Resolved SEC to Jerome & Phyllis

Working together through the Jerome Lyle Rappaport Charitable Foundation, Harvard and Suffolk universities are pleased to announce the creation of the Rappaport Institute for Greater Boston and the Rappaport Honors Program in Law and Public Service.

The Foundation's mission is to reward talented leadership and encourage creative solutions to intractable problems. To that end, it has partnered with the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University to create the Rappaport Institute for Greater Boston and with Suffolk University Law School to establish the Rappaport Honors Program in Law and Public Service.

Both universities will provide opportunities for outstanding graduate students to become part of the public policy process through a program of twenty-five internships and will co-sponsor enrichment activities for the participants. The Kennedy School's Rappaport Institute will undertake timely and incisive research that can make a direct impact on public policy and administration. Suffolk University Law School's Rappaport Honors Program will channel highly qualified and committed law students towards exciting opportunities in local and community public service as they work with distinguished individuals in government and non-profit organizations. Together, the two universities will spur a dynamic civic conversation for the Twenty-first Century.

Both Harvard and Suffolk universities celebrate the beginning of their new enterprises and the unprecedented collaboration brought about by the Jerome Lyle Rappaport Charitable Foundation between the universities and with the communities of which they are integral parts.
