Railroad, Grove and Belmont streets.

There were only 10 housebreaks in Neighborhood 13 in 1986. The majority of larcenies from motor vehicles and vandalism centers around the Star Market parking lot on Mt. Auburn. Only 1000 calls for service less than 2 percent of the citywide total, are received from here.

Schools food director is 'best in state'

Marilyn Tompkins, Cambridge Schools Director of Food Services, was elected "The Best Food Service Operator of the Year," by colleagues from throughout the state.

Tompkins was presented the award, the first of its kind, by Editor Paul Muldoon of "Yankee Food Service" magazine on April 27, during ceremonies held at the Bay Side Expo Center in Boston during the New England Food Service and Lodging Show and Exposition.

"Marilyn received overwhelming support on ballots received from our readership of 21,000," noted Muldoon. "She is a person whose concern and energy have had a great impact over the past several years on the food service industry."

"Ms. Tompkins' work in the Cambridge Schools is indicative of her efforts to improve school lunches for students and others served through institutional facilities," noted Mayor Walter Sullivan, chairman of the Cambridge School Committee.

Employed by the Cambridge Schools as a cafeteria worker in 1970, Tompkins earned increasing responsibilities in the food service department. She was promoted to the position of cook in 1973; in 1977 to supervisor of the satellite kitchen (a program that serves lunches to students throughout the city); and in 1978, the Director of Food Services, overseeing preparation and delivery of breakfast (1,000 a day) and lunch (4,200 a day) to the city's 14 schools.

In addition, she has mobilized school food services facilities during several local emergencies including feeding the elderly and snow workers during the blizzard of 1978 and the evacuees following the toxic gas explosion is Somerville.

The Cambridge Hospital recently purchased and installed a whole-body Computerized Axial Tomography (CAT) scanner that is now fully operational at the hospital.

"The installation of this new Pickner Synerview 1200 whole-body scanner has tremendous significance for our patients," said Hospital Administrator John G. O'Brien. "CAT scanning is the diagnostic choice for identifying more than 190 medical problems."

According to Associate Administrator for Professional Services Dennis Keefe, the hospital has made the transition from an early generation head scanner to the most up-to-date, fourth generation whole-body scanner.

"The new scanner will allow the hospital to serve more efficiently many of our patients and attract new patients," said Keefe. "Last year more than 2,500 whole-body scans could have been completed at the hospital if it had had the capability."

Dr. Philip Andrews, chief of radiology, explained that sometimes the whole-body scanner is the only diagnostic tool for a patient. If the capability does not exist on site, the patient must be transported to and from another facility, which is an obvious inconvenience.

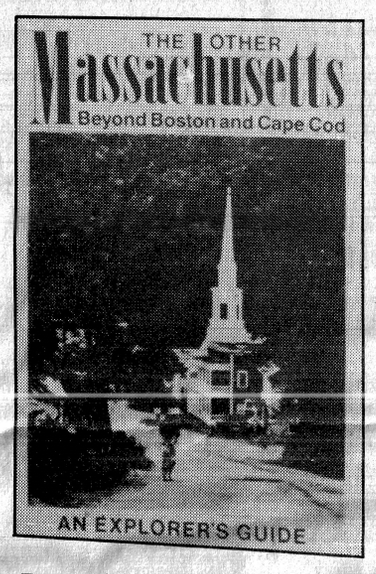

"If a patient is extremely critical," Andrews said "they may not be admitted to a hospital that lacks whole-body CAT scanning capabilities because they are too ill to be transported between institutions."

"The savings in not having to transport patients to another facility with whole-body scanning capabilities, and the future revenues and benefits from the new machine, more than offset the start up operating costs of a permanent facility at the hospital," said O'Brien.

The new scanner is located on the first floor of the hospital in a new unit built exclusively for the machine.

Cambridge author to talk on 'The Other Massachusetts'

Christina Tree will give a slide and lecture presentation based on her new book, "The Other Massachusetts: Beyond Boston and Cape Cod" (An Explorer's Guide. Countryman Press), at the Cambridge Public Library, 449 Broadway, on Tuesday, May 19, at 7:30 pm.

Recognizing the abundance of guides for Boston and Cape Cod, Tree decided to focus on the less-touristy areas, describing places to stay and things to do — hiking, biking, boating, swimming and skiing — as well as sites and distinctive landmarks to see in each area. Calendars of events, bed and breakfast accommodations in unexpected places, entertainment, and shopping are included among the listings.

Nine major geographic areas provide the book's focus: Upcountry Massachusetts, the Pioneer Valley, Central Massachusetts, the Merrimack Valley, North Shore, Plymouth, Sippican and Bristol County. Tree became fascinated by the "black holes" of Massachusetts — the many beautiful areas that escape notice because they have no name and are simply lumped into Central or Western Massachusetts.

