To the Honorable, the City Council:

I cannot conclude my final day of some 36 years in the service of the City of Cambridge without expressing to you, as representatives of all of this City's residents, my heartfelt appreciation once more for the opportunity that was given me to serve.

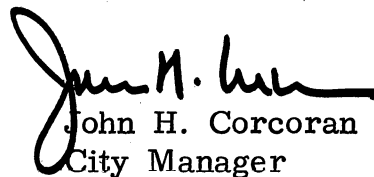

I have great concern for the future of Cambridge, yet I am confident that its future will be a bright one.

It can be if you, in the great responsibility that is entrusted to you, and the new City Manager, in the equally tremendous reliance that is being placed upon him, work in harmony, work in a purpose of direction toward that one all-important goal -- to make Cambridge a better place in which to do business and in which to live in peace, and in good health, and in contentment.

Despite periods of controversy and of community turmoil, not unlike those in other cities, there have been great accomplishments in Cambridge over the years. I believe, in all humility, that I have contributed in many ways to these.

There will be many more -- and I wish for each of you, and for Jim Sullivan, every success in your every-day effort to give Cambridge residents -- home-owners, businessmen and tenants alike -- the kind of City we all want. They deserve nothing less.

Very truly yours,

John H. Corcoran
City Manager