She has even had a hand in the naming of one large area that extends from Gardner west to Williamstown. Formerly known as the "Northern Tier," Tree has rechristened it "Upcountry Massachusetts."

"The Other Massachusetts" allows readers to play tourist in their own state by providing numerous suggestions for convenient day trips or wonderful weekend getaways. The program is free and open to the public. For more information, please call 498-9080.

HARDWARE HANDYMAN
Ed Ver Planck

When a piece of wood is bruised or dented, the wood fibers are compressed; and they will remain so unless something is done to bring them back to their original condition... This can usually be achieved by a combination of heat and water, which makes the wood fibers expand and resume their former shape... To allow the water to reach the wood fibers, it's usually necessary to remove the finish around the bruise or dent... Do not take off any more finish than is absolutely necessary; and do not scrape or sand the wood under the finish, for this will change the color if stain has been used...

Cable corner

Cable offers access to your government

American Cablesystems is offering the residents of Cambridge a broad range of services and programming.

To those who find little on network TV to attract them, cable can be a valuable resource for expanded programming in selected areas of interest.

Over the next weeks, Cable corner will explore what is actually cable television — what's new, what's important, what's great for those select few interested in specific types of viewing. Cable provides an array of programs to meet informational needs not addressed by broadcast television.

In an age when focus on government and political issues is mainly dictated by the coverage given them on network news, there is an interesting alternative. Gavel-to-Gavel LIVE coverage of proceedings at a Federal, state and local level is bringing accessibility to the decision making processees into the living rooms of our citizens.

In Cambridge, residents have been able to view the State House proceedings on Channel 44 for several years. Now, with cable, that access has been expanded to include both local and federal proceedings. Every Monday evening, the Cambridge City Council Meeting and Public Hearings are covered live on the Municipal Channel 8. The local government, its players, and issues of concern to the various communities within Cambridge, are now extremely visible. This live coverage is repeated on Wednesday mornings and Friday afternoons. The politics and policies of the city which directly affect its residents, are now a part of available television viewing.

Live coverage of the US Congress is also available through cable to the Cambridge viewers on Channel 22. C-SPAN, (the Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network) is a nonprofit cooperative of the cable-television industry. It was created in 1977 to provide public-affairs programming from the nation's capital to a national cable-television audience.

The network's on-air debut in 1979 coincided with the inauguration of live telecasts from the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives. At that time, C-SPAN's programming consisted solely of live, gavel-to-gavel telecasts of House proceedings, and its potential audience comprised 3.5 million households. Today, C-SPAN's programming is still the live, gavel-to-gavel uncut telecasts of the House whenever it is in session; yet, these live proceedings account for only one-tenth of the network's total schedule. The balance of the programming consists of live and taped telecasts of House and Senate committee and subcommittee hearings; all National Press Club newsmaker luncheons; the Close Up Foundation's Washington-studies programs with students, teachers, and senior citizens; State Department and Pentagon briefings; and conferences of public-policy organizations meeting in Washington, D.C., and around the country.

C-SPAN places special emphasis on its daily viewer call-in programs, which in 1986 aired the calls of over 12,000 viewers. Each weekday morning and evening, and also on Sunday evening, C-SPAN viewers can talk directly to congressmen, senators, cabinet members, and other public-policy experts. One call-in program each weekday — beginning approximately at 8:45 am Eastern time — is devoted to journalists, who discuss with viewers the gathering and reporting of national news.

Special programming on C-SPAN in 1987 includes two regularly scheduled weekly series: "The Road to the White House" follows the 1988 presidential aspirants with on-location coverage from Iowa and New Hampshire; "Inside the Constitution" features interviews with constitutional scholars, who will provide a historical perspective on the document in its bicentennial year.

For the first time in history, every citizen has the capability of seeing its government at work at all levels of the process. This programming is available and affordable to all. The local channels and C-SPAN are a part of each of the basic tiers/packages with prices ranging from $3.95 to $10.95 per month. American Cablesystems is also installing free basic service in the Cambridge Public Schools, the public libraries, all community centers and social service agencies throughout the city.

GRAINGER AND ESTER BROWNING, formerly of Cambridge, marked their 40th wedding anniversary on April 20. The couple now resides in Waltham and were married in the Union Baptist Church in 1947. They have two children, the Rev. Grainger Browning Jr. of Maryland and Corneila Aida Browning, who works at Cambridge's Henry Buckner School and the Bishop Hildebrand Outreach Center.

STACEY ANN FULGINITI, daughter of Rosanne and Robert Fulginiti of Cambridge and a seventh grade student at the Kennedy School, is a finalist in the Miss Mass. National Teen-Ager Contest, which will be held in Worcester.

Crime watch

Crime patterns traced in city

By Anthony G. Paolillo
Special to the Chronicle

This week's column is the final in the series of crime profiles on each of the city's 13 neighborhoods. Today's article will cover Neighborhood 9 through Neighborhood 13.

Neighborhood 9 is bordered by the B&M Railroad right of way, Garden street, and Mass avenue.

A good percentage of the housebreaks occur in this neighborhood during the summertime. Historically, the best time frame for breaks in this area has been between 5 and 9. After averaging two street robberies per month for three straight years, that average fell to one per month in 1986. Hot spots for larceny from motor vehicles and auto theft remain Sherman street and Walden Square. Commericial breaks increased in the 2200 to 2500 blocks of Mass avenue last year. Almost 8 percent of the serious crime in the city occurs in this neighborhood each year.

NEIGHBORHOOD 9
AVERAGE PER MONTH BY CRIME

YEAR:	81	82	83	84	85	86

Auto Theft	12	9	6	6	7	7
Larc from MV	3	6	4	5	6.5	7.5
Vandalism	16	21	11	10	10.5	8

Neighborhood 10 is bounded by the Charles River, JFK street, Garden street, Concord avenue, Fresh Pond, B&M Railroad and the Watertown/Cambridge line.

After experiencing major auto theft and commercial burglary patterns in 1985, both of these crimes declined dramatically in this neighborhood in 1986. There is a housebreak pattern active at this time. On weekend nights, a suspect riding a bike has hit on Ash, Parker and Craigie between the hours of 6 and 10 pm. Street robbery declined in the western half of Harvard Square in 1986. This neighborhood averages 7000 calls for service annually that produces 7 percent of the citywide serious crime.

Vandalism	6	8	6	7	7.5	7

Neighborhood 11 is bounded by the Somerville line and Porter Square, the Arlington/Belmont line, and the B&M railroad.

Slight increase in auto theft and larcenies from motor vehicles along Mass avenue near Porter Square in 1986. This neighborhood averages a consistent 90 to 100 housebreaks annually. The majority of the street robberies are in the vicinity of Rindge towers. This neighborhood averages 8000 calls for service a year that produce 9 percent of the citywide crime total.

NEIGHBORHOOD 11
AVERAGE PER MONTH BY CRIME

YEAR:	81	82	83	84	85	86

Vandalism	7	10	5	10	9	10.5

Neighborhood 12 is bounded by the B&M railroad, Blanchard road and Fresh Pond.

There is very little activity in this neighborhood other than occasional weekend commercial break patterns in area warehouses. The majority of auto theft and larceny from motor vehicles are from the Fresh Pond Mall on weekday afternoons. This neigborhood produces 2000 calls for service that account for 3 percent of the serious crime citywide. There were only five housebreaks here in 1986.

Vandalism	3	3	2	2	2

Neighborhood 13 is bounded by Fresh Pond the B&M Railroad Grove and Belmont streets.

There were only 18 housebreaks in Neighborhood 13 in 1986. The majority of larcenies from motor vehicles and vandalism centers around the Star Market parking lot on Mt Auburn. Only 1000 calls for service less than 2 percent of the citywide total, are received from here.

Schools food director is 'best in state'

Marilyn Tompkins, Cambridge Schools Director of Food Services, was elected "The Best Food Service Operator of the Year," by colleagues from throughout the state.

Tompkins was presented the award, the first of its kind, by Editor Paul Muldoon of "Yankee Food Service" magazine on April 27, during ceremonies held at the Bay Side Expo Center in Boston during the New England Food Service and Lodging Show and Exposition.

"Marilyn received overwhelming support on ballots received from our readership of 21,000," noted Muldoon. "She is a person whose concern and energy have had a great impact over the past several years on the food service industry."

"Ms. Tompkins' work in the Cambridge Schools is indicative of her efforts to improve school lunches for students and others served through institutional facilities," noted Mayor Walter Sullivan, chairman of the Cambridge School Committee.

Employed by the Cambridge Schools as a cafeteria worker in 1970, Tompkins earned increasing responsibilities in the food service department. She was promoted to the position of cook in 1973; in 1977 to supervisor of the satellite kitchen (a program that serves lunches to students throughout the city); and in 1978, the Director of Food Services, overseeing preparation and delivery of breakfast (1,000 a day) and lunch (4,200 a day) to the city's 14 schools.

In addition, she has mobilized school food services facilities during several local emergencies including feeding the elderly and snow workers during the blizzard of 1978 and the evacuees following the toxic gas explosion is Somerville.
